Pertinent information was not included the first email it's the idea of the truck itself that's gives the meaning of owner operator and not the driver because it's clear that the truck is the respondents case/theory because they didn't submitted to the court documents supporting there allegation that Im personally is and independent contractor / truck driver which is unconstitutional under the non existing of a "statue of law" so I'm making a motion for the court to have the respondant prove there theory and not continue to flap there gum without evidence to corroborate there allegation.
