in the case. The order is the only order that states it ends the case, and is an appealable order under the rules.

Being the prior appeal has had numerous back and forth arguments on that point, and the lack of a final order was part of the brief and arguments, and the fact that the Court of Appeals requested the order from the trial court, leaves another procedural misstep without the COA whom requested the order, determination on the time to file the notice of appeal on this order.
