Email disclaimers for Wiring Instructions

Initial Emails

"Wire fund transfer fraud is now an epidemic. Please do not send wire transfer funds based upon receipt of an email without telephoning my office. Assume that any email advising of a new telephone number or with new or different wire instructions is fraudulent. Please call our office at the number now known to you if you receive such an email. The email may seem legitimate and may recite details of the transaction; assume it is fraudulent. We will be waiting for your call."

Nearing/Day of Closing Emails

"Immediately before wiring any funds involved in this transaction please telephone my office for final approval and instructions. Please do not issue any wire fund transfers without the final telephone call. Assume that any email advising of a new telephone number or with new or different wire instructions is fraudulent. Please call our office at the number now known to you if you receive such an email. The email may seem legitimate and may recite details of the transaction; assume it is fraudulent."
