Dear Mr. Jenkins:

On July 24, 2013 we were notified via email that you were barred from applying to positions in the State of South Carolina's online applicant system, NeoGov. After speaking with the State's NeoGov Administrator, we discovered that your application was inadvertently identified as ineligible for State employment on July 19, 2013. This was corrected today, July 25, 2013, and we have been assured by the State Human Resources Division that agencies to which you applied during this time period have been notified. We regret this error and appreciate you bringing it to our attention.

Sincerely,

Mr. Jenkins,

Thank you for bringing this to the attention of the State Human Resources Division. On July 19, 2013 the Department of Employment and Workforce entered the change in the state application system that resulted in the notation on your application that you were "Barred from Applying". When you brought the notation to the attention of the State Human Resources Division on July 25, 2013, we immediately removed it. We also are contacting state agencies where you had an application when the notation was in the system to let them know the notation was an error and should be disregarded. In addition to make certain this had not occurred at any other time, we checked the system's records and determined it appeared only from July 19 to July 25. I am sorry you had this experience and will be glad to answer any questions.

Sam Wilkins

State Human Resources Director
