To whom this may concern,

I'm asking to Appeal my case because of Several reasons. I don't understand or Comprehend very well. I've had Comprehension problems growing up. However, I don't feel like my Lawyer fought for me properly. I'm young & I don't know how the law works or what these big words are, or mean. I don't feel like things were broke down to me, or explained the way they should've been. Papers were just shoved in front of my face like I knew what they were explaining.

I signed waivers at the very beging of my case while I was under the influence, so I felt I was being taken advantage of because of that. By my understanding he represented me under false pretences. Seeing how he had personal ties with the Solicitors office I believe him representing me was a conflict of interest. I was told what to say when I replied I do not understand. Therefore, I believe my Sentence was set-up before hand to my knowledge. Due to the things I stated above I think there is plenty of reasons for an appeal. Thanks for your time & Consideration.

Sincerley,

Bri Hany C. Foster
