What more clear that Evans delivery is a $2.5 billion dollar company because the only employs owner operator to increase there revenue because in the ambiguity and ambiguous contract is shows the drive is responsible for truck maintenance and repairs which takes that responsibility from them. But in reality if they have the own Truck it would be a major overhead expense causing less revenue meaning that when driver revenue is non existing the company is still profiting with the thousands of the other drivers. Under the law states as and independent contractor I should profit or suffers a loss as the company should is this not the law. Benjamin Moses
