MR Shearouse

Today on 7-9-18 I received correspondence dated from you. I can tell it's a copy so I have a couple of questions for you. The last three pieces of correspondence i've received from the S.C. Supreme Court. The first one clock stamped on the Supreme Court envelope was 5-24-18. It was unsealed. The last two correspondences i've received from the S.C. Supreme Court came in SCDC brown Inter Office envelopes that can only be seal by winding a string around a little piece on the envelope. I want to know MR Shearouse did you send my legal Confidential mail in that manner or is SCDC opening my legal mail outside of my presence. In nearly 15 years i've NEVER received correspondence in this manner. And today's correspondence of 7-9-18 the document is stamped to let me know someone tampering with my legal mail. So im asking you MR Shearouse are you sending my legal mail in SCDC Inter office envelopes in which they deliver request to stall forms in and medical documents? Then my name was wrote in marker on the document. Is this your doing Mr Shearouse?

RE: Request for Legal Research Materials

This responds to your recent request for legal research materials. Due to the need to focus the staff of the Library of the Supreme Court of South Carolina (Library) on its core mission of supporting the legal needs of the Court and its staff, the Library will no longer honor requests from individuals to provide copies of legal research materials such as court opinions, court rules or legislation.

Instead, there are several options for you to obtain copies of relevant legal research materials. The first would be to seek the assistance of a lawyer in conducting the legal research. Not only are lawyers highly trained in conducting legal research, but they can also provide you with their legal opinion regarding the matter.

A second option would be for you to visit the Library in Columbia, South Carolina. The Library is located in the South Carolina Supreme Court Building at 1231 Gervais Street, and is generally open from 8:30 a.m. until 5:00 p.m. Monday through Friday excluding state holidays. The copying price is 20 cents a page for copies that you make. The staff of the Library can only provide limited assistance in helping patrons locate relevant legal materials, and at times, library staff may not be available. If you are unable to visit the Library in person, you may want to send a friend or relative to find the relevant legal research materials and make a copy for you.

A third option would be use the Internet to obtain the legal research materials. The opinions of the Supreme Court of South Carolina and the South Carolina Court of Appeals are available on the South Carolina Judicial Department Website, www.sccourts.org. Published opinions and orders are available back to 1997 and unpublished opinions are available back to 2004. The Judicial Department Website also contains the forms and rules that are applicable to courts within the Judicial Branch of state government.

The rules and decisions of the South Carolina Administrative Law Court, part of the Executive Branch of state government, are available at www.scalc.net.

The opinions of the Supreme Court of the United States are available at www.supremecourt.gov back to 1991, and the opinions of the United States Court of Appeals for the Fourth Circuit from 1996 are available at www.ca4.uscourts.gov. These websites also contain the court rules for these courts. Additionally, the court rules and forms for the United States District Court for the District of South Carolina are available at www.scd.uscourts.gov.

The South Carolina Legislative Website, www.scstatehouse.gov, contains the South Carolina Constitution; the South Carolina Code of Laws; legislative materials such as bills, bill history and journals; and the South Carolina Code of Regulations.

Federal legislation and statutes are available at www.congress.gov. Links to the legislative websites for all fifty states are available at <http://thomas.loc.gov/home/state-legislatures.html>. The United States Constitution, the United States Code and the Code of Federal Regulations along with numerous other federal publications are available at the U.S. Government Publishing Office's Federal Digital System. www.gpo.gov/fdsys.

Google Scholar has an extensive collection of opinions and other legal materials which are available without charge at <http://scholar.google.com>. Decisions from the federal courts and the courts of all fifty states are available, and the website has a very sophisticated search feature.

Finally, various commercial vendors such as Westlaw, Nexis-Lexis, VersusLaw and LoislawConnect have extensive legal research materials available by subscription. See e.g., www.westlaw.com; www.lexis-nexis.com; www.versuslaw.com; and <http://estore.loislaw.com>. Lists of other legal research sources on the Internet are available from numerous sources including the Duke Law School, <http://www.law.duke.edu/lib/researchguides/intresearch>, and the Cornell University Law School, <http://www.law.cornell.edu>.
