

RECEIVED
Nov 15 2022
SC Court of Appeals

STATE OF SOUTH CAROLINA
IN THE COURT OF APPEALS

Certiorari to Greenwood County

Brian M. Gibbons, Circuit Court Judge

JAMES L. CARRIER,

RESPONDENT

V.

STATE OF SOUTH CAROLINA,

PETITIONER

APPELLATE CASE NO. 2019-001090

BRIEF OF RESPONDENT

SUSAN B. HACKETT
Appellate Defender

South Carolina Commission on Indigent Defense
Division of Appellate Defense
PO Box 11589
Columbia, SC 29211-1589
(803) 734-1330

ATTORNEY FOR RESPONDENT

TABLE OF CONTENTS

TABLE OF CONTENTS..... i

TABLE OF AUTHORITIES ii

ISSUE PRESENTED.....1

PETITIONER’S ISSUE PRESENTED1

STATEMENT.....2

STANDARD OF REVIEW6

ARGUMENT

The PCR court correctly determined (1) trial counsel performed deficiently by failing to present irrefutable and undisputed evidence in support of his motion to quash, which would have shown that the witness listed on the indictments never testified before the grand jury, and (2) that either (a) Respondent suffered prejudice as a result of counsel’s deficient performance because his motion to quash would have been granted or (b) prejudice was presumed due to the structural error resulting from the state’s abuse of the grand jury process.....7

Relevant facts.....7

Discussion.....14

CONCLUSION.....27

TABLE OF AUTHORITIES

Cases

Arizona v. Fulminante , 499 U.S. 279 (1991).....	28
Cherry v. State , 300 S.C. 115, 386 S.E.2d 624 (1989)	9
Commonwealth v. Cabral , 819 N.E.2d 951 (Mass. 2005).....	26
Commonwealth v. Silva , 918 N.E.2d 65 (Mass. 2009)	26
Evans v. State , 363 S.C. 495, 611 S.E.2d 510 (2005).....	19, 23
First Union Nat. Bank of South Carolina v. Soden , 333 S.C. 554, 511 S.E.2d 372 (Ct. App. 1998)	19
Johnson v. State , 325 S.C. 182, 480 S.E.2d 733 (1997)	17
Langley v. Boyter , 284 S.C. 162, 325 S.E.2d 550 (Ct. App. 1984).....	15
Lorenzen v. State , 376 S.C. 521, 657 S.E.2d 771 (2008)	18
Matter of Grand Jury Investigation , 152 N.E.3d 65 (Mass. 2020)	26
Nance v. Ozmint , 367 S.C. 547, 626 S.E.2d 878 (2004).....	18, 19
Nichols v. State , 308 S.C. 334, 417 S.E.2d 860 (1992).....	18
Sellner v. State , 416 S.C. 606, 787 S.E.2d 525 (2016)	9
Smalls v. State , 422 S.C. 174, 810 S.E.2d 836 (2018)	9, 18
State v. Batchelor , 377 S.C. 341, 661 S.E.2d 58 (2008).....	19, 20
State v. Capps , 276 S.C. 59, 275 S.E.2d 872 (1981)	24, 25
State v. Faile , 43 S.C. 52, 20 S.E. 798 (1895)	16
State v. Rector , 158 S.C. 212, 155 S.E. 385 (1930).....	17
State v. Shands , 424 S.C. 106, 817 S.E.2d 524 (Ct. App. 2018)	20
State v. Thompson , 305 S.C. 496, 409 S.E.2d 420 (Ct. App. 1991).....	20, 24
State v. Whitted , 279 S.C. 260, 305 S.E.2d 245 (1983)	26
Strickland v. Washington , 466 U.S. 668 (1984).....	17, 18
United States v. Cotton , 535 U.S. 625 (2002)	27

Weaver v. Massachusetts, 137 S.Ct. 1899 (2017) 18, 27, 28

Statutes

S.C. Code Ann. § 14-7-1550..... 15, 22

S.C. Code Ann. § 17-19-10..... 22

S.C. Const. Art. I, § 11..... 22, 25

S.C. Const. Art. I, § 22..... 22

U.S. Const. amend. VI 17

Rules

Rule 3(c), SCRCrimP..... 5

Rule 3, SCRCrimP 22

Rule 243(l), SCACR 8

Rule 3.8, RPC, Rule 407, SCACR..... 12

PETITIONER'S ISSUE PRESENTED

Did the post-conviction relief court err in finding Respondent met his requisite burden of proof?

- a. Did the post-conviction relief court err in finding Respondent was entitled to post-conviction relief due to Counsel's failure to call a witness during a motion to quash Respondent's indictment, when Respondent's indictment provided him with sufficient notice of his charges and was facially valid?
- b. Did the post-conviction relief court err as a matter of law in finding Respondent's alleged prejudice amounted to a structural error requiring a new trial?

RESPONDENT'S COUNTER QUESTION PRESENTED

Did the PCR court correctly determine (1) trial counsel performed deficiently by failing to present irrefutable and undisputed evidence in support of his motion to quash, which would have shown that the witness listed on the indictments never testified before the grand jury, and (2) that either (a) Respondent suffered prejudice as a result of counsel's deficient performance because his motion to quash would have been granted or (b) prejudice was presumed due to the structural error resulting from the state's abuse of the grand jury process?

STATEMENT

On May 11, 2009, Chris Haden, an investigator with the Greenwood County Sheriff's Department obtained a warrant for Respondent's arrest for lewd act upon a child. App. 407. Haden served the warrant on June 23, 2009. App. 407. In accordance with Rule 3(c), SCRCrimP, the Solicitor for Greenwood County prepared an indictment for presentment to the Greenwood County grand jury on October 2, 2009. App. 411; Supp. App. 10-11. According to the indictment, Haden actually appeared before the grand jury and provided sworn testimony to allow the grand jury to consider the state's allegations. Supp. App. 10. Ultimately, the grand jury issued a true-billed indictment against Respondent (2009-GS-24-1146) based upon the purported sworn testimony of Haden. App. 411; Supp. App. 10-11.

Years later, on June 8, 2012, the Greenwood County Solicitor's Office prepared a second indictment for presentment to the grand jury. App. 406; Supp. App. 13-14. Again, according to the indictment, Haden actually appeared before the grand jury and provided sworn testimony to allow the grand jury to consider the state's allegations. Supp. App. 13. Ultimately, the grand jury true-billed this indictment as well (2012-GS-24-116) based upon the purported sworn testimony of Haden. App. 406; Supp. App. 13-14.

Ten days later, on June 18-19, 2012, the state, represented by Elizabeth P. White and Andrew M. Hodges, called the case to trial on the second indictment before the Honorable D. Garrison Hill. App. 1. E. Charles Grose, Jr., represented Respondent. App. 1. At that time, trial counsel moved to quash the second indictment because he was "suspicious that the new indictment [was] not valid on its face because ... Haden [was] listed as the person who testified before the grand jury," but he was no longer employed by the Greenwood Sheriff's Office on the date of trial, just ten days after he allegedly testified before the grand jury. App. 54, ll. 1-12 (emphasis added).

At the conclusion of the pre-trial hearings, the parties agreed to continue the case. App. 218, ll. 10-22.

On July 17, 2012, the state, represented by Hodges and Matt Swilley, called the case to trial before Judge Hill. App. 221. Grose continued to represent Respondent. App. 221. Prior to the selection of the jury, trial counsel moved to quash the second indictment because “the witness listed on the [indictment as having] testified to the Grand Jury wasn’t in the State of South Carolina when the Grand Jury met.” App. 225, ll. 16-19. Defense counsel argued the indictment was “defective.” App. 225, ll. 19-20. Counsel argued “[f]or there to be any meaning to the constitutional provision of our State that entitles [Respondent] to have his case presented to the Grand Jury, the presentment has to have some sort of meaning.” App. 228, ll. 26.

In response and apparently unaware of the statutory scheme governing grand juries, the state asked if there were “case law that says that the person who testifies in front of the Grand Jury has to be listed on the indictment?” App. 226, ll. 13-15. The attorneys representing the state claimed to “know that there [was] even a requirement,” and further claimed to be “not aware of any law that says it has to say that.” App. 231, ll. 16-19. Cryptically, the state argued that “[s]omebody had to present testimony that convinced the Grand Jury that there was probable cause in this case.” App. 231, ll. 1-5. Thus, the state concluded, the indictment was not “deficient.” App. 231, ll. 4-5.

After hearing from the state and trial counsel on the motion to quash, Judge Hill ruled as follows:

I share with you your concerns about the current status of the Grand Jury practice in our State. However, I don’t know any authority that would require me to quash the indictment based on the identity of the witness. The indictment itself sets forth the allegations for listing a witness on the form, on the back of the indictment. If that is inaccurate, without any further showing would not be sufficient to render the indictment defective.

App. 231, l. 22 – App. 232, l. 13 (emphasis added). Thus, Judge Hill denied the motion to quash the indictment. App. 232, l. 13.

After initially indicating it could not reach a unanimous decision, the jury ultimately convicted Respondent of lewd act upon a child. App. 386, ll. 19-21; App. 389, l. 21 – App. 390, l. 2. Judge Hill sentenced Respondent to fifteen years imprisonment. App. 402, ll. 1-6.

Respondent filed a timely notice of appeal, and was represented by Kathrine Hudgins on appeal. App. 412-443. One of the issues raised concerned the trial court's failure to quash the second indictment as defective because the state failed to establish the identity of the witness testifying before the grand jury. App. 412-443. In its responsive brief, the state argued the indictment contained no facial irregularities and that Respondent, who bore the burden of proof, failed to present any evidence of actual abuse of the grand jury proceedings. App. 444-486.

On October 22, 2014, the Supreme Court affirmed Respondent's conviction and sentence in an unpublished opinion. State v. Carrier, 2014-MO-043 (S.C. Sup. Ct. filed Oct. 22, 2014); App. 503-504. The Court explained that the grand jury proceedings are presumed to be regular unless the defendant presents clear evidence to the contrary. App. 504. Further, the Court noted that "argument of counsel is not evidence and, standing alone, provides no support for a finding of fact." App. 504. Remittitur was sent on November 7, 2014.

Subsequently, Respondent filed an application for post-conviction relief (PCR). App. 507-513. After counsel was appointed, Respondent amended his application to include a claim that "trial counsel was ineffective for failing to call a witness or witnesses who would establish that indictment number 2012-GS-24-1166 (hereinafter "2012 indictment") was defective on its face because the witness listed on the indictment was not present for presentment to the Grand Jury." App. 521-522. The matter proceeded to a hearing before the Honorable Brian M. Gibbons on February 26, 2019. App. 523. Laura M. Saunders represented Respondent, and Janell H. Gregory represented the state. App. 523. At the conclusion of the hearing, the PCR judge indicated he was granting relief to Respondent. App. 578, l. 16 – App. 579, l. 14. By an order signed on May 6, 2019, the PCR judge formally granted Respondent relief from his conviction and sentence. App. 581-596. The state filed a motion to alter or amend, which was denied by the judge in a written order on May 28, 2019. App. 599-611

The state served its notice of appeal on July 5, 2019. Thereafter, the state filed a petition for writ of certiorari challenging the PCR judge’s findings of fact and conclusions of law regarding the prejudice prong of the analysis for reviewing ineffective assistance of counsel claims. Respondent filed his return on May 12, 2020. The Supreme Court transferred the case to this Court pursuant to Rule 243(l), SCACR on May 27, 2020. This Court granted the state’s petition for writ of certiorari on August 18, 2022. On October 18, 2022, the state filed its brief of petitioner. Respondent now files his brief.

STANDARD OF REVIEW

The standard of review in post-conviction relief (PCR) cases depends on the specific issue raised on appeal. Smalls v. State, 422 S.C. 174, 180-181, 810 S.E.2d 836, 839–40 (2018). The reviewing court must defer to a PCR court’s findings of fact and will uphold them if there is evidence in the record to support them. Id. (citing Sellner v. State, 416 S.C. 606, 610, 787 S.E.2d 525, 527 (2016)). Put more precisely, “[t]he appropriate scope of review” on appeal in PCR proceedings is whether “any evidence of probative value is sufficient to uphold the PCR judge’s findings.” Cherry v. State, 300 S.C. 115, 119, 386 S.E.2d 624, 626 (1989). However, the appellate court reviews questions of law de novo, with no deference to the PCR court. Smalls, 422 S.C. at 180-181, 810 S.E.2d at 839–40 (2018).¹

¹ In its petition for writ of certiorari and its brief of petitioner, the state includes within the standard of review sections of those documents the burden of proof and the elements of a post-conviction relief action. This is error. The standard of review “is the lens through which an appellate court will review the lower court decision.” Jean Hoefler Toal, et al., Appellate Practice in South Carolina 221 (3rd ed. 2016). “[T]he standard of review refers to the level of deference an appellate court will confer upon a decision of the lower court or administrative tribunal.” Id.

ARGUMENT

The PCR court correctly determined (1) trial counsel performed deficiently by failing to present irrefutable and undisputed evidence in support of his motion to quash, which would have shown that the witness listed on the indictments never testified before the grand jury, and (2) that either (a) Respondent suffered prejudice as a result of counsel's deficient performance because his motion to quash would have been granted or (b) prejudice was presumed due to the structural error resulting from the state's abuse of the grand jury process.

Relevant facts

As previously mentioned, Respondent challenged on appeal the trial judge's refusal to quash the second indictment because the state failed to establish the identity of the witness who testified before the grand jury. App. 412-443. In response, the state argued that Respondent was not entitled to relief because trial counsel "repeatedly alleged Sheriff's Investigator Haden was not physically in the state and therefore could not have been a witness when the case was presented to the grand jury; however, [Respondent] offered no evidence in support of his allegation." App. 460. According to the state, Respondent's argument "actually amount[ed] to a claim of an irregularity in the proceedings by which the indictment was procured, which turn[ed] on his unsupported assertion that Chris Hagen did not appear." App. 463-464 (emphasis added). The state argued Respondent "did not present any actual evidence in support of his motion to quash," and therefore, the trial court properly concluded Respondent failed to meet his burden. App. 464. The state explained that "actual abuse" of the grand jury process "would require either: (1) evidence rather than speculation that Haden was not present, or (2) consent, an admission, or some other acknowledgment from the state that Haden did not appear as a witness before the grand jury." App. 464. Although the state acknowledged that the solicitor "neither admitted nor denied" trial counsel's claim that Haden did not testify before the grand jury, the state maintained on appeal that Respondent failed to prove Haden did not testify. See App. 460. During the PCR process, the state showed that it was well aware that Haden did not testify before the grand jury; yet, the state maintained on appeal that there was no evidence to support this contention.

During the oral argument regarding the direct appeal, former Chief Justice Toal stated that whether Haden was present and testified before the grand jury went to whether the indictment was proper. State v. James Carrier, 2014-MO-043 (S.C. Sup. Ct. filed Oct. 22, 2014) (oral argument held on Sept. 25, 2014 at 3:15) (“all that goes to whether the indictment was proper”).² Justice Kittredge requested that appellate counsel provide the Court with evidence of the irregularity. Id. at 1:19. Justice Kittredge expressed his dissatisfaction with considering trial counsel's assertion that Haden had not testified as evidence, and he refused to accept appellate counsel's argument that the state's failure to deny the assertion was acquiescence. Id. at 1:35.

Former Chief Justice Toal also noted that the motion regarding the indictment at trial occurred during a separate proceeding and that there was nothing that prevented trial counsel from presenting some witness who could have verified Haden's lack of presence. Id. at 10:32. She explained that had trial counsel presented actual evidence to support his contention, then the appellate court would have had the benefit of the state proving who testified before the grand jury. Id. at 10:52. Former Chief Justice Toal indicated it was obvious that someone testified before the grand jury, but the question presented was who did so. Id. at 10:56. She opined that Haden's name on the second indictment was merely a scrivener's error such that Haden's name appeared on the first indictment, presumably properly to the former Chief Justice, and the second indictment was simply not changed to reflect the proper witness. Id. at 11:00. Thereafter, the former Chief Justice explained that trial counsel, who was “as experienced as they make them,” and he knew well how to have a separate proceeding to put actual evidence up to challenge the regularity of a charging document. Id. at 11:18.

² The video from the oral argument may be found in the archives on the South Carolina Judicial Branch's website. <https://media.sccourts.org/videos/2012-212777.mp4>.

Continuing the argument it began in its brief and capitalizing on the questions from the Court to Respondent’s counsel on appeal, the state argued during the direct appeal that trial counsel failed to present a witness to support the “allegation or speculation” that Haden did not testify before the grand jury. Id. at 19:17. The state’s lawyer noted that trial counsel actually called a solicitor as a witness during a different portion of the trial on an unrelated issue, which showed trial counsel was experienced and capable of calling a solicitor as a witness. Id. at 19:30. The state’s lawyer even chided trial counsel for failing to object when the judge refused to hear from a bailiff who was attempting to inform the trial judge of how the grand jury process worked. Id. at 19:57. Repeatedly, the state faulted trial counsel for never putting up any witnesses or presenting any evidence to “substantiate the claim” that Haden did not testify before the grand jury. Id. at 20:15.

Despite the state’s argument on appeal that there was no evidence presented that Haden was not present during the grand jury proceeding, during the PCR hearing, the state stipulated that Haden was not employed with the Greenwood County Sheriff’s Department at the time the 2012 indictment was presented to the grand jury. App. 533, ll. 7-15.³ In fact, Haden’s employment file showed Haden was hired on January 17, 2006, put in his two weeks' notice on September 10, 2009, and was last employed by Greenwood County on September 24, 2009. App. 536, l. 10-23; Supp. App. 3-8. Haden informed the PCR judge that not only did he not testify before the grand jury on June 8, 2012, regarding Respondent's case, but that he never testified in front of the grand jury during the entirety of his tenure with the Greenwood County Sheriff's Department. App. 545, ll. 14-17; App. 545, l. 25 – App. 546, l. 2.

³ The state’s arguments at trial and on appeal regarding the lack of evidence that Haden did not testify before the grand jury when the state was well aware that he did not are difficult to square with the state’s duty to act as a minister of justice. See Rule 3.4 cmt. 1, RPC, Rule 407, SCACR (providing that “[a] prosecutor has the responsibility of a minister of justice and not simply that of an advocate. This responsibility carries with it specific obligations to see that the defendant is accorded procedural justice”).

Upon questioning by the Attorney General, Haden speculated that if the indictment bearing his name had been quashed, then Respondent "would have most likely been reindicted." App. 547, ll. 1-9.

Trial counsel did not "have a good answer" as to why he did not obtain "any employment records or subpoena any witnesses" to testify that Haden was not employed by Greenwood County at the time the grand jury considered the indictment. App. 551, ll. 18-21. Trial counsel was "surprised that was even a contested issue" on appeal because he believed the solicitor's office informed him that Haden was no longer a Greenwood County employee. App. 551, ll. 18-24.

Despite having at least one month to obtain records and prepare to present evidence to support his contention that Haden could not have testified before the grand jury, trial counsel failed to do so. App. 551, l. 25 – App. 552, l. 15. Trial counsel admitted he should have obtained some evidence to support his motion. App. 552, ll. 16-22. He had no doubt that the presentation of evidence showing Haden was not a witness before the grand jury would have affected the trial judge's decision on the motion to quash the indictment. App. 552, l. 23 – App. 553, l. 1. Trial counsel noted that during the oral argument on direct appeal, the Supreme Court was critical of his failure to create a record, and the ultimate decision on appeal showed the Court affirmed due to an inadequate record. App. 553, ll. 2-6.

Assistant Solicitor Elizabeth Phillips Taylor explained that “the way indictments were handled back then is based on the arrest date a list was generated. Someone in the office prepared all of the indictments - - a paralegal - - and they were submitted.” App. 568, ll. 6-9. She claimed the prosecutors “rarely knew when [their] cases were going to indictment.” App. 568, ll. 9-10. She explained it was “frequently the case that the witness on the indictment [was] not the witness for the grand jury.” App. 568, l. 22 – App. 569, l. 1 (emphasis added). Further, the solicitor alleged other criminal defense attorneys had challenged the validity of the indictments based upon the witness identified on the indictment not being the witness who testified before the grand jury, but that no trial judge had ever granted a motion quash on that basis. App. 569, ll. 2.-9. Without the slightest hesitation, the solicitor indicated that if defense counsel had been successful in quashing the indictments, then she “would have obtained another indictment.” App. 570, ll. 5-8 (emphasis added). Notably, she did not indicate she would have sought another indictment. Further, she had “no reason to believe” that the outcome of Respondent’s trial would have been altered by the presentation of evidence that Haden had not testified before the grand jury because she would have obtained another indictment. App. 570, ll. 9-14.

At the conclusion of the PCR hearing, Respondent argued trial counsel performed deficiently by failing to obtain the evidence necessary to prove his contention that Haden never testified before the grand jury despite his name appearing as the witness on the indictment. App. 571, l. 12 – App. 572, l. 13. Additionally, Respondent argued he was not required to prove prejudice because the error committed by the state – abusing the grand jury process – was structural error. App. 574, ll. 4-7.

The state argued Respondent failed to demonstrate prejudice because the indictment provided him with notice of the charge against him and that was all that was required. App. 577, ll. 3-23. Additionally, the state argued there was no prejudice because “if [defense counsel] had provided that information and had gotten these indictments quashed, as [the solicitor] testified, she would have had this presented before the grand jury again.” App. 578, ll. 1-3. The state speculated that the grand jury “would be able to find probable cause in this case and provide another indictment.” App. 578, ll. 4-8. Then, the state claimed it was “[o]bviously” “a scrivener’s error and that would have changed.” App. 578, ll. 8-10.

The PCR judge found trial counsel failed to present or elicit the proper evidence during Respondent’s trial in order to quash the indictment for its failure to list the witness who actually testified before the grand jury and for its inclusion of a witness’s name who did not testify. App. 586. “Trial counsel admitted that he did not present the evidence necessary to prove his argument, and he admitted that this evidence was readily available and would have also proved Haden was not employed or present before the Grand Jury when either the original or direct-indictment were presented.” App. 586. After making these findings of fact, the PCR judge concluded trial counsel performed deficiently based on an objective standard of reasonableness. App. 587.

Next, the PCR judge found there was “a reasonable probability that both indictments would have been quashed based upon the facial irregularity on both documents” and the statutory requirement that the names of the witnesses who appear before the grand jury appear on the indictment. App. 588 (citing S.C. Code Ann. § 14-7-1550). Regarding the state’s claim that the solicitor would have simply obtained another indictment and that none of its indictments listed the witness who appeared before the grand jury, the PCR judge explained that “[c]ourts should not ‘perpetuate injustice resulting from the application of a doctrine in need of reevaluation, no matter how long or often it has been applied.’” App. 589 (quoting Langley v. Boyter, 284 S.C. 162, 180-181, 325 S.E.2d 550, 561 (Ct. App. 1984)).

In the alternative, the PCR judge concluded that Respondent was not required to show prejudice because the error was structural. App. 591-596. The judge explained that allegedly “someone presented testimony to the grand jury” on two separate occasions “in order to indict [Respondent].” App. 592. “The identity of that person or persons has now been proven to be unknown.” App. 592. Yet, South Carolina statutory law requires the indictment to list the name of the person who testified before the grand jury. App. 592. Further, federal and state constitutional law require an indictment prior to prosecution. App. 592-593. The PCR judge found the indictments contained “patently false” information in that both listed Haden as the witness before the grand jury. App. 593. Further, the judge found “[t]he secretive nature surrounding grand jury procedures in our State, coupled with the false information in the indictments, make it highly unlikely that [Respondent] could have received effective assistance of counsel.” App. 593. Thus, the judge concluded “a structural error occurred during the indictment phase of [Respondent]’s trial and therefore prejudice must be presumed.” App. 593.

The PCR judge rejected the state’s argument that the listing of Haden’s name was a mere scrivener’s error. App. 593. The judge explained the state’s argument “ignore[d] testimony from the state’s own witness, Taylor, that it was not a ‘scrivener’s error’ that led to this statutorily deficient indictment, rather it was the custom/practice of grand jury presentiments in the circuit.” App. 593. Additionally, the judge found the state’s argument “ignore[d] the fundamental constitutional right affected by this deficient grand jury process.” App. 594. The PCR court explained that “[w]hen an indictment is presented, the accused ‘may question the propriety of the accusation, the manner in which it has been presented, the source from which it proceeds, and have these matters promptly and properly determined.’” App. 594 (quoting State v. Faile, 43 S.C. 52, 52, 20 S.E. 798, 801 (1895)). The right to a legal grand jury is one of the “protections which are thrown around the prisoner by law” and ““must be held inviolate.”” App. 594 (quoting State v. Rector, 158 S.C. 212, 230, 155 S.E. 385, 392 (1930)).

The PCR judge found that “[i]n cases involving a county grand jury in South Carolina, the indictment represents the only record by which a defendant can seek to assert his constitutional right to a legal grand jury process.” App. 595. “Given the importance of the right and the heavy burden imposed on challenges to the process, fundamental fairness dictates that we ensure what limited information we make available to defendants at least be accurate.” App. 595. Thus, the PCR court concluded, “[t]he error in both of the indictments coupled with the clear evidence that the witness did not testify before the grand jury on either occasion constitute[d] a fundamental and structural error.” App. 595. “The errors denied [Respondent] a fundamental right protected under both the United States Constitution and the Constitution of the State of South Carolina.” App. 595.

Discussion

The Sixth Amendment to the United States Constitution guarantees criminal defendants the right to the effective assistance of counsel. U.S. Const. amend. VI. To prove ineffective assistance of counsel, Petitioner must establish that counsel’s representation fell below an objective standard of reasonableness, and that counsel’s deficient performance prejudiced his defense. Strickland v. Washington, 466 U.S. 668 (1984); Johnson v. State, 325 S.C. 182, 480 S.E.2d 733 (1997). “The benchmark for judging any claim of ineffectiveness must be whether counsel’s conduct so undermined the proper functioning of the adversarial process that the trial cannot be relied on as having produced a just result.” Strickland, 466 U.S. at 686.

To prove ineffective assistance of counsel, “the defendant must show that counsel’s performance was deficient” and “that the deficient performance prejudiced the defense.” Id.

“When a convicted defendant complains of the ineffectiveness of counsel’s assistance, the defendant must show that counsel’s representation fell below an objective standard of reasonableness.” Id. at 687-688. “[T]he performance inquiry must be whether counsel’s assistance was reasonable considering all the circumstances.” Id. at 688.

Concerning prejudice, “a defendant need not show that counsel’s deficient conduct more likely than not altered the outcome in the case.” Rather, “[t]he defendant must show that there is a reasonable probability that, but for counsel’s unprofessional errors, the result of the proceeding would have been different. A reasonable probability is a probability sufficient to undermine confidence in the outcome.” Id. at 694; see also Nichols v. State, 308 S.C. 334, 337, 417 S.E.2d 860, 862 (1992) (applying the Strickland framework to an ineffective assistance of counsel claim in the context of a probation revocation hearing).

However, “in certain limited circumstances ‘prejudice is presumed’ because prejudice ‘is so likely that case-by-case inquiry ... is not worth the cost.’” Lorenzen v. State, 376 S.C. 521, 529, 657 S.E.2d 771, 776 (2008) (quoting Nance v. Ozmint, 367 S.C. 547, 551, 626 S.E.2d 878, 880 (2004)) overruled on other grounds by Smalls v. State, 422 S.C. 174, 810 S.E.2d 836 (2018).⁴ “[P]rejudice is presumed when the defendant is completely denied counsel at a critical stage of his trial.” Nance, 367 S.C. at 552, 626 S.E.2d at 880 (internal quotation omitted). Additionally, “per-se prejudice occurs if there has been a constructive denial of counsel,” which “happens when a lawyer entirely fails to subject the prosecution’s case to meaningful adversarial testing, thus making the adversary process itself presumptively unreliable.” Id. (internal quotation omitted). Further, “instances when although counsel is available to assist the accused during trial, the likelihood that any lawyer, even a fully competent one, could provide effective assistance is so small that a presumption of prejudice is appropriate without inquiry into the actual conduct of trial.” Id. (internal quotation omitted).

⁴ The United States Supreme Court held that “the reasons an error is deemed structural may influence the proper standard used to evaluate an ineffective-assistance claim premised on the failure to object to that error.” Weaver v. Massachusetts, 137 S.Ct. 1899, 1907 (2017). Without deciding if the ultimate test was whether the attorney’s errors rendered the trial fundamentally unfair, the Court held that because “not every public-trial violation will in fact lead to a fundamentally unfair trial,” prejudice was not shown automatically. Id. at 1911. However, the Court limited its decision to “the context of trial counsel’s failure to object to the closure of the courtroom during jury selection.” Id. at 1907.

Deficient performance

As an initial matter, the state failed to raise any concerns regarding the PCR judge’s findings of fact or conclusions of law governing the deficient performance prong of the Strickland test in its petition for writ of certiorari or in its brief of petitioner. Instead, the entirety of the state’s petition for writ of certiorari and its brief of petitioner focused on the PCR judge’s findings of fact and conclusions of law regarding prejudice. Therefore, whether trial counsel performed deficiently is not before this Court. See First Union Nat. Bank of South Carolina v. Soden, 333 S.C. 554, 566, 511 S.E.2d 372, 378 (Ct. App. 1998) (explaining that “[i]t is a fundamental rule of law that an appellate court will affirm a ruling by a lower court if the offended party does not challenge that ruling” and that “[f]ailure to challenge the ruling is an abandonment of the issue and precludes consideration on appeal” because “[t]he unchallenged ruling, right or wrong, is the law of the case and requires affirmance”).

Despite the state’s decision not to challenge the PCR judge’s ruling that trial counsel performed deficiently by failing to present evidence of abuse of the grand jury proceedings, Respondent will address the matter briefly.

“The regularity of grand jury proceedings is presumed absent clear evidence to the contrary.” State v. Batchelor, 377 S.C. 341, 344, 661 S.E.2d 58, 59 (2008); Evans v. State, 363

S.C. 495, 514, 611 S.E.2d 510, 520 (2005). “[T]he burden is on the defendant to prove facts upon which a challenge to the legality of the grand jury proceedings is predicated.” Batchelor, 377 S.C. at 344, 661 S.E.2d at 59. “Speculation about ‘potential’ abuse of grand jury proceedings cannot substitute for evidence of actual abuse as grounds for quashing an otherwise lawful indictment.” State v. Thompson, 305 S.C. 496, 502, 409 S.E.2d 420, 424 (Ct. App. 1991) (emphasis in original).

This Court recently affirmed a trial court’s denial of a motion to quash based upon the defendant’s failure to “present clear evidence that there was an abuse of the grand jury proceedings in his case.” State v. Shands, 424 S.C. 106, 119, 817 S.E.2d 524, 531 (Ct. App. 2018). Shands moved to quash the indictments against him because “the officer who testified at his grand jury hearing was not listed on his indictments and had no personal knowledge of his case.” Id. In that case, the state explained that the solicitor’s office would notify the individual law enforcement agencies when the grand jury would convene and the agencies would send a representative to present all indictments from that individual agency. Id. at 120, 817 S.E.2d at 531. The state was unable to say whether either of the two officers listed on Shands’s indictments testified in front of the grand jury because it did not have a record of who testified. Id. This Court held it was “unable to say there was a violation in Shands’s case from the record presented.” Id. “Without any clear evidence, Shands’s argument that there was a grand jury abuse in this case is pure speculation.” Id.

As previously discussed, during the direct appeal process, the state argued Respondent failed to present “evidentiary support” for his claim that Haden did not testify before the grand jury even though his name appeared on the indictments. App. 444-486. Specifically, the state argued Respondent’s “argument actually amount[ed] to a claim of an irregularity in the proceedings by which the indictment was procured, which turn[ed] on his unsupported assertion that Haden did not appear. App. 463-464 (emphasis added). It was the state’s contention that Respondent “did not present any actual evidence in support of his motion to quash” although the state was well aware that Haden had not testified before the grand jury App. 464.

According to the state, “actual abuse would require either: (1) evidence rather than speculation that Haden was not present, or (2) consent, an admission, or some other acknowledgement from the state that Haden did not appear as a witness before the grand jury.” App. 464.⁵

At the PCR hearing, Respondent presented irrefutable evidence that Haden did not testify before the grand jury – ever. Further, the state conceded that Haden did not testify before the grand jury. Thus, Respondent satisfied both hurdles identified by the state in order to show actual abuse of the grand jury process.

Additionally, the Supreme Court affirmed the trial judge’s denial of Respondent’s motion to quash based upon trial counsel’s failure to present evidence supporting his contention that Haden was not the person who testified before the grand jury. App. 503-504. The opinion makes clear the Supreme Court affirmed because the motion was “unsupported by evidence” and counsel’s argument was not evidence and could not support a finding of fact. App. 503-504. Furthermore, during the oral argument, the Supreme Court questioned appellate counsel on the failure of trial counsel to “put[] up some witness that could have verified Mr. Haden’s presence or lack of presence.” App. 590.

⁵ Now that Respondent satisfied what the state posited in direct appeal was necessary to establish abuse of the grand jury process, the state changed its argument as to what constitutes abuse of the grand jury process. Cf. App. 464 with BOP at 9. The state maintains now that Respondent failed to show any actual abuse of the grand jury proceeding because he “has only been able to show the witness named on the indictment was not the witness who presented before the grand jury” and “has failed to show that the witness who did present to the grand jury was unknowledgeable about the facts of the case or in any way incapable of presenting the grand jury with the necessary information for making its probable cause determination. BOP at 9.

As the PCR judge found, “[i]t is now undisputed that Haden did not testify before the grand jury for both the 2009 and 2012 presents, and this evidence was available to trial counsel at the time of trial.” App. 590. Trial counsel performed deficiently by failing to present this readily available evidence to support his motion to quash. Again, the state appears to concede this point by failing to argue in its brief that the PCR judge erred by finding trial counsel performed deficiently.

Prejudice

“No person may be held to answer for any crime the jurisdiction over which is not within the magistrate’s court, unless on a presentment or indictment of a grand jury of the county where the crime has been committed.” S.C. Const. Art. I, § 11. “No person shall be held to answer in any court for an alleged crime or offense, unless upon indictment by a grand jury.” S.C. Code Ann. § 17-19-10.

Thus, “[w]ithin ninety (90) days after receipt of an arrest warrant from the Clerk of Court, the solicitor shall take action on the warrant by (1) preparing an indictment for presentment to the grand jury, which indictment shall be filed with the Clerk of Court, assigned a criminal case number, and presented to the Grand Jury.” Rule 3, SCRCrimP. “The foreman of the grand jury or acting foreman in the circuit courts of any county of the State may swear the witnesses whose names shall appear on the bill of indictment in the grand jury room.” S.C. Code Ann. § 14-7-1550 (emphasis added). “The grand jury of each county ... shall consist of eighteen members, twelve of whom must agree in a matter before it can be submitted to the Court.” S.C. Const. Art. I, § 22.

In short, the solicitor prepares an indictment to be presented to the grand jury, which hears sworn testimony from a witness about the facts and circumstances forming the basis of the indictment. The indictment must bear the name of the witness who testified before the grand jury, and at least twelve of the jurors must find probable cause that the defendant committed the crime in order to true-bill the indictment.

“A defendant has a constitutional right to demand that a grand jury which is properly established and constituted under law consider the criminal allegations against him.” Evans v. State, 363 S.C. 495, 509, 611 S.E.2d 510, 518 (2005).

[O]ne who demands and is refused the right to be tried for crime charged against him only upon an indictment presented by a legal grand jury, in instances where such indictment is required, may thereafter justly take the position that he has been deprived of life, liberty or property without due process of law in violation of the state constitution.

Id. (internal quotation omitted).

Had trial counsel presented evidence that Haden did not testify before the grand jury at any time, then there is a reasonable probability that the outcome of Respondent’s trial would have been different. The state admitted in its brief during the direct appeal that actual abuse of the grand jury process occurred when the witness whose name appeared on the indictments was not the witness who actually appeared. App. 464. The state would have been unable to proceed on the useless piece of paper it represented was an indictment. As such, the trial judge would have been required to quash the indictments; thus, there is a reasonable probability that the outcome of Respondent’s trial would have been different.

The state asks this Court to reverse the PCR judge’s prejudice finding because the state simply would have obtained another indictment and prosecuted Respondent with the new indictment. The state expressed no modesty or hesitancy in its certainty that it would have obtained another indictment. Reduced to its essence, the state asks this Court to abolish the grand jury system in South Carolina. Following the state's logic, no error in the grand jury process, including the presentation of false and misleading information to the court and petit jury would suffice to reverse a conviction because the state would always be able to get another indictment from the grand jury. Respondent respectfully requests this Court disabuse the state of its arrogant tyrannical viewpoint.

It is the duty of this Court to give the constitutional provision prohibiting the criminal trial of an individual except upon presentment of an indictment to a grand jury meaning. State v. Capps, 276 S.C. 59, 64, 275 S.E.2d 872, 874 (1981) (Lewis, J., dissenting). "The courts of South Carolina stand guard to see that the grand jury is not reduced to a mere plaything of prosecutors." State v. Thompson, 305 S.C. 496, 502, 409 S.E.2d 420, 424 (Ct. App. 1991) (internal quotation omitted). The appellate courts must act with "zeal to insure that the grand jury continues to perform its historic function as a shield between the accused and the abuse of the prosecutorial power of the state." Id.

Chief Justice Lewis described when the grand jury becomes a mere plaything of prosecutors. Analyzing the issuance of indictments based solely on hearsay evidence, Chief Justice Lewis, the author of the opinion which permitted the use of hearsay for a grand jury indictment, later explained it was never the intention of this Court "to create a limitless haven for its routine use." State v. Capps, 276 S.C. 59, 67-68, 275 S.E.2d 872, 876 (1981) (Lewis, J., dissenting). "The deliberate use of hearsay testimony alone to obtain indictments is a questionable practice which seriously erodes the function of the grand jury." Id. at 68, 275 S.E.2d at 876. "It can be used to subject a defendant to the expense of a public trial solely on the basis of evidence which is generally inadmissible in a trial." Id.

“In order to provide more than lip service to the constitutional provision,” Chief Justice Lewis explained that “an indictment cannot, as a matter of course, be acquired solely on oral hearsay testimony.” Id. Put bluntly, he explained “[t]he routine practice of one individual appearing before the proceeding to give his ‘third hand’ capsule version of facts which he has no direct knowledge without some other competent evidence, is insufficient.” Id. “The drafters of Article I, § 11 as well as those citizens who voted for its implementation clearly intended the rights to a grand jury indictment to be meaningful because they incorporated it into such a solemn document, our State Constitution.” Id.

Likewise, this Court must affirm the PCR court’s findings of fact and conclusions of law that Respondent either proved prejudice because his motion to quash would have been granted or that prejudice is presumed in order to provide meaning to the constitutional provisions and statutory scheme governing the grand jury process. To do anything less would allow the grand jury to become the prosecutor’s “plaything” as it would be a sword for the prosecution instead of the shield between citizens and the government. During the trial, the direct appeal, the PCR hearing, and now the PCR appeal, the state has expressed repeatedly its view that the grand jury is nothing more than the prosecutor’s plaything.

In fact, the state now argues that in order to obtain relief, Respondent must “show the testifying witness was an improper witness.” BOP at 6. According to the state, Respondent is not entitled to relief because he “failed to show that the witness that did testify was not a proper witness with knowledge of Respondent’s case.” BOP at 6-7. The state requests this Court place an impossible burden upon Respondent – and all criminal defendants – in order to receive the constitutional guarantee to which all are entitled. It is impossible for Respondent to show the testifying witness before the grand jury was an improper witness because no one knows who testified before the grand jury. In fact, the solicitor in this case testified that it was, and is, “frequently the case that the witness on the indictment is not the witness for the grand jury.” App. 568, l. 25 – App. 569, l. 1. The county grand jury system is one conducted in secret. State v. Whitted, 279 S.C. 260, 262, 305 S.E.2d 245, 246 (1983) (explaining that “[i]nvestigations and deliberations of a grand jury are conducted in secret and are, as a rule, legally sealed against divulgence”), overruled on other grounds by State v. Collins, 329 S.C. 23, 495 S.E.2d 202 (1998). There is simply no way for Respondent – or any criminal defendant – to know who testified before the grand jury. This is the reason the indictment must list the name of the witness.

Furthermore, the state requests another impossible burden in order for Respondent to show prejudice. The state argued that Respondent failed to show prejudice because “he failed to show that the state would not have been able to obtain a valid indictment against him for the charged offense.” BOP at 7. Similarly, while conceding that Respondent proved “an irregularity in Respondent’s indictment,” the state argued that Respondent failed to show prejudice because he “failed to show how that irregularity impacted the grand jury’s decision to issue the indictment in Respondent’s case.” BOP at 8.⁶ Again, these are impossibilities due to the secrecy of the grand jury proceedings.⁷

⁶ Later, the state tried to hide from this concession of irregularity. The state argued that “[a]lthough the incorrect witness was listed on the indictment, the indictment was issued with all of the indications of a regular proceeding.” BOP at 11. The state called the listing of Haden as the witness on the indictment a “technical error.” BOP at 11. This flip-flopping and backtracking shows the state’s view of the grand jury as a prosecutor’s plaything.

⁷ Petitioner’s citation to Commonwealth v. Silva, 918 N.E.2d 65 (Mass. 2009) to support its arguments regarding what Respondent is required to show is misplaced. See BOP at 8. Although the grand jury proceedings in Massachusetts are conducted in secret, Massachusetts permits greater inquiry into those proceedings than allowed in South Carolina. See generally, Commonwealth v. Cabral, 819 N.E.2d 951, 954 n.4 (Mass. 2005) (explaining that although the proceedings are secret, the appellate court may summarize pertinent facts contained in the grand jury minutes); Matter of

The state's citation to United States v. Cotton, 535 U.S. 625 (2002) to support its contention that the error presented in Respondent's case is not part of the limited class of cases involving structural errors is misleading at best. See BOP at 10. The United States Supreme Court addressed whether the omission from a federal indictment of a fact that enhances the statutory maximum sentence deprived the court of jurisdiction to enhance a sentence where the defendant did not object to the imposition of the sentence at trial based upon the defect in the indictment. United States v. Cotton, 535 U.S. 625, 627 (2002). Applying the plain error test, which requires error that is plain and that affects substantial rights, the Court held that despite the government's concession that there was error that was plain, the Court need not determine whether the error affected the defendant's substantial rights. Id. at 631-632. According to the Court, "even assuming respondents' substantial rights were affected, the error did not seriously affect the fairness, integrity, or public reputation of judicial proceedings" because the evidence of the enhancement was overwhelming and uncontroverted. Id. at 632-633. Thus, contrary to the state's assertion that "the United States Supreme Court found an error in an indictment did not fall within the 'limited class' of structural errors," the Court actually held that resolution of whether the defendant satisfied the third element of the plain error doctrine – affecting a substantial right – was unnecessary for resolution of the case. See BOP at 10.

No one would question that the grand jury system is a "basic, constitutional guarantee that should define the framework of any criminal trial." See Weaver v. Massachusetts, 137 S.Ct. 1899, 1907-1908 (2017). "[T]he defining feature of a structural error is that it affect[s] the framework within which the trial proceeds, rather than being simply an error in the trial process itself." Id.

Grand Jury Investigation, 152 N.E.3d 65, 80-81 (Mass. 2020) (discussing the consequences of grand jury secrecy on a prosecutor's obligation to disclose exculpatory information).

“A structural error ‘def[ies] analysis by harmless error standards.’” Id. at 1907-1908 (quoting Arizona v. Fulminante, 499 U.S. 279, 309 (1991)).

According to the Supreme Court, structural errors fall into three broad categories. Id. at 1908. “First, an error has been deemed structural in some instances if the right at issue is not designed to protect the defendant from erroneous conviction but instead protects some other interest.” Id. An example of this is the “fundamental legal principle that a defendant must be allowed to make his own choices about the proper way to protect his own liberty.” Id. “Second, an error has been deemed structural if the effects of the error are simply too hard to measure,” which includes when a defendant is denied the right to select his own attorney. Id. “Third, an error has been deemed structural if the error always results in fundamental unfairness.” Id. This last category includes when a trial judge fails to give a reasonable-doubt instruction. Id.

The defendant in Weaver was denied his right to a public trial, which the Court agreed was a structural error. Id. However, the Court determined that it was not a violation that always resulted in a denial of fundamental fairness. Id. at 1909. Thus, the Court concluded, when a defendant raises a public-trial violation via an ineffective-assistance-of-counsel claim, Strickland prejudice is not shown automatically. Instead, the burden is on the defendant to show either a reasonable probability of a different outcome in his or her case or, as the Court has assumed for these purposes ... to show that the particular public-trial violation was so serious as to render his or her trial fundamentally unfair.

Id. at 1911.

An indictment that falsely claims a witness presented sworn testimony to the grand jury in order for the grand jury to issue the indictment is a defect in the constitution of the trial mechanism which defies analysis by harmless-error standards. This error falls within all three categories expressed by the Supreme Court in Weaver as defining structural error. Placing the witness’s name on the indictment is designed to protect the grand jury process as a whole. Furthermore, the effects of the error are simply too hard to measure because it is impossible for anyone to prove whether a proper witness testified before the grand jury or whether the grand jury received evidence amounting to probable cause. Finally, knowingly placing the name of a person on an indictment purporting that person to having given sworn testimony to establish probable cause always results in fundamental unfairness. The state presented knowingly false information to the trial court and the jury when it called Respondent to trial on an indictment that incorrectly indicated Haden testified before the grand jury in order for the grand jury to find probable cause. The state should not benefit from its creation of fundamental unfairness.

CONCLUSION

Respondent respectfully requests this Court affirm the PCR judge's grant of relief and bar the state from seeking another indictment from the grand jury against Respondent for the conduct alleged in the fundamentally flawed indictments previously obtained.

Susan B. Hackett
Appellate Defender

ATTORNEY FOR RESPONDENT

This 15th day of November, 2022.