

To whom my concerns,

I Malcom Williams is writing this letter to the court if appeals on this matter because I think I was wrongfully sentenced I don't believe that my lawyer got me the best out come. I feel as though I should've gotten a better plea deal than the plea I got. I feel I should have another chance at fighting my case so that I can be given another chance at life. I know I made a terrible mistake, and as everyone goes by I'm learning from my mistake, that I'm very responsible for.

I would like the court of appeals to help get my charges drop to manslaughter and consider to lessen my sentence, so I ask for leniency in considering to drop my charges and sentence and give me a 10 to 15 year sentence. I don't think that I should spend the next 30 years in prison so I hope that you can find it in your hearts to give me another chance that I may be able to help someone from making the same mistake I made.

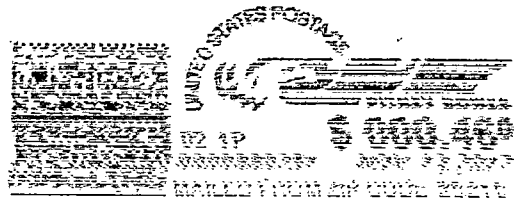

What I plan to do if my appeal is granted is to be a better father to my four children, and teach them to be better toward men and women. My next plan is to speak to individuals about domestic violence, and to let them know how serious it is, and explain to them that their's consequences behind their actions. In order for me to do so I want to further my education by getting a law degree, not only do I want to reach out I want to assist in teaching the difference in domestic violence. I also want to reach out to the victims of domestic violence most importantly to help them find peace and to help them live better lives.
