Appellate Case No. 2020-000539

Charleston County

Trial Court Case No. 2015CP1004558

To whom it may concern:

This is in response to the letter I received on September 9, 2020 Re - Estella N. Slovney v. Alexander Nesbitt. The new name for the property was changed in a 2006 hearing to Jeffrey Nesbitt and the late Charles Seymour Goldberg was the acting attorney. I spoke to my then attorney, Natasha D. Chisolm, Esquire and requested her to file the necessary papers together with the $250.00 filing fee to appeal the verdict on my case. She agreed to work on it. When I had not heard from her in a while, I tried to contact her by phone and email for an up date. She never contacted me back. Then I filed my own appeal Unfortunately to learn that only an attorney can file the appeal. Due to the Coronavirus and courts closing. I have been unable to hire an attorney to take my case. I feel that most of the attorneys in Charleston have worked on this case (started in 1995) and the ones that have not do not want to go up against Mikell R. Scarborough master-in - equity in this town. It is impossible for me to hire an attorney that will work for my rights and benefit. See attached article -page 3 from " The Post and Courier.Com". It outlines the many duties that fall under his jurisdiction such as mortgage foreclosures, property disputes, debt collection, Charleston 's auctions of property sold at foreclosure and wills in the probate court. It seems to me the Judge Scarborough has a conflict of interest issue! My case has been on-going for me from 1995 to 2020 and continues with no satisfactory results in sight. I need help !

Sincerely ,

Estella N. Slovney

Charleston judge repays taxpayers after report reveals pricey trips, first-class flights

Master-in-Equity Mikell Scarborough has charged taxpayers for pricey out-of-state trips to choice vacation spots like Big Sky, Montana and Honolulu. The judge has now reimbursed county taxpayers more than $4,800. File

COLUMBIA — Charleston judge Mikell Scarborough reimbursed county taxpayers more than $4,800 after auditors confirmed a Post and Courier report that exposed questionable travel expenditures he made on the public's dime.

Though he is paid Charleston County's second-highest salary at roughly $191,000, Scarborough charged taxpayers thousands for travel in recent years to Honolulu, Seattle, Washington, D.C., and mountain lodging out west, the newspaper reported.

Charleston judge under investigation for flying first class, booking trips on public's dime

By Joseph Cranney jcranney@postandcourier.com

Scarborough, the county's master-in-equity since 2003, contended the travel expenses were perfectly reasonable, as they were related to training events hosted by the National Judicial College.

The judge also insisted that his travel budget hasn't exceeded $7,000 in any given year.

But Scarborough went too far by booking extra nights at his Hawaii beach resort and other hotel stays that went beyond conference schedules, county auditors charged in a three-page report.

Auditors reviewed more than $11,600 in Scarborough's travel spending since 2016 and flagged 13 inappropriate expenses, requesting that the judge pay back $4,885.27.

He sent the county two checks in March and April totaling that amount, a county spokesman said. The auditors finished their work on March 13. The county released its report to The Post and Courier on Monday.

In a brief phone interview, Scarborough said he had no objections to the audit's findings.

Masters are nominated to the bench by local senate delegations, after candidates are screened in Columbia by the Judicial Merit Selection Commission.

Sen. Chip Campsen, Republican chairman of the Charleston County Senate Delegation, said he has been asked if senators will take action against Scarborough.

But Campsen stressed that Scarborough's oversight largely lies with the state's judicial department. Barring any actions from that agency, Campsen said Scarborough's spending likely won't be considered by the delegation until he is scheduled for his next screening in Fall 2022.

"What kind of support the delegation would give him then — I'm not sure I could answer that," Campsen said.

The senator said he learned of Scarborough's spending practices when he read about them in The Post and Courier.

"I've had concerns about what I've read," Campsen said. "I was a bit surprised."

Otherwise, Campsen said, Scarborough has had a fine reputation as judge.

"I have nothing further to say," he added, before hanging up.

The audit confirmed Post and Courier reporting that Scarborough charged taxpayers $1,407 for first-class flights to Jackson Hole, Wyo. After the newspaper inquired about Scarborough's spending in February, he wrote the county a check for $291.35.

He said the amount reflected the difference between his 2018 first-class tickets and what he would have paid if he flew coach. However, auditors estimated that difference in cost at $600, part of the amount they requested the judge pay back.

Overall, auditors flagged nearly a dozen extra nights for the judge's lodging across five trips, including a beach resort in Honolulu and a hotel along the Seattle waterfront. He also charged extra nights for his stays in Jackson Hole and Big Sky, Mont.

Those trips came with unnecessary expenses on rental cars, too.

Scarborough's $394 rental car fee in Wyoming came with two extra days outside of his conference schedule, auditors stated.

They also flagged his six-day car rental in Montana. Scarborough told The Post and Courier his wife joined him on the trip and drove the car to Yellowstone National Park. The couple drove the rental more than 1,300 miles in one week, receipts show.
