

On April 16th 2012 I was sentenced to five years by Judge Cooper. My solicitor recommended probation. Judge Cooper overruled her recommendation and sentenced me to five years. The drugs that he sentenced me on were never in my possession. In my situation, I talked with my lawyer and solicitor one week before my court date and they both agreed on probation, my solicitor said my case was bogus because the drugs were found at a hotel room which I shared with two other people, and those two people were not taken jail only me, and when I was stopped in a traffic stop there weren't any drugs in the car or on me so there's no way to say those drugs were mine especially if all three of us weren't being charged, no one was charged but me for drugs I knew nothing about. And my solicitor told me my case was bogus and she was recommending probation and my lawyer was asking for time served for the five months I've done in the county the five years I received was injustice. In court I went back before the judge after I was sentenced and Judge Cooper said he would consider a reconsideration about my case!...

RECEIVED
JUN 13 2012
SC COURT OF APPEALS