Ms. Kitchings:

My apologies I have conflicts on both days:

May 8 – I have a credential revocation hearing involving a former police officer, in which I am representing a local government before the Criminal Justice Academy. This matter has been postponed twice already. Recognizing the Court of Appeals matter certainly takes precedence, the former officer has asked for the contest case in an effort to recover his revoked credential and, although I represent the local government, it would be churlish of me if I did not suggest a third postponement would be less-than-sympathetic to the officer's efforts.

May 9 – my wife and children (in laws, etc.) are leaving for a family wedding in Alabama.

I understand that either John Marshall Mosser (copied) or David Root (also copied, although not noticed an appearance yet) in our firm would be available to provide oral argument if either of those dates is most convenient for the Court.

Thank you for your consideration,
