Ms. Ritchie:

Thank you for letting me know that; however, the language in the order is plain: "the due dates for all Appellate Court filings due on or after the effective date of this order are hereby extended for twenty (20) days." Any other interpretation by your office may have stemmed from the author of the order writing something other than what he meant (and then privately telling court personnel what he meant), but we are all governed by the words he wrote in the order, not by what he meant.

For the sake of how the Court of Appeals is implementing this order, you may want to bring this to Ms. Allen's attention. It will probably never turn into a big deal in this case, but I can see it potentially turning into one in others. In other words, it may be best to deal with this before the court begins routinely to receive filings twenty days after it expects to receive them.

Thank you.

Mr. Radeker,

We were told that when the Supreme Court Order came out on March 20, 2020 that the 20 day extension only extended current deadlines to April 13, 2020. All other deadlines after the 13th remained the same. If you need longer time to serve and file the documents past what the South Carolina Appellate Court Rules allow, a motion for extension will need to be filed.

Respectfully,

Sierra Ritchie

Ms. Ritchie:

I actually received the transcript on April 9, 2020. With the automatic 20-day extension of the initial brief and designation deadline per section (I)(1) of the appellate courts coronavirus operations order currently in effect, this puts that deadline at June 1, 2020, by my calculation. Please let me know if the court sees that differently.

Court Administration is copied on this email message.

Thank you. Of course, if you or other court personnel have any questions or concerns, please do not hesitate to contact me.
