RE: Blue Ridge v. Gresham, 2009-141246

Dear Ms. Allen,

In response to your recent inquiry, this is to advise that I have made considerable efforts to re-create the small segment of the transcript destroyed by the court report Mary Digarmo. (spelling?) After multi requests, I only received the surviving transcript before Thanksgiving of 2012. I had been led to believe a significant portion was destroyed but that it not the case. I have submitted my assessment of omissions to the trial judge in a timely manner as he directed which I anticipate he copied to you. My submission included the judge's own jury instruction that he had provided to me and to the other side during the trial, just before he read it. I was surprised that the judge did not offer a copy himself to us or to you, or that the opposing side, professional litigants, did not produce their copy. Nevertheless, I maintained the charge as the pro se person and submitted it. It must be I was the only one who maintained it.

I have several requests of you please:

1. What has been done in the investigation by the Court of Appeals or higher authority and/or by the S. C. Court Administration about this destruction of the transcript, obviously a questionable action? I have written over four times to the Court Admin. with no answer. I deserve an answer. Obviously, in the interest of fairness and justice, an answer is imperative. I will await that from you.
2. I was the prevailing party, pro se, on all issues of this lengthy 3-day jury trial. Blue Ridge Electric Coop, the Plaintiff, and initiating Appellant, spent many thousands of shareholders' dollars pursuing my husband and me in a "debt collection" action for bills I had paid in full, monthly, and without delay in their payment. My husband, though sued, was never a member of Plaintiffs' organization, which we continuously raised but Plaintiff insisted that he was a member.

Ultimately, at trial, upon our continuously renewed motion, he was dismissed when Plaintiff's case failed to establish he was a member to which they finally reluctantly admitted.

In late September or early October of 2012, Blue Ridge Electric Coop informed me that they were abandoning their claim in collection as unjustified as the jury had determined. That was the crux of their lawsuit. This matter has occupied over six years of my family's life and despite our winning it in every particular, this matter appears to never end. Obviously, it is suspicious that a small portion of the transcript wherein questions were raised as to the good faith of the proceedings, is classified 'destroyed.'

My health, family and work responsibilities, often put on hold for this matter, have suffered greatly. Such costs are huge while Plaintiff uses coop funds unwisely. I wanted you to know that I will be unavailable for more input or response to you or others until early summer. The case was two plus years in discovery and preparation prior to lengthy trial with multi Court appearances and mandatory mediation.

I firmly believe that Plaintiffs failed in good faith in every regard in this matter then, as now. I have done my best, submitted over 80 pages to the trial judge from the trial including his own charge that apparently he did not have, at my continued costs, as a pro se. Additionally, I have now learned that more attorneys have been hired against me, the pro se party some six plus years later.

I suggest you seek from the trial judge all documents each of the parties submitted to him for your record. I hope these facts are helpful. I am frequently away from my home address, therefore, my replies, when able to make them, may be significantly delayed as I know you will understand. I cannot afford to hire someone to monitor this matter.

Enough is enough. Plaintiffs have only to remove their pole and guy wires from my property. Such equipment does not serve me as I paid Plaintiffs for my power to be buried underground 25-plus years ago. This equipment only serves Plaintiffs' expansion plans, no customers of which I am aware. This is a simple resolution and could alleviate continued harassment.

Plaintiffs have acknowledged that I owe them NOTHING and that I was and am an "excellent customer." Thank you for your best efforts at concluding justice.

Most sincerely,

Kathleen Jennings (wrongly captioned Gresham)
