Ms. Kitchings:

My only concern is that I received oral argument notices for two other cases for February: State v. Filiberto Campos and State v. Michael Smith. I also have an argument in the Supreme Court on January 30.

I inherited Mr. Hamrick's case from John Strom, who left Appellate Defense, so I will be preparing for Hamrick from scratch and the Appendix is nearly 1000 pages. If all of three of these cases are argued within the same week, it will be very difficult for me to adequately prepare for Mr. Hamrick's case. If the Court could schedule Hamrick on 2/14, that would give me adequate time to prepare even if Campos and Smith are argued in early February.

I appreciate any consideration the Court is willing to give me on scheduling, but I will of course be there and be ready whenever the Court decides to hold the argument.

Thank you,

David Alexander

Ms. Kitchings,

Mr. VanSyckel has left our office and Rasheeda Cleveland has taken over his PCR and PCR appeal caseload. A letter on this specific case responding to the Court's letter dated December 6th is attached and was placed in the mail this morning, as well as letters regarding all other cases on which Ms. Cleveland is being substituted as counsel of record.

I have copied Ms. Cleveland on his email, and please accept my response on her behalf, as she is currently out of the office for this week (and possibly next week) for a medical reason under the supervision and recommendation of a physician.

Ms. Cleveland has no known conflicts that would take precedent over an argument with the Court on those dates in February.

Please let me know if your office can provide any more information on this matter.

Sincerely,

Megan Harrigan Jameson

Ms. Kitchings,

I have left the Attorney General's office and I believe that they have assigned a new attorney to handle this matter and that they will be contacting you today with the new attorneys information. If they do not, please let me know so that I can take the appropriate next steps.

Regards,

Judah N. VanSyckel

Dear Counsel:

Good morning! The Court would like to set this case during the February 2018 term of court. Would you be available to argue this case on February 6, 7, or 14, 2018? Please reply to this email with your responses.

Thank you.
