We also have no objection to foregoing oral argument and Appellant's request for supplemental briefing, but if supplemental briefing is permitted that we be allowed to respond.

Thank you very much. Unfortunately, I am unavailable on the 29th, however, Appellants are willing to forego oral argument. Having said that, may I ask the Court's indulgence to submit a short, two-page supplemental brief pertaining to the Supreme Court's decision in Walbeck v. The l'On Co., 439 S.C. 568, 889 S.E.2d 537 (S.C. 2023).

That sounds fine! If you decide you would prefer oral argument, I would ask all counsel to please let me know your availability on January 29.

Warmly,

Jenny

Dear Counsel,

Good morning. In recognition of the weather expected to affect many parts of the state tonight and tomorrow morning, the panel wishes to cancel the oral argument scheduled for tomorrow, January 22. If you do not object, the panel has indicated they can decide this matter based on the records and briefs. If anyone desires oral argument, we will reschedule as soon as possible. Please reply to confirm receipt of this email.

Thank you all for your patience, and please stay safe and warm.

Warmly,

Jenny
