My problem concerning my Trial, was that I was found guilty. The Judge never considered my true Side of the Story. We meet at his house after he texted me to go smoke, at about 12:00. Then we walked to the vacant house on Sprinkle just to go smoking. When about 4:00 came around, the victim said "I'm finna stroll through the back of Mets, as in Mets Trailer Parks. After still being there I notice probably at about 5:00, police were swarming the Sprinkle area. I had an active Juvenile warrant at the ~~the~~ time, so I stayed put until dark. Then later on I got to a wifi-hotspot, and made the chance of calling my brother back, so my mama could come get me. She told me everything police called and said about the murder, and that they wanted to ask me some questions. Even with the active warrant, knowing my innocence, I got my mama to call them back. While being questioned, I lied to them both times with the same exact story. I did so only because, I was afraid to be ~~charged~~ ^{charged} with murder, and felt they would do so anyway. I basically was convicted at Trial, without any guilt. I couldn't take a plea because, of being innocent.
