RE: State vs Dwayne Geddis

Dear Ms. Kitchings:

It is my understanding that Mr. Geddis filed some type of appeal from his recent guilty plea and violation of probation. He filed this action pro se. I did not file the appeal, and I do not have a copy of his pro se filing. In addition to the appeal with your office, Mr. Geddis filed some type of motion for reconsideration with the circuit court.

On or about June 5, 2023, Mr. Geddis pled to pending criminal charges, and received a sentence of time served. At the same time, he admitted a probation violation, and was sentenced to one (1) year with credit for time served. I believe his appeal is requesting credit for time served of 123 days on the probation violation. Along with the appeal, Mr. Geddis filed a motion with the circuit court.

On yesterday, August 10, 2023, Mr. Geddis's motion for reconsideration was heard by Judge Culbertson. Geddis was present for the hearing having been transported by SCDC. Judge Culbertson denied the motion on the theory that Geddis was served with his probation violation on June 5th (the day he pled guilty to other charges), not 123 days earlier (when he was arrested for the other pending charges). In other words, on the guilty pleas, he was entitled to 123 days of credit, but since he did not violate his probation until the day he pled guilty, he was only entitled to 1 day of jail credit.

This ruling seems to have resolved the issue in his appeal. If you have any questions
