The Honorable Edgar W. Dickson

Appellate Case No. 2017-000095
Lower Case No. 2016-CP-18-1849

RECEIVED

IN RE: TRUST EIP CREATED UNDER THE LAST WILL AND TESTAMENT OF EUNICE
I. PAGE DATED OCTOBER 14, 1992,

Richard S. Henson and Vann Kenneth Henson ..... Respondents, v.

Albert T. Henson, Jr., and Julian Reid Henson, Respondents in the Court below,

Of Whom Albert T. Henson is the ..... Appellant.

RESPONDENTS' REPLY TO APPELLANT'S RETURN TO MOTION FOR COSTS AND FEES AND RETURN TO MOTION FOR SANCTIONS UNDER SCACR 269

Despite causing significant delays to the resolution of the underlying case and causing Respondents to incur tens of thousands of dollars in legal fees responding to an unsuccessful appeal, an unsuccessful petition for rehearing en banc, and an unsuccessful petition for writ of certiorari, Appellant advances a hypertechnical application of the South Carolina Appellate Court Rules in an attempt to bar Respondents from recovering a modest amount in appeal fees and costs and to impose sanctions on Respondents. Appellant's arguments elevate form over substance, and they should be rejected accordingly.

Respondents originally filed a motion for costs and fees in the Supreme Court after the remittitur was issued because the Supreme Court had denied Appellant's petition for writ of certiorari. After receiving Appellant's return to the motion in which he argued that the motion should have been filed in the Court of Appeals instead of the Supreme Court, Respondents immediately filed the present motion in an abundance of caution because neither Rule 222(d) nor Rule 242(j)(4), SCACR, expressly identify the proper court for filing such motion. Although the present motion was filed seventeen days after the remittitur was issued, there is no dispute that the original motion filed in the Supreme Court was timely filed within fifteen days of the issuance of the remittitur.

Appellant now argues that Respondents' motion for costs and fees should be denied because it is untimely under Rule 222(d), SCACR. This argument should be rejected because it elevates form over substance by claiming that a party's failure to file a motion in the right court should deprive that party of a substantive right to partial reimbursement for the considerable costs associated with prevailing in an appeal. Appellant relies solely on hypertechnical arguments without asserting any equitable reason why he should not be taxed for costs and fees after pursuing an unsuccessful appeal, which warranted neither a published opinion nor writ of certiorari.

To the extent that the motion should have been filed originally in this Court and is untimely (by a mere two days) as a result, the Court has discretion under Rule 263(b) to extend the time for performing any act. In this case, the Court should exercise that discretion by extending the deadline to allow for the motion to be considered timely filed based on the lack of any prejudice to Appellant and the appellate court rules' ambiguity regarding the proper venue for filing a motion for costs and fees.

Regardless of the merits of Appellant's arguments against the motion, he has presented no persuasive grounds for the imposition of sanctions under Rule 269, especially considering the considerable costs and fees incurred by Respondents in defending against Appellant's unsuccessful appeal. The motion for costs and fees is not frivolous given Respondents' timely filing of the original motion in the Supreme Court and the lack of clarity in the appellate court rules about the proper venue for such motion. Furthermore, Appellant's counsel should not be rewarded for the time and costs incurred to write an eight-page brief and thirteen-paragraph affidavit in response to a routine motion, when Appellant's position could have been made concisely.

Therefore, Respondents request that the Court grant their motion for costs and fees and deny Appellant's motion for sanctions.

Respectfully submitted,
