Good morning, I was unaware that my sister Latausha Vanderhall had applied for another motion to stay. Judge Hood gave her a 5 day order. She was supposed to pay a $9000 surety bond or the magistrate court was supposed to file a writ of ejection.

I was told by Diamond in the clerk of court's office that the fifth day would be friday. With the first day being monday. Then I was told by the Deana at the magistrate court that the fifth day would be monday after 4:00 pm. Deana explained to me that she would be calling the clerk of courts office on Tuesday to speak with someone in reference to judge Hood's order. She stated that, because of the law regarding order, she wanted to make sure she did things correctly before filing writ of ejection. Deana told me that she would call me on Tuesday.

However, I did not hear from her. To my knowledge, the writ has not been filed yet. Because, I was not contacted by Deana on yesterday. I am not understanding what is going on. Latausha's order expired prior to her motion to stay request. In addition, Judge Hood said that she could not fight against this order. I am confused.

The 5 days expired this past Monday.

Alisha Murray Davis
