STATEMENT OF ISSUE ON APPEAL

The trial judge erred in denying appellant's motion for a mistrial because the Fifth Amendment was violated when appellant was coerced into involuntarily waiving his right to remain silent and testifying at trial in order to obtain a self-defense jury instruction, which the trial judge ultimately failed to grant despite appellant's testimony, particularly since the state's evidence supported the self-defense claim in the case.

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

Appellant Alton Jamaul Crosby was tried by jury on the charge of assault and battery of a high and aggravated nature during the February 2017 term of the Spartanburg County General Sessions Court before Judge R. Keith Kelly. The jury found appellant guilty of second degree assault and battery. Judge Kelly sentenced appellant to imprisonment for a period of three years. Charles William Snyder represented appellant at trial and Assistant Solicitor Spencer Holloran Smith appeared on behalf of the state.

Appellant appealed his conviction and sentence. This brief follows.

ARGUMENT

The trial judge erred in denying appellant's motion for a mistrial because the Fifth Amendment was violated when appellant was coerced into involuntarily waiving his right to remain silent and testifying at trial in order to obtain a self-defense jury instruction, which the trial judge ultimately failed to grant despite appellant's testimony, particularly since the state's evidence presented supported the self-defense claim in the case.

The state indicted appellant on the offense of assault and battery of a high and aggravated nature alleging that he committed assault and battery upon Dennis Talford on December 31, 2015. Only three witnesses testified at trial: appellant and state's witnesses Calvin Vinson and Officer Shanetta Thompson.

Calvin Vinson, who was the Director of the Miracle Hill Rescue Mission testified that he found Talford bleeding and lying at the bottom of a staircase of the building on December 31, 2015. Vinson stated that he was told that an incident occurred between petitioner and Talford, and that the event was captured on a (DVD) surveillance camera. Tr. 33, l. 11 – Tr. 36, l. 25.

Police officer Shanetta Thompson testified that she found Talford injured upon her arrival at the scene on the date in question, and that she arrested appellant at the scene after watching the DVD taped recording of the event. Tr. 38, l. 1 – Tr. 43, l. 18. However, on cross examination, Officer Thompson admitted that the videotape showed that Talford initiated the contact with appellant during the physical altercation and that Talford punched appellant. Tr. 44, lines 1-10.

Indeed, the evidence presented at trial revealed that there was a physical altercation between appellant and Talford at the top of a staircase inside that building and that Talford was the aggressor who hit appellant first and that appellant then struck Talford about the head in self-defense. Tr. 31, l. 14 – Tr. 32, l. 8.

After the state rested, appellant stated that “[he] decided not to testify.” Tr. 51, l. 19. The defense rested and then counsel in effect raised the issue of self-defense in the case. The trial judge responded by stating that self-defense had not been raised and that no self-defense instruction would be charged unless appellant testified in the case. Tr. 52, l.5 – Tr. 54, l.11. Counsel asked “you will not instruct [self-defense] if [appellant] does not testify,” and the trial judge answered “yeah.” Tr. 54, lines 2-4. As a result, appellant, who previously informed the trial judge that he did not wish to testify, (Tr. 51, lines 19-21), was forced to reverse his initial decision not to testify and actually testify in his defense of self-defense at trial, presumably because this was the only way to secure a self-defense jury instruction in the case. Tr. 54, lines 1-25.

Thus, appellant testified involuntarily at trial. Appellant testified that he was living at Miracle Hill Rescue Mission and that Talford lived there also, and that when he passed Talford in the stairwell in question, he (Talford) hit him, and that he felt trapped and fearful so he responded in effect in self-defense when he struck Talford. Also, there was a prior altercation between the two men that occurred before this event. Tr. 56, l. 1 – Tr. 59, l. 19. After appellant testified, the defense rested. Tr. 60, l. 1-3. Then, defense counsel moved for a mistrial as follows:

[Appellant] would not have testified but for the fact that he thought he had to [testify] to get a charge of self-defense...as the Court instructed some evidence from the defense would have to be presented to get the charge of self-defense. Tr. 62, l. 15-19.

The evidence in the case that was presented was there was a video...[which showed] that Mr. Talford punched Mr. Crosby first...I believe that raised the question that any actions on his part was in self-defense..Tr. 63, lines 8-13.

Again, [appellant] did not want to testify at trial and felt like he needed to get the charge of self-defense, and as the case law proves or demonstrates that one would be entitled to that charge regardless of whether or not we present any evidence. Tr. 63, l. 17-21.

The trial judge subsequently ruled that appellant was not entitled to a self-defense jury charge. Tr. 64, l. 17 – Tr. 66, l. 7; Tr. 67, l. 2-6.

Appellant's self-defense claim was supported by the videotape and the testimony of the state's witness (police officer). Defense counsel's opening statement also reveals this when he asked the jury "to pay close attention to the video...[in order to] see that [appellant] was defending himself." Tr. 32, l. 11-25. The trial judge in effect coerced appellant to prove self-defense by forcing to him to testify at trial rather than allow reliance on the state's evidence presented at trial sans his testimony on the issue of self-defense. In effect, this forced appellant to prove self-defense by testifying when it was the state's burden to disprove self-defense. Here, Talford was the aggressor who began the fight and thereafter, appellant acted out of fear in self-defense.

In a case of self-defense, the law to be charged is determined from the facts presented in the case. State v. Bryant, 336 S.C. 340, 520 S.E. 2d 319 (1999). If there is any evidence in the record from which it can be reasonably inferred that an accused justifiably inflicted a wound in self-defense, then the accused is entitled to a charge on the law of self-defense. State v. Stone, 285 SC 386, 330 S.E. 2d 286 (1985). In order to establish self-defense, the defendant must have been without fault in bringing on the difficulty and was or believed he was in actual imminent danger of losing his life or sustaining serious bodily injury, which a reasonably prudent person would have so believed, and that he had no other means of avoiding the danger. State v. Davis, 282 S.C. 45, 317 S.E.2d 452 (1984). Moreover, when one claims self-defense, the state is required to disprove the elements of self-defense beyond a reasonable doubt. State v. Wiggins, 330 S.C. 538, 500 S.E.2d 489 (1998); State v. Williams, 400 S.C. 308, 733 S.E.2d 605 (2012).

Moreover, the Fifth Amendment provides that no person shall be compelled in any criminal case to be a witness against himself. See also South Carolina State Constitution Article 1, §12. In Brown v. State, 340 S.C. 590, 533 S.E.2d 308 (2000), the Court held that “the decision to testify or not is as perilous one [because] if a defendant does not testify, he [will] forego the opportunity to tell the jury his version of events [and] on the other hand, if a defendant chooses to testify, he subjects himself to cross-examination, including possible impeachment with prior convictions [but nonetheless] a waiver of this Fifth Amendment right must be knowing and voluntary.

Appellant’s Fifth Amendment’s right to remain silent was violated in this case. Appellant invoked his right to remain silent, but subsequently withdrew and waived this right and testified per the belief that his self-defense claim would not be entertained sans his testimony.

An accused has a right to remain silent, and not testify, and put the state to its burden of proof. State v. Johnson, 293 S.C. 321, 360 S.E.2d 317 (1987) citing to State v. Sloan, 278 S.C. 435, 298 S.E.2d 92 (1982); State v. Atkins, 353 S.C. 312, 577 S.E.2d 450 (2003). See Doyle v. Ohio, 426 U.S. 610 (1978), where the Court held that an accused has the right to remain silent and the exercise of that right cannot be used against him.

Then, after the trial judge improperly coerced appellant into waiving his right to remain silent and into testifying at trial in violation of the Fifth Amendment, and article 1, §12 of the South Carolina State Constitution, the trial judge failed to give a self-defense jury charge, which was supported by the evidence.

CONCLUSION

Based on the foregoing argument presented above, counsel for appellant requests that this Court reverse appellant's conviction and sentence, and remand the case to the circuit court for a new trial.
