This matter is before the Undersigned on Plaintiff's motion pursuant to South Carolina Rules of Civil Procedure 59 and 60 for reconsideration of its Order entered on May 12, 2020. In that Order the Undersigned, sitting as Special Referee, denied Plaintiff's appeal from the Defendant's refusal to rezone a 1.1-acre parcel of property at 751 Royle Road from R-2 (residential mobile home) to R-3 (commercial mobile home). I have carefully reviewed Plaintiff's motion, Defendant's memorandum in opposition to the motion, Plaintiff's reply to Defendant's opposition, and my original Order. I heard argument on July 10, 2020. For the reasons that follow I must deny Plaintiff's motion.

First, I agree with Plaintiff's logical arguments.¹ As I read the caselaw, in the zoning context arbitrary and capricious (or arbitrary and unreasonable as some decisions put it) means the same thing as not fairly debatable. In fact, the modus tollens syllogism works both ways because fairly debatable and not arbitrary and capricious mean the same thing when referring to judicial review of zoning legislation. Arbitrary and capricious, arbitrary and unreasonable, and not fairly debatable all mean the same thing in this context.

“In order to successfully assault a city's zoning decision, a citizen must establish that the decision was arbitrary and unreasonable.” Knowles v. City of Aiken, 305 S.C. at 224, 407 S.E.2d at 642. “The burden of proving the invalidity of a zoning ordinance is on the party attacking it, and it is incumbent on respondent to show the arbitrary and capricious character of the ordinance through clear and convincing evidence.” Town of Scranton v. Willoughby, 412 S.E.2d 424, 306 S.C. 421 (S.C. 1991) (per curiam). “The Court will not overturn the action of the City if the decision is fairly debatable because the City's action is presumed to have been a valid exercise of power and it is not the prerogative of the Court to pass upon the wisdom of the decision.” Rushing v. City of Greenville, 265 S.C. 285, 217 S.E.2d 797 (S.C. 1975). Judicial review of a legislative decision – e.g., a request to alter a zoning classification – differs from review of a quasi-judicial decision – e.g., granting a variance – in that a legislative body is not required to take evidence or deliberate in a particular way, whereas an administrative body is expected to make evidence-based decisions in accordance with applicable statutory or regulatory standards. “An ordinance rezoning a particular piece of property, like an ordinance adopting a comprehensive zoning plan, is legislation, pure and simple. As such, it is entitled to the presumption of legislative validity. . . . Furthermore, to view the act of rezoning a single tract as a quasi-judicial act . . . would only invite countless challenges, many of which must proceed to the courts for a dispositive adjudication.” Hampton v. Richland County, 292 S.C. 500, 357 S.E.2d 463 (S.C. App. 1986).

2 of 4

Plaintiff makes a valid point that everything is debatable, and the dispositive question is whether the County Council's decision is fairly debatable. Plaintiff's well-articulated frustration in this case, wherein his rezoning request was consistent with the County's Comprehensive Plan and endorsed by the County's planning staff, is reminiscent of Justice Hearn's exasperation in Historic Charleston Found. v. City of Charleston, 400 S.C. 181, 734 S.E.2d 306 (S.C. 2012):

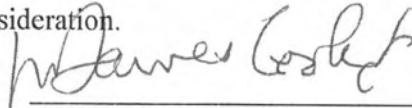

“Thus, while it may be fairly debatable whether a large building is necessary for the continued development of Upper King, it is clear that a 105-foot building on this site would not be in accord with the Plan's requirement of deference to historical structures and respect for the skyline. I certainly am mindful of our role as a court and the admonition that we not become city planners, as well as the high burden a challenger must meet. In purporting to find the ordinance lawful even if it is spot zoning, the majority hides behind this standard and simply writes that we must ‘keep [] in mind the particular circumstances of the case.’ Yet this is exactly what the majority avoids doing, opting instead to allow the City to blatantly ignore its own duly adopted plan.” But Justice Hearn wrote in dissent and the majority of the Court found that the City had acted within its rights albeit contrary to its comprehensive plan.

To be sure, substantial evidence supported Plaintiff's application to re-zone 751 Royle Road and some of the reasons that citizens advanced in opposition to the request were canards. However, as I stated in my original Order it would be unfair to judge a legislative decision by the least persuasive arguments advanced in support of it. Some of those who spoke against the measure expressed genuine and rational concerns about the negative effects that rezoning the property would have. Councilman Jack Schurlknight said, “My concern is about traffic, safety and children”.... “That's a big concern right there.” He also said, “It comes to a tipping point to where you know you got carrying capacity on the road. You got to look at the safety. And that's the direction I'm coming from. Totally.” Council Chairman William Peagler said, “I don't hear anyone saying mobile homes are a bad thing because you live there. However, I do hear concerns about traffic and safety of the residents and children.” Considering the record as a whole, I am compelled to conclude that it is at least fairly debatable whether increasing the density of mobile homes on Plaintiff's parcel would increase traffic congestion, endanger children, or lower property values -- particularly if this became a precedent for future similar requests in that area.

With sincere respect for Mr. Olds and the arguments of his able counsel, for the reasons stated above I must deny the motion for reconsideration.

This matter came before me for hearing as Special Referee by consent of the parties on December 10, 2019.

Present at the hearing were Thomas Goldstein, Esq. of the Charleston County Bar, attorney for the Plaintiff, and his client Todd Olds; John S. West, Esq. and John O. Williams, II, Esq., each of the Berkeley County Bar, attorneys for the Defendants.

The parties have each submitted substantial briefs as supplemented and a stipulated set of exhibits. I have carefully examined and considered these filings as well as the arguments of counsel.

THE ISSUE FOR DETERMINATION

The matter began on January 24, 2017, when the Plaintiff applied to the Berkeley County Council to rezone a 1.1-acre parcel at 751 Royle Road from R-2 (residential mobile home) to R-3 (commercial mobile home) to match the zoning on his adjoining parcel at 749 Royle Road. (T.M.S. Numbers 233-09-02-046 and 233-09-02-007). At the time of Plaintiff's application, he had fifteen mobile homes on 749 Royle Road, the R-3 lot, and three¹ on 751 Royle Road. Plaintiff seeks to have both lots zoned R-3, which, if approved, would allow him to combine the two lots and have a total of twenty-seven mobile homes on them.

The County Planning Department staff recommended approval of the rezoning request "as it provides an opportunity for the development of a diversity of housing options, which align with the Future Land Use Plan and are compatible in the context of the area concerned." The Planning Committee, after holding a public hearing, voted to recommend denial of the request. County Council subsequently voted to deny the request. Plaintiff then filed this suit challenging the legality of the County's refusal to rezone 751 Royle Road.

Plaintiff advances four arguments: First, that the County's refusal to rezone 751 Royle Road to R-3 was arbitrary and unreasonable or capricious and contrary to law; second, that it violated his constitutional right to substantive due process; third, that it violated his constitutional right to equal protection; and fourth, that it violated his constitutional right to procedural due process. The parties have agreed that the only issue that is presently ripe for determination is the Plaintiff's first argument, whether the County's refusal to rezone his property was arbitrary and capricious and contrary to law.²

² It appears that this issue implicates at least substantive due process. "The governing bodies of municipalities clothed with authority to decide residential and industrial districts are better qualified by their knowledge of the situation to act upon these matters than are the courts, and their decisions will not be interfered with unless there is a plain violation of the constitutional rights of citizens." Harbit v. City of Charleston, 382 S.C. 383, 675 S.E.2d 776 (S.C. Ct. App. 2009). Thus, a finding as to the validity of the County's refusal to rezone Plaintiff's property requires a determination of whether it violates Plaintiff's constitutional rights. Nevertheless, this Order should not be construed as deciding any constitutional issues beyond what is specifically necessary to determine whether the County's action was arbitrary and capricious and contrary to law.

The parties agree upon the procedural record before me. They have stipulated to the accuracy, propriety, and completeness of the record for my consideration, which they will file with the Clerk of Court and is incorporated herein by reference. The record embodies and constitutes the salient facts upon which I intend to and do rely in issuing my order and judgment below.

In summary, the record reflects that by application presented to the Berkeley County Planning Department, the Plaintiff/applicant sought to rezone a parcel of land in Berkeley County, South Carolina bearing TMS #233-09-02-046, from an R-2 to an R-3 zoning designation. He did not seek a special exception or variance, but rather sought to rezone the parcel. A successful rezoning would enable the owner to increase the total number of mobile homes on both lots to twenty-seven.

At the time of his application there were two (or three) mobile homes on the subject parcel, each legally non-conforming. Berkeley County Planning Department staff reviewed Appellant's application and recommended that the rezoning request be approved. At a Planning Commission public hearing held on February 28, 2017, staff Planner Ty Adler introduced and explained the application for change in zoning classification. He explained that the applicant intended to rezone 751 Royle Road to R-3 and then combine it with the adjacent 749 Royle Road, which was already zoned R-3. Mr. Adler stated that the proposal aligned with the Comprehensive Plan and would enhance diversity in housing. For these reasons staff recommended approval of the request. Plaintiff/applicant spoke in favor of the request. Several neighboring property owners spoke against the requested rezoning. No member of the general public spoke in favor of the request. The comments are summarized below along with comments later presented to County Council. After hearing from the public and considering the merits of the application for rezoning, the

MD

Planning Commission voted unanimously to recommend to the County Council that it deny the rezoning request.

The matter then continued according to the ordinary procedure and was brought before the County's Land Use & Economic Development Committee on March 13, 2017. Planning staff reported on the status of the application. In her presentation before the Committee, Planning and Zoning Director Alison Simmons testified as follows:

"... Planning Commission recommended denial in a unanimous vote after reviewing the requested change and hearing from many community stakeholders in opposition to the request. Planning Commission found the request incompatible and potentially detrimental in the context of the community concerned. Members of the community present verbalized concerns regarding traffic, saturation of mobile home parks in the area and the diminution of property values and quality of life..."

Following receipt of input from the public and discussion by members of the committee, the Land Use & Economic Development Committee voted 6-2 to deny the rezoning request.

The matter was then presented to the full County Council for action on the proposed ordinance to rezone the subject property at its March 27, 2017 meeting. A Planning staff member again introduced the application and explained it. Plaintiff/applicant spoke in favor of his application. Members of the public appeared and expressed a variety of concerns in the "Public Discussion" period of the hearing, similar to the concerns previously voiced to the Planning Commission. When the question of consideration of first reading on the proposed ordinance to rezone the subject property came for a vote by County Council, Council voted 5-2 to deny the rezoning request.

As reflected in the summary minutes and the video recordings of the proceedings, throughout consideration of the rezoning proposal, opinions for and against the proposal were voiced and for a variety of reasons.

Excerpts of testimony and comments from the video recording of the February 28 and March 27 meetings include inter alia:

- Plaintiff/applicant spoke in support of his application, He stated that he intended to put a quality mobile home park on the property. He did not intend to put "trash" there. He would place security lighting, require vinyl siding, and improve the access road. He said that he intended to own the mobile homes in the park except those that are already there. He stated that this would not be a "thug park." He would "vet" the people applying to live there and would have strict leases. He would allow the Sheriff to have full access. He stated that there is no crime in his North Charleston mobile home park. He intended this to be a quality park and provide affordable housing in accordance with the County's Comprehensive Plan.

Several nearby residents spoke in opposition to the application. Among the statements that they made included the following:

- There is an overabundance of mobile homes in the area. the property is too small for twenty-four mobile homes. He is concerned about children playing in the road.
- The area is saturated with mobile home parks. He is concerned about drug problems, traffic, and children having no place to play.
- He does not want lights and trailers. Kids have come onto his property from the existing mobile home park and gotten into his swimming pool.
- She has had problems with kids in the mobile home park partying and coming across the fence onto her property.
- His property will not appraise for what it is worth because of the mobile homes nearby. Animals are neglected at the park. His wife stated that they have smelled meth being cooked there.
- "In a couple of those (pictures) you will see it is high traffic on this road at certain times of day"... "And yes, I can say that I have put my house up for sale twice and was told by the real estate agent that because of the trailers next door and around in my area that the value of my real estate, I could not get what it would really be worth because it has depreciated" ... "There is a two and a half mile stretch from 17A to 78. It takes approximately twenty to twenty-two minutes to travel both ways or one way in heavy traffic time. We are posed with a major problem with the safety factor of those emergency vehicles going to and from. One person being trapped in a fire, losing one minute can cost him his life".
- Residents have been coming to the Planning Commission for years to protest applications to add more mobile homes, and the Planning Commission has consistently denied those applications.

- "From the four way stop to my house is probably 800 yards, roughly, and it backs up every day. And I've got video standing on my front porch where they're stopped in the road waiting to get through."
- "Traffic and everything on there around Sangaree School. You can't get there in the afternoons or in the mornings for people dropping or picking up kids there. They even park in the highway. You got to sit there and wait for them to get through before you can get through that intersection there around the school. Y'all need to come around there in the afternoons and see what kind of traffic we got on the road."
- "My concern is about traffic, safety and children"... "That's a big concern right there."..."It comes to a tipping point to where you know you got carrying capacity on the road. You got to look at the safety. And that's the direction I'm coming from. Totally." Councilman Jack Schurlknight. He also stated that he has been down Royle Road many times. He has seen a "lot of stuff" going on in the area. It does devalue the property.
- "I don't hear anyone saying mobile homes are a bad thing because you live there. However, I do hear concerns about traffic and safety of the residents and children." Supervisor and Chairman of County Council William Peagler.
- One resident stated that he had counted thirteen mobile home parks on Royle Road, containing 316 mobile homes. He also stated that eleven applications to add mobile homes had been denied since 2002. He stated that he had put his house up for sale twice but his real estate agent told him that he can't get what the house is worth because of the mobile homes next to his property. He also complained about constant traffic and drug activity in the area. He complained about traffic safety, saying that he had seen someone hit by a car.
- One resident presented a petition signed by other neighbors opposing the application.

ANALYSIS AND FINDINGS OF FACT

A. Standard of Review

Though the parties emphasize different factors for consideration, they agree on the basic standards of review, which are well established: "Zoning is a legislative act which will not be interfered with by the courts unless there is a clear violation of citizen's constitutional rights. In order to successfully assault a city's zoning decision, a citizen must establish that the decision was arbitrary and capricious. Byrd, et al. v. City of North Augusta, 261 S.C. 591, 201 S.E.2d 744 (1974)." Knowles v. City of Aiken, 305 S.C. 219, 407 S.E.2d 639 (S.C. 1991). "The governing bodies of municipalities clothed with authority to decide residential and industrial districts are better qualified by their knowledge of the situation to act upon these matters than are the courts, and their decisions will not be interfered with unless there is a plain violation of the constitutional rights of citizens.” Harbit v. City of Charleston, 382 S.C. 383, 675 S.E.2d 776 (S.C. Ct. App. 2009). “‘Courts cannot become city planners but can only correct injustices when they are clearly shown to result from municipal action.’ Knowles v. City of Aiken, 305 S.C. 219, 222, 407 S.E.2d 639, 642 (1991). ‘In order to successfully assault a city’s zoning decision, a citizen must establish that the decision was arbitrary and unreasonable.’ Id. at 224, 407 S.E.2d at 642. ‘And in the context of a zoning action involving property, it must be clear that the state’s action ‘has no foundation in reason and is a mere arbitrary or irrational exercise of power having no substantial relation to the public health, the public morals, the public safety or the public welfare in its proper sense.’ Sylvia Dev. Corp. v. Calvert County, 48 F.3d 810, 827 (4th Cir.1995) (quoting Nectow v. Cambridge, 277 U.S. 183, 187–88, 48 S.Ct. 447, 72 L.Ed. 842 (1928)).” Dunes West Golf Club, LLC v. Town of Mount Pleasant, 401 S.C. 280, 737 S.E.2d 601 (S.C. 2013). A legislative zoning decision should not be overturned so long as the decision is “fairly debatable.” Rushing v. City of Greenville, 265 S.C. 285, 217 S.E.2d 797 (1975). “[A] decision of a municipal zoning board will be overturned if it is arbitrary, capricious, has no reasonable relation to a lawful purpose, or if the board has abused its discretion.” Austin v. Board of Zoning Appeals, 362 S.C. 29, 606 S.E.2d 209 (Ct. App. 2004).

The essential difference between the parties’ legal positions is that the County asserts that the Council’s March 27, 2017 vote on the Plaintiff’s request for rezoning is a rational legislative action of Berkeley County government to which the Court must yield, while the Plaintiff asserts that the County’s decision to deny rezoning is based upon nothing but unsupported, pejorative speculation that reduces the decision to an arbitrary and capricious decision, and that the decision conflicts with the County's express legislative decision in its Comprehensive Plan. The Plaintiff asserts that the County's political decision to deny the rezoning application under these circumstances reduces the decision to an arbitrary and capricious action that conflicts with the County's fact-based, rational legislative expression on Plaintiff's parcel.

B. Was Berkeley County's Action Arbitrary and Capricious Because it Was Based on Unsupported, Pejorative Speculation?

Plaintiff contends that the decision of Berkeley County Council to deny his rezoning request was arbitrary and capricious or unreasonable because it was based on nothing but unsupported, pejorative speculation that renders its decision an arbitrary and capricious one. In support of his contention Plaintiff relies on and cites the cases of I'On, LLC v. Town of Mt. Pleasant, 338 S.C. 406, 526 S.E.2d 716 (2000) and Village of Willowbrook v. Olech, 528 U.S. 562, 120 S. Ct. 1073 (2000) as well as Purdy v. Moise, 223 S.C. 298, 75 S.E.2d 605 (1953) and Wyndham Enterprises, Inc. v. City of North Augusta, 401 S.C. 144, 735 S.E.2d 659 (Ct. App. 2012), among others.

Defendants rely on what they contend to be well-settled South Carolina law that provides that rezoning decisions are presumptively valid, and a property owner bears the burden of proving otherwise. Bear Enterprises v. County of Greenville, 319 S.C. 137, 459 S.E.2d 883 (Ct. App. 1995). They contend that the decision not to rezone Plaintiff's property was at least fairly debatable, notwithstanding the intemperate and unsupported nature of some of the public comments in favor of the decision. In support of their position Defendants further cite Lenardis v. City of Greenville, 316 S.C. 471, 450 S.E.2d 597 (Ct. App. 1994) (propriety of city's decision in refusing to rezone property from office use to commercial use was not so unreasonable as to impair or destroy property owner's constitutional rights; owner bought property as speculative investment with full knowledge of existing zoning and surrounding commercial development, and vast majority of surrounding property in city was residential); Harbit v. City of Charleston, 382 S.C. 383, 675 S.E.2d 776 (Ct. App. 2009), as amended (May 4, 2009) (City's denial of application to rezone property consisting of house on corner lot from residential to limited commercial use was fairly debatable and not so unreasonable as to impair or destroy property owner's constitutional rights, even though other similarly situated properties on one of two bordering streets were zoned for limited commercial use). Defendants further posit that to overcome the presumption of validity there must be an absence of any evidence supporting the legislative action of County Council. Town of Scranton v. Willoughby, 306 S.C. 421, 412 S.E.2d 424 (1991). In Willoughby the court noted that the zoning ordinance was enacted "for the purpose of promoting the health, safety, morals, and general welfare of the community." Id. at 422, 412 S.E.2d at 425. Defendants contend that is also the case here. WAC

Defendants also emphasize that Berkeley County Council has been vested with the following powers by state law:

All counties of the State, in addition to the powers conferred to their specific form of government, have authority to enact regulations, resolutions, and ordinances, not inconsistent with the Constitution and general law of this State, including the exercise of these powers in relation to health and order in counties or respecting any subject as appears to them necessary and proper for the security, general welfare, and convenience of counties or for preserving health, peace, order, and good government in them. The powers of a county must be liberally construed in favor of the county and the specific mention of particular powers may not be construed as limiting in any manner the general powers of counties. S.C. Code Ann. § 4-9-25.

With respect to its zoning ordinances, Defendants contend that Berkeley County Council must abide by the following statutory mandate:

(A) Zoning ordinances must be for the general purposes of guiding development in accordance with existing and future needs and promoting the public health, safety, morals, convenience, order, appearance, prosperity, and general welfare.

S.C. Code Ann. § 6-29-710.

Defendants further point out that Berkeley County has adopted a county-wide zoning ordinance. It is known as the Berkeley County Zoning and Development Standards Ordinance, ("Zoning Ordinance") effective August 28, 2001. All purposes of the Zoning Ordinance are stated in Article 1.2. Defendants argue that there are many stated purposes, which are not mutually exclusive. They cite the "Purpose and Authority" article, which reads as follows:

ARTICLE 1. - PURPOSE AND AUTHORITY

1.1. - Authority.

This ordinance is adopted pursuant to the statutory authority conferred by S.C. Code 1976, § 6-29-710 et seq., as amended.

1.2. - Purpose.

It is the purpose of this ordinance to:

- A. Implement the goals and policies outlined in the Berkeley County comprehensive plan;
- B. Provide for adequate light, air, and open space;
- C. Prevent the overcrowding of land, to avoid undue concentration of population, and to lessen congestion in the streets;
- D. Facilitate the creation of a convenient, attractive, and harmonious community; to protect and preserve scenic, historic, or ecologically sensitive areas;
- E. Regulate the density and distribution of populations and the uses of buildings, structures and land for trade, industry, residence, recreation, agriculture, forestry, conservation, airports and approaches thereto, water supply, sanitation, and public activities;
- F. Facilitate the adequate provision or availability of transportation, police and fire protection, water, sewage, schools, parks, and other recreational facilities, affordable housing, and disaster evacuation;
- G. Distribution of population and traffic that will tend to create conditions favorable to health, safety, convenience, appearance, prosperity, morals, order, and the general welfare of the county.

Defendants claim that the legislative actions of the Planning Commission, the Land Use & Economic Development Committee and the full County Council to retain the previously established R-2 zoning designation on the subject property are consistent with several of the purposes of the Zoning Ordinance.

Defendants also argue that it is significant that the matter before the court is not an appeal from the Board of Zoning Appeals, ("BZA"), which by county ordinance prescribes the duties and requirements of the BZA³. Defendants assert that the BZA is a quasi-judicial body not answerable to the voters. This court should distinguish the roles, functions and imperatives placed upon the BZA and that of County Council and the presumptions granted by law to the decisions of County Council. In other words, Defendants contend that County Council is not required, nor are individual members of Council required to announce the reasons for their decisions and actions in open session or in writing with associated findings and reasons. This court must, in Defendants' view, practice judicial restraint and not supplant its judgment for the local government's legislative judgment. Lenardis, et al., supra.

Defendants acknowledge that the County Planning staff here found that the requested rezoning was consistent with the Comprehensive Plan, but Defendants contend that the elected officials, possessed with their legislative authority, determined that staff's recommendation, although a proper consideration, was outweighed by other considerations rooted in public safety, health, and welfare, among other proper purposes. Defendants argue that the mere fact that the Planning Commission and the County Council reached a decision different from that recommended by Planning staff does not render the final decision arbitrary and capricious. The decision was for the Council to make, after due deliberations and taking into account all of the facts. Greb v. Bd. of Comm'rs for Klamath County, 32 Or. App. 39, 573 P.2d 733 (1978) (each county governing body is required to retain responsibility for land use planning within its county, and is therefore vested with authority to make county land use decisions; county board of commissioners is not bound by recommendations of county planning commission even if supported by substantial evidence); Adams v. City of Richmond, 340 S.W.2d 204 (Ky. 1960) (zoning is vested by statute in the city legislative body, and it had power to override or reject a recommendation of the zoning commission which merely makes recommendations).

³ Berkeley County Zoning Ordinance 21.6. - Decisions of the board of zoning appeals. All final decisions and orders of the board must be in writing and be permanently filed as a public record. All findings of fact and conclusions of law must be separately stated in final decisions or orders of the board, which must be delivered to parties of interest by certified mail.

I agree that there is a distinction between judicial appellate review of an administrative decision and judicial scrutiny of a legislative decision. A legislative body is not expected to make an evidentiary record or to articulate the bases for its decisions as would stand up to judicial appellate review. Rather – as the above-cited caselaw holds – legislative actions must be upheld if there is even a fairly debatable basis to support them. WDC

I find that the Plaintiff made a compelling argument to the County in favor of his rezoning application and the Planning staff agreed with his argument. Plaintiff credibly promised to improve the overall character of the properties, which already contain mobile homes. The number of mobile homes that he proposed to add was very small compared to the number of mobile homes already on Royle Road. Plaintiff correctly pointed out that his proposal to increase availability of affordable housing was consistent with the County's Comprehensive Plan. On the other hand, not all of the reasons advanced in opposition to Plaintiff's application can be labeled unsupported, pejorative speculation. To be sure, some of the public comments made in opposition to Plaintiff's application were intemperate and unsupported by empirical evidence. Yet, legislative action or inaction must not be judged by the least compelling arguments advanced to support it. Plaintiff himself told the Planning Commission that his proposed mobile home park would not be “trash” or a “thug park.” It would be unfair to judge the County’s legislative decision because of public comments – however pejorative, uninformed, and speculative – that were made in that same vein. Further, neighbors’ fears about increased housing density and its attendant aggravation of traffic congestion and increased burden on infrastructure are fairly debatable. Certainly Plaintiff’s proposed addition to these social problems would be minimal in comparison to the existing burdens. However, evidence in the record suggests that the residents of that area had for years consistently opposed more mobile homes and the County had consistently denied applications for them. Arguably the County would be hard-pressed to deny future similar rezoning applications if it granted Plaintiff’s application, so Council could reasonably believe that approving Plaintiff’s application would lead them down a slippery slope.

My conclusion is best summarized by the following statement: “While the landowner here ... do[es] not embrace this choice of zoning, other residents in close proximity applaud this zoning. While the landowner may not agree and may be able to convince this Court not to agree with the City’s zoning choice, that is not the issue before [me]. [I] cannot insinuate [my] judgment into a review of the City’s decision. Rather, [I] must leave the City’s decision undisturbed if the propriety of that decision is even ‘fairly debatable.’ Rushing v. City of Greenville, 265 S.C. 285, 288, 217 S.E.2d 797, 799 (1975); Hampton v. Richland County, 292 S.C. 500, 503, 357 S.E.2d 463, 465 (Ct.App.1987), cert. denied, 296 S.C. 72, 370 S.E.2d 714 (1988).” Knowles v. City of Aiken, 305 S.C. 219, 407 S.E.2d 639 (S.C. 1991). Based on the foregoing considerations, I find that Plaintiff has not met his considerable burden of proving that the Defendants’ legislative action was arbitrary and capricious because it was based on factually unsupported, pejorative public opinion.

C. Was Berkeley County's Action Arbitrary and Capricious Because it Violates the County's Comprehensive Plan?

I find more troubling Plaintiff's argument that the County's refusal to rezone his property to R-3 is arbitrary and capricious because it conflicts with the County's legislatively-enacted Comprehensive Plan. Plaintiff argues here, as he did before the Planning Commission and before County Council, that his application should be approved because it supports the goals expressed in the Comprehensive Plan and was in fact specifically provided for in the Plan. The Planning Commission staff found this argument compelling and recommended approval of the application on this basis. Plaintiff argues that the Comprehensive Plan was the product of extensive study, public input, and legislative deliberation. The Plan was adopted by ordinance, so it is entitled to at least as much judicial deference as the legislative decision that Plaintiff now challenges. Plaintiff contends that Council's refusal to rezone his property was arbitrary, capricious, and unreasonable not only because it was based on unsupported and pejorative opposition by nearby residents, but because that opposition was contrary to law as embodied in the Comprehensive Plan. I found this argument sufficiently troubling that I asked the parties to brief specifically the question whether the Comprehensive Plan has the force of law.

By way of counter to Plaintiff's contention that the Comprehensive Plan has the force of law, Defendants argue that while the Comprehensive Plan is undeniably the creation and product of a lawful process, the plan itself is not law. Defendants call attention to the words of the Plan. Specifically, Defendants cite the Introduction, which states in pertinent part:

Since the passage of Berkeley County's 2004 Comprehensive Plan Update, continued growth and development has led to a changing set of issues, goals and needs for the jurisdiction. The 2010 Comprehensive Plan is a document intended to both identify the important positive attributes and components which continue to define Berkeley County, while guiding the growth and development of Berkeley County for the next fifteen to twenty years. It is, in essence, a new blueprint for the County's future.

(emphasis added). Defendants further reference the Purpose of the Plan, which states in pertinent part:

The purpose of the Plan is to provide a snapshot of where the County is currently, and to set forth goals for future land use and development with specific policies and recommended strategies for achieving these goals. The plan will guide decision-makers when making decisions, policies and laws regarding the future development of land, provision of essential community facilities, and preservation of natural and cultural resources. It is intended to generate local pride and enthusiasm about the future of the community, thereby ensuring that citizens are involved with the implementation of the Plan.

The goals in this Plan do not supersede those adopted by individual jurisdictions, however identifies areas where coordinated planning should be done on inter-jurisdictional issues that affect both the County and its municipalities.

The result is a concise, user-friendly document intended to operate in conjunction with adopted and amended zoning and land use regulations, in that issues identified in the Plan may be addressed through the development of suitable regulations and ordinances consistent with the policies identified in the Comprehensive Plan. The purpose of the 2010 Comprehensive Plan is to serve as a mechanism for which future land use and development decisions can be made that will help shape the future of Berkeley County.

MBC

(emphasis added). Defendants also highlight the Vision of the Plan, which states in pertinent part:

Throughout the planning process, Planning Commission and citizen input has consistently come back to the same basic ideas or principles of how Berkeley County is envisioned. This includes concerns over issues such as rapid growth, adequate infrastructure and quality of life; and hopes such as better planning, more jobs and preservation.

Based on the information gathered, the following overall vision has been expressed and embraced:

Berkeley County is a vibrant community that embraces its history while promoting growth and development. The County will continue to promote sustainability and livability by implementing the following five guiding principles of the adopted comprehensive plan:

- Protect and promote distinctive, diverse communities;
- Manage infrastructure systems effectively and expand them efficiently;
- Respect and enhance historical and natural resources and expand their public accessibility;

- Make recreational opportunities--- both active and passive---available county-wide; and
- Draft a clear, fair plan to be implemented through simplified costs and streamlined processes.

(emphasis added).

Defendants also point to the Plan Implementation section of the Plan, which states in pertinent part:

The Comprehensive Plan is part of an ongoing process... the policies in this Plan are intended to be building blocks for future planning efforts and land development decisions.

Defendants further cite state law on the subject of a comprehensive plan. They claim that a plan is intended to be a guide to decision-makers. They call specific attention to Title 6, Chapter 7 of the South Carolina Code of Laws, under the heading Planning by Local Governments which provides as follows:

The intent of this chapter is to enable municipalities and counties acting individually or in concert to preserve and enhance their present advantages, to overcome their present handicaps, and to prevent or minimize such future problems as may be foreseen. To accomplish this intent local governments are encouraged to plan for future development; to prepare, adopt, and from time to time revise, a comprehensive plan to guide future local development; and to participate in a regional planning organization to coordinate local planning and development with that of the surrounding region. As aids in the implementation of the comprehensive plan local governments are encouraged to adopt and enforce appropriate land use controls, and cooperate with other governmental authorities. (emphasis added).

The provisions of this chapter are declared to be necessary for the promotion, protection, and improvement of the public health, safety, comfort, good order, appearance, convenience, prosperity, morals, and general welfare.

Any county or municipality may, but shall not be required to, exercise any of the powers granted by this chapter. Whenever such a governing authority shall elect to exercise any of the powers granted by this chapter, such powers shall be exercised in the manner hereinafter prescribed. S.C. Code Ann. § 6-7-10.

Declaration of Purpose.

(emphasis added).

Within Title 6, Chapter 29 of the South Carolina Code of Laws, The South Carolina Local Government Comprehensive Planning Enabling Act of 1994 are found the following:

(A) The local planning commission shall develop and maintain a planning process which will result in the systematic preparation and continual re-evaluation and updating of those elements considered critical, necessary, and desirable to guide the development and redevelopment of its area of jurisdiction. S.C. Code Ann. § 6-29-510. Planning process; elements; comprehensive plan. (emphasis added).

(A) Zoning ordinances must be for the general purposes of guiding development in accordance with existing and future needs and promoting the public health, safety, morals, convenience, order, appearance, prosperity, and general welfare. To these ends, zoning ordinances must be made with reasonable consideration of the following purposes, where applicable:

- (1) to provide for adequate light, air, and open space;
- (2) to prevent the overcrowding of land, to avoid undue concentration of population, and to lessen congestion in the streets;
- (3) to facilitate the creation of a convenient, attractive, and harmonious community;
- (4) to protect and preserve scenic, historic, or ecologically sensitive areas;
- (5) to regulate the density and distribution of populations and the uses of buildings, structures and land for trade, industry, residence, recreation, agriculture, forestry, conservation, airports and approaches thereto, water supply, sanitation, protection against floods, public activities, and other purposes;
- (6) to facilitate the adequate provision or availability of transportation, police and fire protection, water, sewage, schools, parks, and other recreational facilities, affordable housing, disaster evacuation, and other public services and requirements. "Other public requirements" which the local governing body intends to address by a particular ordinance or action must be specified in the preamble or some other part of the ordinance or action;
- (7) to secure safety from fire, flood, and other dangers; and
- (8) to further the public welfare in any other regard specified by a local governing body.

S.C. Code Ann. §6-29-710 (emphasis added).

Not all of the text cited above is relevant to the inquiry here. Some of the cited subjective, aspirational language appears to be explanation of the considerations that went into the development of the Plan, not what the Plan would mean after it was legislatively adopted. Nevertheless, nothing in the Comprehensive Plan suggests that it was intended to supplant the County's zoning ordinance or preempt the legislative zoning authority vested in County Council. The Plan includes five "Guiding Principles", each of which is supported by various "Goals and Policies." The First Guiding Principle is, "Berkeley County will protect and promote the existence of distinctive and diverse, sustainable communities within its boundaries." In adopting the Plan, County Council did not declare that the Future Land Use Map would dictate all future zoning classifications. In fact, the Plan states (at p. 10) that "A summary of modifications proposed for the adopted Future Land Use Map is provided on subsequent pages, followed by a Future Land Use Map that has been revised to illustrate these modifications and is proposed for adoption." (Emphasis added).

The South Carolina Local Government Comprehensive Planning Enabling Act of 1994 requires counties to follow specific procedures when they propose to build infrastructure that conflicts with their comprehensive plans. The statute requires any new structure, use or project be compatible with the adopted plan. Any proposal found to be in conflict with the plan must undergo an intensive statutory process to include required comments and findings by the Planning Commission prior to approval. S.C. Code Ann. § 6-29-540. This process applies to county infrastructure improvements. No such provision exists with regard to zoning decisions for private property, either in state law or under Berkeley County ordinances. This omission strongly suggests that the Comprehensive Plan is not intended to dictate the County's zoning decisions for private property.

The Comprehensive Plan does have the force of law, since it was formally adopted by Ordinance. Nevertheless, nothing in the Plan suggests that it was intended to dictate future zoning classifications for specific parcels of property. Indeed, the Plan itself is subject to review and revision every five years, so it cannot have been intended to decide all future zoning questions. That the Plaintiff's application to rezone his property was consistent with the Comprehensive Plan is certainly a strong point in his favor. However, it is not enough to overcome his extremely high burden of proving that the merits of Council's legislative decision are not at least fairly debatable.

CONCLUSIONS OF LAW

I conclude as a matter of law as follows:

1. This court has jurisdiction over the parties and the subject matter;
2. Venue is proper;
3. Plaintiff has failed to meet his burden of proving that the legislative decision of County Council in denying his rezoning request was arbitrary and capricious or unreasonable;
4. While members of County Council are not required to announce the reasons for their votes, and the standards applicable to a vote by County Council are not governed by the same requirements as the BZA, there is sufficient evidence in the record of expressed concerns by members of Council about traffic, safety, and quality of life which are legitimate and statutorily sanctioned legislative considerations;
5. While there are statements in the record made by members of the public in open session which were highly charged and emotionally based, there is no evidence in the record suggesting that Council adopted, embraced, approved, or sanctioned those comments or that the comments formed a basis for its vote;

6. There are statements in the record by members of the public in open session which are based on their personal observations and experiences and are directed to traffic, safety and quality of life concerns;
7. The Comprehensive Plan, while legislatively adopted, does not supplant the County zoning ordinances or preempt County Council's future legislative zoning decisions;
8. The matter before County Council was fairly debatable and was fairly debated;
9. County Council's decision to deny Plaintiff's rezoning request was and is a proper exercise of its legislative prerogative;
10. The legislative decision by public vote of County Council should not be upset or set aside; and
11. The parties have agreed that the Plaintiff's constitutional arguments are not before the undersigned for decision. Accordingly, I make no findings as to any constitutional issue, unless and except to the extent that constitutional issues are necessarily implicated in finding that County Council's legislative decision was not arbitrary or capricious.

MAC

ORDER

Based on the record before me, which is ample, complete and proper, and the arguments of counsel, it is ordered, adjudged and decreed that Plaintiff's appeal, be and the same hereby is DENIED; provided, however, that I make no ruling on Plaintiff's constitutional claims except as stated above.

 MARY P. BROWN
 CLERK OF COURT
 BERKELEY COUNTY, S.C.

The Plaintiff above named, complaining of the Defendants above named, alleges and says as follows:

1. The Plaintiff is a citizen and resident of the County of Charleston, South Carolina and owns an interest in the two parcels of real property involved in this action, which are located in Berkeley County.
2. The Defendant, Berkeley County, a county governmental entity organized and existing pursuant to the laws of the State of South Carolina, existing entirely in Berkeley County, State of South Carolina.
3. The Defendant, Berkeley County Planning Commission, is an agency of Berkeley County, organized and existing pursuant to the Local Comprehensive Planning Act of 1994, 6-29-10, et. seq. and has the duties proscribed by South Carolina law pursuant to § 6-29-710, S. C. Code Ann.
4. The real property involved is located on Royle Road, which is located in Berkeley County.
5. The Court has jurisdiction over the parties hereto and the subject matter herein in accordance with § 6-29-760. S. C. Code, ann.
6. This action is, in part, an appeal from a decision of the Berkley County Council, which voted 7-2 on Monday, March 27, 2017, to disallow the rezoning of the plaintiff's parcel on Royle Road even though the County Planning Department Staff recommend that the request for rezoning be granted in order to bring the parcel in conformity with the County's future land use map and to be consistent with the County's Comprehensive Plan.

7. On January 27, 2017, the plaintiff filed a request for rezoning for a 1.29 acre parcel of land known as tax map # 233-09-02-046, Royle Road, near Farmington Road and Interstate 26. Plaintiff requested that the parcel be rezoned from R-2 (mobile home residential) to R-3 (mobile home commercial) to be in conformity with the zoning on the adjoining parcel, over which plaintiff also owns an executory interest, and to be consistent with Berkeley County's Future Land Use Map and its Comprehensive Plan. (There are currently 13 mobile homes on the adjoining parcel as allowed by R-3 zoning, and 2 mobile homes on the 1.29 acre parcel of land as legal, non-conforming uses.)

8. After filing the request for rezoning, the Berkeley County Planning Commission staff conducted a site visit and investigated the facts and circumstances surrounding the application. After the staff of the Berkeley County Planning Department completed its investigation, it prepared a report recommending approval of the request in order to bring the parcel in conformity with the surrounding zoning and to be consistent with the County's Future Land Use Map and the County's Comprehensive Plan:

Staff Recommendation: APPROVAL – Staff recommends approval of this request as it provides an opportunity for the development of a diversity of housing options, which align with Future Land Use Plan and are compatible in the context to the areas concerned. The proposed use of the property is compatible with surrounding land uses. There is also an understanding between the applicant and the Planning Department that parcels 233-09-02-046 and 233-09-02-007 will be combined and recorded prior to third reading at County Council.

9. On February 28, 2017, the Planning Commission heard public comments on the request for rezoning and a number of residents appeared and spoke against the rezoning stating that allowing additional mobile homes in the area would lead to crime, drug use, threats to children, noise, and increased traffic. The residents asserted that it is well known that people residing in mobile homes are less likely to be law abiding citizens and more likely to engage in illegal drug use and commit crimes.

10. After listening to the complaints of neighbors about the difference in quality of persons who reside in mobile homes, the Planning Commission voted unanimously to recommend to County Council that it deny the request based on the concerns of members of the public.

11. On Monday, March 27, 2017, the same members of the public appeared before County Council and made the same arguments to County Council that persons residing in mobile homes are more likely to use illegal drugs, commit crimes, create noise, and constitute a danger to children. The County Council voted 7 – 2 to deny the request stating that the decision is based on the concerns of the members of the public who showed up and made unsubstantiated allegations against people who live in mobile homes.

12. The decision of the Planning Commission and County Council is controlled by a clear error of law and based upon irrational, arbitrary conclusions based on unsupported prejudice that persons who live in mobile homes present a danger to the community.

13. The South Carolina Local Government Comprehensive Planning Enabling Act of 1994 requires that Berkeley County prepare and adopt “a planning process which will result in the systematic preparation and continual re-evaluation and updating of those elements considered critical, necessary, and desirable to guide the development and redevelopment of its area of jurisdiction.” § 6-29-510(A) In accordance with this directive, Berkeley County prepared and adopted a Comprehensive Plan that calls for the plaintiff’s tract to be zoned R-3. Plaintiff’s application for rezoning was to bring his parcel into zoning conformity with the adjoining parcels and to conform to the designation of the area as R-3 by the County’s Comprehensive Plan.

14. The Berkeley County Comprehensive Plan calls for the plaintiff’s tract to be zoned RR-4, which the governing authority is required to implement. § 6-29-720(A): “The zoning ordinance shall create zoning districts of such numbers have, and size as the governing authority determines to be best suited to carry out the purposes of this chapter.” As determined by the Berkeley County Comprehensive Plan and Future Land Use Map, the County determined that the plaintiff’s parcel is “best suited” as R-3 as that designation is consisted with the County’s plan and consistent with the surrounding uses.

15. Rather than adhere to Berkeley County’s Comprehensive Plan, the Planning Commission and the County Council voted to deny plaintiff’s request based on its view that plaintiff’s application is “not what the residents of Royle Road want.” The residents of Royle

Road characterized the residents of mobile homes as being drug users, criminals, and a danger to the community despite such allegations being without any evidentiary support.

16. Because the County failed to comply with its Code of Ordinances, Article I, Section 1.2, when it failed to rezone the subject property in order to implement the goals of the Comprehensive Plan, the County's decision is, therefore, controlled by an error of law, and is arbitrary, irrational and not supported by any rational or scientific reason. Because of the refusal to rezone to conform to the legislative findings of the Comprehensive Plan, the County's amendment and refusal to correct same must be overturned because it has no rational relationship to any legitimate interest of government as expressed by the County in its governing ordinances. Instead of applying the controlling ordinances and the Comprehensive Plan, the Planning Commission and the County Council accepted complaining citizens' unsupported allegations that that residents of mobile homes are more likely than other residents to commit crimes, make noise, or present a danger to children.

FOR A SECOND CAUSE OF ACTION (Violation of Equal Protection)

(Appeal from City Council—substantive/procedural due process)

17. The plaintiff repeats the above allegations as if set forth here verbatim.

18. Berkeley County Council singled out plaintiff's parcel and treated it differently from the surrounding parcels solely because the County found that "the residents of Royal Road do not want this." There is no rational or scientific reason to treat the plaintiff's property differently from the identically situated parcels in the area that are zoned RR-4 in conformity with Berkeley County's Comprehensive Plan.

FOR A THIRD CAUSE OF ACTION
(Procedural Due Process)

19. The plaintiff repeats the above allegations as if set forth here verbatim.

20. By ignoring its statutory duty to adhere to the Berkeley County Comprehensive Plan and ignoring the findings and recommendations of staff and by accepting the unsubstantiated statements of property owners that the residents of mobile homes are more likely than residents of custom homes to cause crime, use illegal drugs, create noise, and constitute a danger to children, the County deprived the plaintiff of procedural due process.

FOR A FOURTH CAUSE OF ACTION
(§ 1983, U. S. C. ann.; Article I § 22 S. C. Constitution)

21. The plaintiff repeats the above allegations as if set forth here verbatim.

22. The City's refusal to adhere to its own Comprehensive Plan and Future Land Use Map based solely on unsubstantiated allegations that residents of mobile homes are undesirable persons is so arbitrary and capricious that it falls outside of the perimeter of the lawful exercise of legislative authority, and deprived the plaintiff of substantive due process and the right to use his property to its highest and best use. The County's action is so far beyond the limits of legitimate governmental action, that no process could cure the deficiency.

23. The plaintiff is entitled to trial by jury on his claim for violation of civil rights and for judgment against the City in such amounts as a jury may find to be due.

FOR A FIFTH CAUSE OF ACTION
(Damages and Attorney's fees § 15-77-300, 310, §30-4-100, S. C. Code, ann, 42 § 1988 U.S.C. Code, ann.)

24. The plaintiff repeats the above allegations as if set forth here verbatim.

25. As a direct and proximate result of the County's failure to adhere to its Comprehensive Plan and Future Land Use Map, relying instead on unsupported and prejudicial comments by members of the public directed against the residents of mobile homes as undesirable persons, the County's refusal to rezone the plaintiff's parcel to be consistent with the identically situated properties without substantial justification, and the County's refusal forced the plaintiff to incur attorney's fees and costs to protect his property rights, which the Defendants have denied him under color of law, and the plaintiff is entitled to an award of attorney's fees as authorized by § 15-77-300, S. C. Code, ann. And 42 § 1988 U.S.C. Code, ann.

26. The plaintiff is entitled to an award of a reasonable attorney's fees because the City's actions taken against him are without substantial justification and there are no circumstances that would make an award of attorney's fees in this case unjust.

FOR A SIXTH CAUSE OF ACTION
(Demand for Pre-litigation mediation § 6-29-825, S. C. Code, ann.)

27. The plaintiff demands pre-litigation mediation as set forth in § 6-29-825, S. C. Code, ann.

WHEREFORE, having fully set forth his complaint, the Plaintiff prays an order of the Court;

- a. Granting the Plaintiff the right to pre-litigation mediation and in the event such mediation fails, then a trial by jury on the actions at law for damages and for judgment for both actual and punitive damages as determined by the jury;
- b. Directing Berkeley County to rezone the plaintiff's parcel to be in conformity with the Berkeley County Comprehensive Plan and Future Land Use Map;
- c. Vacating the action taken by County Council on March 27, 2017, as void as a matter of law;

PLAINTIFF'S AFFIDAVIT IN SUPPORT OF MOTION FOR SUMMARY JUDGMENT

2018 AUG -2 AM 9:57

 CLERK OF COURT
 BERKELEY COUNTY, S.C.

Personally appeared before me, Todd Olds, who being duly sworn, does depose and say:

I am the plaintiff in this action. I acquired the 1.29 acre of property that is the subject of this action in 2017. The parcel is known as 749-751 Royle Road, T.M.S. or T.M.S. No. 233-09-02046. Prior to purchasing the parcel, I did due diligence and saw that Berkeley County had designated the parcel to be rezoned from single family mobile home residence (R-2, which allows 3 units per acre) to multi-family mobile home residential (R-3, which allows 12 units per acre). The property is surrounded by mobile home parks, and the parcel to the South is zoned R-3. The parcel to the West is zoned OI (Office Industrial) and currently occupied by a church. The Planning Department describes the property as:

The subject property currently contains multiple mobile homes and is adjacent to R-3 property along Royle Rd. The parcel is located just off Farmington Td./I-26, adjacent to a R-3 property also owned by Bonnell Meese. There are multiple R-3 mobile home parks as well as multiple non-conforming R-2 mobile home parks.

“Existing Uses and Adjacent Property Information” Staff Report to County Council

On January 27, 2017, I filed a request for rezoning of the 1.29-acre parcel to bring it into conformity with the adjoining lot and in conformity with the County’s Future Land Use Map and

Comprehensive Plan. As the Planning Department described it, Royle Road is a highly traveled arterial road near Farmington Road and Interstate 26. (See attached map.)

As required by County Ordinance and state law, the Planning Department staff prepared a report and recommendation recommending "APPROVAL" for the rezoning and reported its findings to the Planning Commission and to County Council that the Council should rezone the parcel to R-3 for the reasons set forth above.

On February 13, 2017, I appeared before the Planning Commission to be heard on my application. Consistent with their written report, the County Planning Staff recommended that the parcel be rezoned to R-3 to be consistent with the County's Comprehensive Plan and Future Land Use Map. See attached staff report. At the Planning Commission, and later before County Council, three residents voiced objections to the rezoning, articulating unsupported allegations about persons who reside in mobile homes, speculation about devaluation of property, and concerns with "traffic safety." According to the three residents who spoke, people who reside in mobile homes do not look after their property, support drug use, commit crimes, and do not care for their children. The opponents could not articulate any reason for disallowance other than complaints that the character of the area has changed from "country living" and their bias against persons who live in mobile homes and their unsupported claims that their property values would be diminished.

Even though the County's Planning Department recommended rezoning in order to bring the parcel into conformity with the surrounding zoning and to make the parcel consistent with the Future Land Use Map of the Comprehensive Plan, the Planning Commission voted unanimously to recommend to County Council to deny the request because of the objections voiced by residents in the area.

On March 27, 2017, the application came before the County Council, and the same residents appeared and voiced the same objections. Three residents of Royle Road spoke in opposition:

- Raymond Hedden, 760 Royle Road. Mr. Hedden told Council that he had counted 13 mobile home parks in the immediate area, apparently unaware that this factor supports the rezoning. He told Council that there are 316 trailers on Royle Road between Highways 17-A and 78, again, apparently, unaware that this fact supports the rezoning. He then told Council that “they” are well aware of the “crime” issue and that he has personally witnessed cars travelling up and down dirt roads “looking for a particular trailer.” He then complained that mobile home residents do not take care of their property because they “left everything out in the open and have no privacy fences.” Chair Schurlknight then asked Mr. Hedden how long he lived there, and he replied since 1982, echoing the comments of the other speakers that they objected to the change of the area from “country living” to “trailer parks.” In a colloquy with Chair Schurlknight, the Chair expressed that he too was concerned with “traffic safety” and “children.”
- James E. Jackson, 769 Royle Road, spoke. He said that he leased the subject property for 18 years and that people who settled there, settled there for “country living” on lots of 3 acres and larger. He then said there is a huge problem with Sangaree school, which is 1.2 miles from the site.
- Mr. Francis Gibson, 1076 Royle Road spoke. He said he lived there since 1978 on “acreage.” He said the “one thing” they do not need on Royle Road is “more trailers.” He said that the residents’ concerns should outweigh the goals of the Comprehensive Plan because they live there, and the owners of the mobile home parks do not. He said: "we have to put up with trailers." (I had the emphasis to Mr. Gibson's testimony because this turned out to be the reason expressed by Chairman Schurlknight in arguing against the re-zoning.)

Council voted 7-2 to deny the request. The two members of the Council who are licensed attorneys voted in favor of the rezoning because the request for rezoning brings the property in conformity with the surrounding zoning and is consistent with the Berkeley County Comprehensive Plan. However, 7 members voted against the request because, as they stated: they would not vote for anything unless the residents supported it:

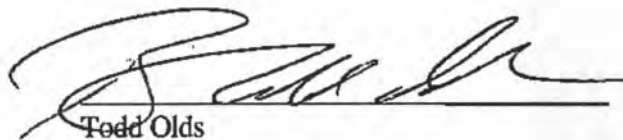

"Council Member Schurlknight stated that with that in mind, he has been down Royle Road many times. He has seen a lot of stuff going on in the area. It does devalue the property. He thinks they have suffered enough when it comes to development and quality of life. It concerns him that when the dust settles, they are going to be there. As Chairman of the Land Use Committee, he agrees with Council on the original recommendation of denial."

Minutes of City Council March 27, 2017 Council Meeting. (Emphasis added)

It is clear from the video of the Council meeting that the "stuff" Councilmember Shchurlknight is talking about are the comments of three residents of Royle Road who made broad statements, which are essentially about the undesirability of people who live in mobile homes. I am not a lawyer, but I am in the real estate business, and I have a number of tenants who reside in mobile homes, and I have never noticed that people in mobile homes sell drugs or ignore their children in any different proportion than any other segment of our society. (One Council member, Steve Davis, said that when he and his wife were first starting out in life, they lived in a mobile home.) To assume a mobile home resident is more likely than a condominium resident to commit a crime or fail to look after his or her children because he or she lives in a mobile home is shocking. As everyone who spoke in the meeting acknowledged, Berkeley County is in the midst of explosive growth, and while Royle Road may have been "country living" in the 1970's or 1980's, it has not been so for many years. (Interstate 26 was completed in 1969.) In my capacity as a property owner and a real estate professional, I am aware that local governments have wide latitude in matters of local government, but they cannot categorize people based on whether they live in a mansion or a mobile home. I believe Council was out of line in refusing to rezone a parcel of real estate for purely prejudicial, unsupported reasons, especially where the proposed rezoning merely brings the parcel into conformity with the surrounding neighborhood as it already exists and makes the property conform to the Berkeley County Future Land Use Map. In this case, my application is consistent with Berkeley County's Comprehensive Plan, consistent with Berkeley County's Future Land Use Map, and supported by County Planning Department Staff's professional recommendation. In short, the Council denied my application only because residents showed up and protested by asserting unsupported, biased comments about the kind of people they believe live in mobile homes. As a result, I never got a fair hearing because the Council never considered the objective facts that the proposed rezoning only confirms what is already present and conforms to Council's Land Use Plan for the area. In other words, Council decided the rezoning against me for purely prejudicial reasons not supported by any evidence.

Further your deponent says not.

Total Acreage: ± 1.29 acres

Applicant: B. Todd Olds

Owner: Bonnell W. Meese

Council District: 4

Planning Commission Recommendation: DENIAL (Unanimous)

Background:

The applicant, B. Todd Olds, is requesting to rezone a 1.29-acre parcel, located along Royle Road and indicated by the following TMS number: 233-09-02-046, from Manufactured (R-2) to Mobile Home (R-3). According to the Application, the applicant wishes to conform with the adjacent property (TMS 233-09-02-007) which is already zoned R-3. The Applicant's intent is to combine the subject property with the adjacent 1.2-acre R3 zoned parcel (TMS 233-09-02-007). Upon combination, the 2-acre minimum lot size requirement for R3 zoning would be met.

R2 to R3 - 233-09-02-046 (Royle Rd Near Farmington Rd/ I-26)

Existing Uses and Adjacent Property Information:

The subject property currently contains multiple mobile homes and is adjacent to R-3 property along Royle Rd. The parcel is located just off Farmington Rd./ I-26, adjacent to a R-3 property also owned by Bonnell Meese. There are multiple R-3 mobile home parks as well as multiple non-conforming R-2 mobile home parks.

Adjacent property characteristics are listed below.

Adjacent Property Information
	Zone	Use
North	R-3	Mobile Home Park
South	R-2	Commercial/ Mobile Home Park
East	R-2	Mobile Home Park
West	OI	Church

Conformance with Comprehensive Plan: Yes - The subject property contains the 2010 Future Land Use Plan recommendation of Low Density Suburban, which seeks to include diverse housing choices and will act as a transition from Constrained Growth Areas to higher density residential and commercial areas.

Staff Recommendation: APPROVAL - Staff recommends approval of this request as it provides an opportunity for the development of a diversity of housing options, which align with Future Land Use Plan and are compatible in the context of the area concerned. The proposed use of the property is compatible with surrounding land uses. There is also an understanding between the applicant and the Planning Department that parcels 233-09-02-046 and 233-09-02-007 will be combined and recorded prior to third reading at County Council.

Planning Commission Recommendation: DENIAL IN A UNANIMOUS VOTE. After reviewing the requested change and hearing from many community stakeholders in opposition to the request, Planning Commission found the request incompatible and potentially detrimental in the context of the community concerned. Members of the community present verbalized concerns regarding traffic, saturation of mobile home parks in the area, and diminution of property values and quality of life. A petition from stakeholders, Francis and Donald Gibson, is enclosed.

Potential Impacts:

Denial- The applicant will continue to be held to standards required in the R-2 zoning category, restricting the combination with the adjacent property and any associated residential uses.

Approval- The applicant will be held to the R-3 zoning requirements and pursue combination of this parcel with the adjacent R-3 parcel.

PLAINTIFF'S MEMORANDUM IN SUPPORT OF SUMMARY JUDGMENT

2018 AUG -2 AM 9:57

 CLERK OF COURT
 BERKELEY COUNTY, SC

As zoning appeals go, this case is pristine because the record demonstrates that the sole basis for denying the plaintiff's application for rezoning was Council's deference to the unsupported prejudice, which Council called "stuff," of neighbors who objected to "those kinds of people" in their neighborhood. As may be seen by the map attached to plaintiff's affidavit, the character of the neighborhood evolved over the years from its original country setting to a busy artery mere feet from Interstate 26 and is surrounded by other mobile home parks and a church. See attached Staff Report and maps, attached here and to plaintiff's affidavit. Even the residents who spoke in opposition noted that the area has "316 trailers on Royle Road between Highways 17-A and 78." See video of meeting; resident Raymond Hedden testified he counted "13 trailer parks" on Royle Road and "316 trailers." The residents' objections are nothing more than subjective complaints, not grounded on any evidentiary basis. As we shall see, the appellate courts, when faced with balancing residents' unsupported objections against a property owners' rights, uniformly hold that unsupported fears are not sufficient to prevent reasonable uses of property.

According to the Berkeley County Planning Staff, Royle Road (State Road S-8-535, which links Highways 78, Interstate 26 and Highway 17-A) carries a substantial amount of motor vehicle traffic as a major artery, and the County identified the area in its Future Land Use Map as appropriate for higher density residential development and specifically mobile home parks. Even though the County's Planning Department recommended approval of the rezoning request to conform to the property as currently being used and to conform to the County's Future Land Use Map, neighbors appeared and objected on purely subjective, unsupported grounds of prejudice. Their statements of objection included such unsupported statements as:

- People who live in mobile homes tend to be criminal
- People who live in mobile homes tend to have less pride in property
- People who live in mobile homes have a higher incidence of drug use
- People who live in mobile homes fail to supervise their children.

When appellate courts have been asked to review such unsupported prejudice as a basis to restrict the use of property, the appellate courts have unanimously instructed local governments that such unsupported prejudice is insufficient to deny an application for rezoning or special exception:

After reading the entire record in this case, it is inescapable to us that the ZBA's decision was based, not on the requirements of the "special exception" ordinance, but upon the fears of neighboring residents who did not want "those type of people" in their neighborhood. Although we are sympathetic to the concerns of neighboring individuals, the ordinance simply does not provide such a basis for denial of the permit. Accordingly, the circuit court's order affirming the denial of Bannum's special exception permit is REVERSED.

Bannum v. City of Columbia, S.C., S.E.2d (1999)

Thirteen years later, the Court of Appeals took up a similar issue in Wyndham Enterprises v. City of North Augusta, 401 S.C. 144, 735 S.E.2d 659 (Ct. App. 2012). There, the property owner sought a special exception to own and operate a fireworks stand. Like this case and like Bannum, neighbors protested, identifying all sorts of reasons—none of them supported by evidence—as to why the Board should deny the application:

Also, at the hearing, fourteen residents of nearby residential neighborhoods testified against the special exception. Residents' concerns included increased traffic, decreased property values, and a negative image of the community due to multiple [401 S.C. 147] fireworks retailers in the same area.

Wyndham Enterprises, L.L.C. v. City of North Augusta, 401 S.C. 144, 735 S.E.2d 659 (Ct. App. 2012)

Citing Bannum, the Court of Appeals pointed out that while residents are entitled to be heard and entitled to express their opinions, statements to the Board about the property must be based on some evidence, something more than subjective, unsupported statements:

Thus, because the BZA's decision was not supported by competent, substantial, and material evidence, and was based on opinion and speculation testimony, we reverse the circuit court's decision to affirm the BZA.

Three years after Wyndham Enterprises, in 2015 the Court of Appeals took up another zoning case. In Helicopter Solutions v. Hinde, 414 S.C. 1, 776 S.E.2d 753 (Ct. App. 2015) a neighbor of Helicopter Solutions objected to the operation of a helicopter touring business in the Myrtle Beach "Amusement Commercial Zone." Hinde took the position that while the zoning ordinance allowed motor vehicle sight-seeing tours, it did not allow helicopter tours. Like the neighbors in this case, and like the neighbors in Bannum, and in Wyndham, Hinde contended, without evidence, that the operation of the helicopter business injured him and diminished his property values. Of course, he had no evidence, which is the common link through all these cases and the case now before the Court. Surprisingly, he convinced the Board of Zoning Appeals, and that Board instructed the property owner to shut down his business. The circuit court reversed the Board of Zoning Appeals, and the Court of Appeals affirmed the circuit court, holding:

This court is prohibited from writing into an ordinance language restricting property rights to a greater degree than intended by the legislative body. It is a well-founded principle of law that statutes or ordinances in derogation of natural rights of persons over their property are to be strictly construed as they are in derogation of the common law right to use private property so as to realize its highest utility and should not be impliedly extended to cases not clearly within their scope and purpose. It follows that the terms limiting the use of the property must be liberally construed for the benefit of the property owner. Purdy v. Moise, 223 S.C. 298, 302, 75 S.E.2d 605, 607 (1953) (citations omitted);¹ see also Keane/Sherratt P'ship by Keane v. Hodge, 292 S.C. 459, 465, 357 S.E.2d 193, 196 (Ct.App.1987) (holding that while "[l]ocal governments have wide latitude to enact ordinances regulating what people can do with their property," they "must draft their ordinances so that people can have a clear understanding as to what is permitted and what is not. Otherwise, we must construe such ordinances to allow people to use their property so as to realize its highest utility.") (footnote omitted). Thus, we find the circuit court properly held the Zoning Board made an error of law in construing the County Ordinance to exclude a helicopter sightseeing tour facility as a permissible use within the AC district.

Here, the plaintiff asked for nothing more than what the County Comprehensive Plan requires. Plaintiff's request does nothing more than bring the zoning into conformity with how the property has developed over the years and in conformity with the County's legislative decision on how best to address a critical housing shortage. Moreover, the County's Zoning Ordinance requires that the Zoning Code be amended to conform to the County's Comprehensive Plan. § 1-2 of the Zoning Ordinance defines the purpose of the ordinance as follows:

1.2. - Purpose.

It is the purpose of this ordinance to:

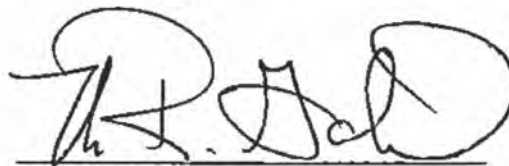

Implement the goals and policies outlined in the Berkeley County Comprehensive Plan;

¹ Purdy v. Moise deserves special mention as an example of arbitrary government action in this area. There, the City of Sumter informed a property owner that while the Zoning Ordinance allowed a "hotel" on his property, it did not allow a "motor court" or "tourist court."

In evaluating the plaintiff's application for rezoning the Planning Staff noted the plaintiff's application for rezoning brings the property in line with "the goals and policies outlined in the Berkeley County comprehensive plan." Thus, when Council rejected the recommendation of its own professional staff, it chose to adopt the residents' subjective, prejudicial, unsupported fears over its staff's objective findings. In doing so, the County Council not only failed to apply its own ordinance as written, but also reached a decision at variance with the comprehensive plan. Not to put too fine a point on it, but Council yielded to the tyranny of the majority, which the Supreme Court and the Court of Appeals made clear that a political body may not do. While the majority rules in elections, the rule of law governs in matters of fundamental rights. The right to use property to its highest and best use is circumscribed by law, not by raw prejudice of residents who feel they may be adversely affected.

Therefore under the holdings of the well-developed body of South Carolina law on this subject, the County Council cannot deny the applicant the right to the highest and best use of his property when such denial is based on nothing more than unsupported prejudice of neighbors. Therefore, the Court should reverse the decision of the County Council, or, in the alternative, remand the matter back to the Council with instructions to consider the applicant's application for rezoning and evaluate it only upon the proper, relevant evidence.

Todd Olds, is requesting to rezone a 1.29-acre parcel, located along Royle Road and indicated by the following TMS number: 233-09-02-046, from Manufactured (R-2) to Mobile Home (R-3). According to the Application, the applicant wishes to conform with the adjacent property (TMS 233-09-02-007) which is already zoned R-3. The Applicant's intent is to combine the subject property with the adjacent 1.2-acre R3 zoned parcel (TMS 233-09-02-007). Upon combination, the 2-acre minimum lot size requirement for R3 zoning would be met.

Existing Uses and Adjacent Property Information:

The subject property currently contains multiple mobile homes and is adjacent to R-3 property along Royle Rd. The parcel is located just off Farmington Rd./ I-26, adjacent to a R-3 property also owned by Bonnell Meese. There are multiple R-3 mobile home parks as well as multiple non-conforming R-2 mobile home parks.

Adjacent property characteristics are listed below.

Adjacent Property Information
	Zone	Use
North	R-3	Mobile Home Park
South	R-2	Commercial/ Mobile Home Park
East	R-2	Mobile Home Park
West	OI	Church

Conformance with Comprehensive Plan: Yes - The subject property contains the 2010 Future Land Use Plan recommendation of Low Density Suburban, which seeks to include diverse housing choices and will act as a transition from Constrained Growth Areas to higher density residential and commercial areas.

Staff Recommendation: APPROVAL - Staff recommends approval of this request as it provides an opportunity for the development of a diversity of housing options, which align with Future Land Use Plan and are compatible in the context of the area concerned. The proposed use of the property is compatible with surrounding land uses. There is also an understanding between the applicant and the Planning Department that parcels 233-09-02-046 and 233-09-02-007 will be combined and recorded prior to third reading at County Council.

Planning Commission Recommendation: DENIAL IN A UNANIMOUS VOTE. After reviewing the requested change and hearing from many community stakeholders in opposition to the request, Planning Commission found the request incompatible and potentially detrimental in the context of the community concerned. Members of the community present verbalized concerns regarding traffic, saturation of mobile home parks in the area, and diminution of property values and quality of life. A petition from stakeholders, Francis and Donald Gibson, is enclosed.

Potential Impacts:

Denial- The applicant will continue to be held to standards required in the R-2 zoning category, restricting the combination with the adjacent property and any associated residential uses.

Approval- The applicant will be held to the R-3 zoning requirements and pursue combination of this parcel with the adjacent R-3 parcel.

INTRODUCTION AND FACTUAL SUMMARY

By application presented to the Berkeley County Planning Department, the applicant sought to rezone a parcel of land in Berkeley County, South Carolina¹, from an R-2 to an R-3 designation². Plaintiff did not seek a special exception, but rather sought to rezone the parcel.

If allowed, the rezoning would have enabled the owner to increase the total number of mobile homes on a 1.29-acre parcel to fourteen (14). At the time of his application there were two (2) mobile homes on the subject parcel, each legally non-conforming.

Berkeley County Planning Department staff reviewed the application and recommended to the Planning Commission that the rezoning request be approved.

The Planning Commission held a hearing on February 28, 2017 upon the rezoning request, at which the applicant spoke in favor of the request and members of the public, including neighboring property owners, spoke out against the requested rezoning.

Summary minutes of that meeting are attached as Exhibit "A". Several members of the public spoke at the Planning Commission meeting. One of the speakers was former Berkeley County Coroner Wade Arnette, who spoke about his concerns for the "safety of children". After hearing from the public and considering the application for rezoning, the Planning Commission voted unanimously to recommend to the County Council that it deny the rezoning request.

The matter then procedurally continued in the ordinary course and was brought before the County's Land Use & Economic Development Committee on March 13, 2017. The matter was thoroughly debated there. In her presentation before the committee Planning and Zoning Director Alison Simmons testified as follows:

"... After reviewing the requested change and hearing from many community stakeholders and opposition to the request, the Planning Commission found the request incompatible and potentially detrimental..."

The Land Use & Economic Development Committee voted 6-2 to deny the rezoning request. Summary minutes of that meeting are attached as Exhibit "B".

The matter was then presented to the full County Council on March 27, 2017. Members of the public appeared and expressed concerns in the "Public Discussion" period at the commencement of the hearing. Summary minutes of that meeting are attached as Exhibit "C".³

When the question of consideration of first reading on a proposed ordinance to rezone Mr. Olds' property came for a vote by County Council at the March 27th meeting, after deliberation and discussion, County Council voted 5-2 to deny the rezoning request⁴.

As reflected in the minutes, throughout the legislative consideration of the proposal, opinions for and against the proposal were voiced and for a variety of reasons. This is of course reflective of the very nature of the legislative process.

When Plaintiff did not get what he wanted, that is to have the subject rezoned in order to place up to 14 mobile homes on a 1.29-acre lot, he sued the County and the Planning Commission

⁴ An excerpt from the 3-27-2017 County Council minutes reads as follows: "Council Member Schurlknight stated that he has a lot of concerns about the effect it is going to have on the individuals that live on Royle Road. They've been there a long time and have seen a lot. He is hearing that they have hosted a lot of development on the road, and it comes to a tipping point to where you must look at the capacity of the road, and safety. He understands that the Planning Commission denied, and Staff recommended, but he thinks Council has to lead the way in some of this stuff..."

in this court. His causes of action will be separately addressed in the Discussion of Authority section below.

APPLICABLE SUMMARY JUDGMENT STANDARD OF REVIEW

In reviewing a motion for summary judgment, a trial court's task is well-known and well-settled. Under Rule 56, SCRCP, summary judgment is only proper when both:

- (a) No genuine issue as to any material fact exists, and
- (b) The moving party is entitled to judgment as a matter of law.

In making the determination of whether or not any triable issue of fact exists, it is settled South Carolina law that the evidence and all inferences that can reasonably be drawn must be viewed in the light most favorable to the nonmoving party. Our courts have consistently ruled that summary judgment should not be granted if further inquiry into the facts is desirable to clarify the application of the law. To prevail on a summary judgment motion, the moving party must show that there is no genuine issue as to any material fact. To determine whether any trial issues of fact exist for summary judgment purposes, the evidence and all inferences which can reasonably be drawn from the evidence must be viewed in the light most favorable to the non-moving party. Carolina Convenience Stores, Inc. v. City of Spartanburg, 398 S.C. 27, 727 S.E.2d 28 (Ct.App. 2012).

Summary judgment has been held to be appropriate only when plain, palpable and undisputed facts exist on which reasonable minds cannot differ. Bessinger v. Bi-Lo, 329 S.C. 617, 496 S.E.2d 33,34 (Ct.App.1998).

South Carolina Courts have also noted that summary judgment is such a drastic remedy that it calls for special caution to ensure that a litigant is not improperly deprived of a trial on disputed factual issues. Fleming v. Rose, 338 S.C. 524, 526 S.E.2d 732 (Ct. App. 2000). Summary judgment should also be denied even when no dispute exists as to the evidentiary facts themselves but merely to the conclusions or inferences to be drawn from them. See Baugus v. Wessinger, 401 S.E.2d 169 (1991); Nelson v. Charleston County Parks & Recreational Comm'n, 605 S.E.2d 744 (S.C. App. 2004).

DISCUSSION OF AUTHORITY

I. The Purpose of Berkeley County's Zoning Ordinance

Berkeley County's zoning ordinance is known as the "Berkeley County Zoning and Development Standards Ordinance". All purposes of the ordinance are stated in Article 1.2 of the ordinance. There are many stated purposes, which are not mutually exclusive. The "Purpose and Authority" article reads as follows:

ARTICLE 1. - PURPOSE AND AUTHORITY

1.1. - Authority.

This ordinance is adopted pursuant to the statutory authority conferred by S.C. Code 1976, § 6-29-710 et seq., as amended.

1.2. - Purpose.

It is the purpose of this ordinance to:

- A. Implement the goals and policies outlined in the Berkeley County comprehensive plan;
- B. Provide for adequate light, air, and open space;
- C. Prevent the overcrowding of land, to avoid undue concentration of population, and to lessen congestion in the streets;
- D. Facilitate the creation of a convenient, attractive, and harmonious community; to protect and preserve scenic, historic, or ecologically sensitive areas;
- E. Regulate the density and distribution of populations and the uses of buildings, structures and land for trade, industry, residence, recreation, agriculture, forestry, conservation, airports and approaches thereto, water supply, sanitation, and public activities;
- F. Facilitate the adequate provision or availability of transportation, police and fire protection, water, sewage, schools, parks, and other recreational facilities, affordable housing, and disaster evacuation;
- G. Distribution of population and traffic that will tend to create conditions favorable to health, safety, convenience, appearance, prosperity, morals, order, and the general welfare of the county.

The legislative actions of the Planning Commission, the Land Use & Economic Development Committee and the full County Council to retain the previously established R-2 zoning designation are wholly consistent with several of the stated purposes of the ordinance.

Plaintiff has selected one purpose which he believes supports his position and declares the same to be dispositive. Other purposes conflict with his position. He opts not to mention them.

II. Arbitrary and Irrational Rezoning Decision

Plaintiff claims in his first cause of action that the decision of County Council to deny his rezoning request was arbitrary and irrational. Defendants deny the claim and the record does not support it.

It is well-settled in South Carolina that rezoning is a legislative matter⁵, and a court has no power to zone property; a rezoning decision is presumptively valid, and a property owner bears the burden of proving otherwise. (emphasis added). Bear Enterprises. v. County of Greenville, 319 S.C. 137, 459 S.E.2d 883 (Ct. App. 1995).⁶ A presumption of validity can only be overcome by clear and convincing evidence established at trial.⁷ Lenardis v. City of Greenville, 316 S.C. 471, 450 S.E.2d 597 (Ct. App. 1994) (propriety of city's decision in refusing to rezone property from office use to commercial use was not so unreasonable as to impair or destroy property owner's constitutional rights; owner bought property as speculative investment with full knowledge of existing zoning and surrounding commercial development, and vast majority of surrounding property in city was residential); Harbit v. City of Charleston, 382 S.C. 383, 675 S.E.2d 776 (Ct. App. 2009), as amended (May 4, 2009) (City's denial of application to rezone property consisting of house on corner lot from residential to limited commercial use was fairly debatable and not so unreasonable as to impair or destroy property owner's constitutional rights, even though other similarly situated properties on one of two bordering streets were zoned for limited commercial use, where city had a vested interest in reserving the area's residential character, neighborhood

⁵ The legislative process is reserved for those who are directly accountable to the public.

⁶ The facts of Bear Enterprises, which involved a refusal to rezone property for a mobile home park, are discussed in the section on substantive due process, infra.

⁷ In Footnote 1 to the Bear Enterprises opinion the Court noted:

"We note that Bear deposed Council members and presented their testimony as evidence to support Bear's argument that Council's decision was arbitrary. We are aware of no authority allowing someone challenging action by Council to interrogate members individually to impeach Council's decision. The governing body of a municipality acts as a collective body, not as individuals, and decisions made in this fashion are the product of debate and compromise. If individuals are not satisfied with decisions made by members of a municipal government within the limits of the law, their remedy is at the polls, not the courts. Although we feel it was inappropriate to examine Council members in this manner, the County did not object to the procedure in this case".

citizens were concerned that the area would become too commercial, and the property at issue acted as a buffer between residential area and a busier commercial area).

The Supreme Court of South Carolina has held that a zoning ordinance excluding mobile homes from all areas except mobile home districts was valid and enforceable. To overcome the presumption of validity there must be an absence of any evidence supporting the legislative action. Town of Scranton v. Willoughby, 306 S.C. 421, 412 S.E.2d 424 (1991). Particular reasons for the mobile homes ordinance in Willoughby are not discussed in depth in that opinion, though the court noted that the zoning ordinance was enacted "for the purpose of promoting the health, safety, morals, and general welfare of the community." Id. at 422, 412 S.E.2d at 425. That is precisely the case here. See 1.2 (G).

Of course, in the instant case, the County is not seeking to confine mobile homes in a particular district or districts, but Willoughby suggests in any case that the Plaintiff may defeat the rezoning decision only with clear and convincing evidence. Willoughby suggests that the decision was unobjectionable to the extent that it was based on any evidence that there would be a significant increase in noise or traffic congestion if the rezoning was approved.

Plaintiff also alleges that the Comprehensive Plan requires the tract in question to be zoned R-3, the classification he seeks in the rezoning process. That is not what the statute says. In pertinent part, the relevant statute speaks to the interplay between a comprehensive plan and a land use proposal as follows:

When the local planning commission has recommended and local governing authority or authorities have adopted the related comprehensive plan element set forth in this chapter, no new street, structure, utility, square, park, or other public way, grounds, or open space or public buildings for any use, whether publicly or privately owned, may be constructed or authorized in the political jurisdiction of the governing authority or authorities establishing the planning commission until the location, character, and extent of it have been submitted to the planning commission for review and comment as to the compatibility of the proposal with the comprehensive plan of the community. In the event the planning commission finds the proposal to be in conflict with the comprehensive plan, the commission shall transmit its findings and the particulars of the nonconformity to the entity proposing the facility.

If the entity proposing the facility determines to go forward with the project which conflicts with the comprehensive plan, the governing or policy making body of the entity shall publicly state its intention to proceed and the reasons for the action. A copy of this finding must be sent to the local governing body, the local planning commission, and published as a public notice in a newspaper of general circulation in the community at least thirty days prior to awarding a contract or beginning construction. S.C. Code Ann. § 6-29-540 et seq.

The statute does not mandate approval of a proposal which is consistent with a comprehensive plan. That would render unnecessary any legislative consideration of a proposed zoning change which is consistent with the comprehensive plan. The County planning staff here accurately found that the requested rezoning was consistent with the comprehensive plan, but the elected officials, possessed with their legislative authority determined that staff's recommendation, although a proper consideration, was outweighed by other considerations rooted in public safety, health, and welfare, among other purposes.

The mere fact that the Planning Commission and the County Council reached a decision different from that recommended by planning staff does not render the final decision arbitrary and capricious. The decision was for the Council to make, after due deliberations and taking into account all of the facts. See Greb v. Bd. of Comm'rs for Klamath County, 32 Or. App. 39, 573 P.2d 733 (1978) (each county governing body is required to retain responsibility for land use planning within its county, and is therefore vested with authority to make county land use decisions; county board of commissioners is not bound by recommendations of county planning commission even if supported by substantial evidence); Adams v. City of Richmond, 340 S.W.2d 204 (Ky. 1960) (zoning is vested by statute in the city legislative body, and it had power to override or reject a recommendation of the zoning commission which merely makes recommendations).

Plaintiff cites three cases in his motion for summary judgment. Each case involves a matter originating before a local Board of Zoning Appeals in connection with an application for a special exception. That is not the case here. The BZA was acting in each instance in the cases cited by the Plaintiff in a "quasi-judicial role".⁸ This is not an appeal from the BZA. Rather it is a challenge to the legislative function of County Council. A reviewing Court should practice judicial restraint and not supplant its judgment for the local government's judgment. Lenardis, Id.

⁸ Helicopter Solutions, Inc. v. Hinde, Wyndham Enterprises v. City of North Augusta and Bannum v. City of Columbia

II. Equal Protection

Plaintiff claims in his second cause of action that the decision of County Council to deny his rezoning request was a violation of equal protection. Defendants deny the claim and the record does not support it.

If there is no suspect or quasi-suspect class and no fundamental right is involved, a zoning ordinance's viability under the equal protection clause, or a zoning decision, should be tested under the "rational basis" standard. Bibco Corp. v. City of Sumter, 332 S.C. 45, 504 S.E.2d 112 (1998); King v. Rubenstein, 825 F.3d 206 (4th Cir. 2016) (in general, unless a suspect class is involved, disparate treatment is presumed to be valid under equal protection clause and will be sustained if there is a rational relationship between the disparity of treatment and some legitimate governmental purpose).

There are three steps in determining whether an ordinance (or decision) survives rational basis scrutiny under the equal protection clause: (1) whether plaintiff was treated differently than others similarly situated; (2) whether defendant intentionally discriminated against plaintiff and had a rational basis for doing so; and (3) whether the discrimination/classification bears a rational relationship to a legitimate government purpose or goal. Bibco Corp., 332 S.C. at 52-53, 504 S.E.2d at 116. All the elements of the rational basis test are fact intensive.

In Bibco Corp., a city residential zoning ordinance's exclusion of mobile homes from some, but not all, residential districts in the city was rationally related to legitimate government purposes of preserving land for low density, single-family dwellings, protecting surrounding property values, guarding against increased crime, guarding against increased traffic flow and congestion, and maintaining aesthetics, and thus the ordinance did not violate the equal protection clause.

The Fourth Circuit has held that discriminatory motivations of people who testified before a decision-making body could only be probative of the body's motivations for purposes of an equal protection analysis where (1) the public testimony was overwhelmingly opposed to the proposal; (2) for a distinct discriminatory reason; and (3) the body's members were clearly swayed by that public opposition, fully aware of its basis in discrimination and prejudice. Sylvia Dev. Corp. v. Calvert County, 48 F.3d 810 (4th Cir. 1995). In Sylvia Dev. Corp., a developer failed to establish, in his civil rights action alleging violation of the equal protection clause, that county commissioners' denial of his application for a special zoning designation was based on his status as nonresident of the county, even though an activist at a hearing on the application stated that she wanted to know where the developer "came from" and that "outside people" were developing the county; 10 other citizens testified at the hearing, there was no other comment or question on the subject of the developer's out-of-county residence, a commissioner noted the irrelevance of the activist's comments, and, in the ensuing debate among commissioners, no reference was made to the activist's comments.

III. Procedural Due Process

Plaintiff claims in his third cause of action that the decision of County Council to deny his rezoning request violated procedural due process. Defendants deny the claim and the record does not support it.

Due process does not require a trial-type hearing in every conceivable case of alleged government impairment of a private interest; rather, due process is flexible and calls for such procedural protections as the particular situation demands. Olds v. City of Goose Creek, 418 S.C. 573, 795 S.E.2d 163 (Ct. App. 2016). The fundamental requirement of procedural due process is the opportunity to be heard at a meaningful time and in a meaningful manner. S.C. Dep't of Soc. Servs. v. Wilson, 352 S.C. 445, 574 S.E.2d 730 (2002).

Plaintiff in this case received procedural due process⁹. His only specific complaint for this cause of action concerns alleged disagreement with those opposing the rezoning, and rejection of the staff recommendations.

The statutory procedure for an amendment of a zoning regulation is set out in S.C. Code Ann. § 6-29-760:

(A) Before enacting or amending any zoning regulations or maps, the governing authority or the planning commission, if authorized by the governing authority, shall hold a public hearing on it, which must be advertised and conducted according to lawfully prescribed procedures. If no established procedures exist, then at least fifteen days' notice of the time and place of the public hearing must be given in a newspaper of general circulation in the municipality or county. In cases involving rezoning, conspicuous notice shall be posted on or adjacent to the property affected, with at least one such notice being visible from each public thoroughfare that abuts the property. If the local government maintains a list of groups that have expressed an interest in being informed of zoning proceedings, notice of such meetings must be mailed to these groups. No change in or departure from the text or maps as recommended by the local planning commission may be made pursuant to the hearing unless the change or departure be first submitted to the planning commission for review and recommendation. The planning commission shall have a time prescribed in the ordinance which may not be more than thirty days within which to submit its report and recommendation on the change to the governing authority. If the planning commission fails to submit a report within the prescribed time period, it is deemed to have approved the change or departure. When the required public hearing is held by the planning commission, no public hearing by the governing authority is required before amending the zoning ordinance text or maps.

(B) If a landowner whose land is the subject of a proposed amendment will be allowed to present oral or written comments to the planning commission, at least ten days' notice and an opportunity to comment in the same manner must be given to other interested members of the public, including owners of adjoining property.

(C) An owner of adjoining land or his representative has standing to bring an action contesting the ordinance or amendment; however, this subsection does not create any new substantive right in any party.

(D) No challenge to the adequacy of notice or challenge to the validity of a regulation or map, or amendment to it, whether enacted before or after the effective date of this section, may be made sixty days after the decision of the governing body if there has been substantial compliance with the notice requirements of this section or with established procedures of the governing authority or the planning commission.

In Harbit v. City of Charleston, 382 S.C. 383, 675 S.E.2d 776 (Ct. App. 2009), as amended (May 4, 2009), a property owner who sought to rezone property from residential use to limited commercial use was afforded procedural due process, where he received notice of the public hearing on the matter, was allowed to present his arguments at the planning commission and city council levels, and was given three levels of review of the decision not to rezone property. All of the above components of procedural due process were available to the Plaintiff in the instant case and he directly participated in the process.

With regard to a procedural due process claim, the Fourth Circuit in Sylvia Development Corp. ruled that a developer did not have a constitutionally protected property interest in approval of an application for a special zoning designation to develop agricultural land in county into subdivision of single-family homes, even though zoning ordinances required creation of special zoning areas; the location of special zoning areas was discretionary with the county commissioners, and the criteria imposed by a zoning ordinance for the land to qualify for special zoning were merely preconditions for consideration for approval. Moreover, a county planning commission's favorable recommendation with respect to the developer's application did not create a constitutionally protected property interest in approval of the application; while the county commissioners were required to seek the recommendation of the planning commission, the zoning ordinance required only that the commissioners consider, not follow, that recommendation. 48 F.3d at 826-27. Even a state court judgment reversing the county commissioners' denial of the developer's application did not indicate that the developer had a preexisting constitutionally protected property interest in approval of application.

The court further held that even if the developer had a constitutionally protected property interest in approval of his application for the special zoning designation to develop agricultural land into a subdivision of single-family homes, he failed to establish a violation of procedural due process with respect to denial of the application, notwithstanding his assertion that the county commissioners' decision was mistaken and lacked evidentiary support. The commissioners conducted an open hearing, following proper notice, at which they heard the positions of all interested parties, following the hearing the commissioners made their decision and stated the reasons for decision, and the developer was entitled to appeal the decision and did so successfully. Likewise, arguably the Plaintiff here has no property interest in obtaining the requested rezoning and, in any case, he was afforded all the process that was due.

In another case, landowners were provided with a meaningful opportunity to be heard at a hearing on a city planning commission's decision on the landowners' application to subdivide their property, and thus the landowners' procedural due process rights were not violated; the commission held a public hearing at which the landowners submitted 26 exhibits to support their application, and the commission did not preclude the landowners from accessing the evidence in opposition to their application, which mostly consisted of public information regarding the historical significance of the property. Kurschner v. City of Camden Planning Comm'n, 376 S.C. 165, 656 S.E.2d 346 (2008). As also stated in Kurschner, a trial-type hearing was not required, as that would greatly hinder the commission's ability to make an informed and reasoned decision, as well as intrude upon a municipality's statutorily granted legislative authority.

If there otherwise are sufficient procedures to satisfy the right to notice and an opportunity to be heard, including judicial review, general allegations of bias in a zoning decision should not be sufficient to support an allegation of denial of procedural due process. See Pellegrino Food Prods. Co. v. City of Warren, 136 F. Supp. 2d 391 (W.D. Pa. 2000) (bakery owner was not denied procedural due process, when it was granted administrative appeal of adverse zoning and building permit decisions, even though owner claimed that city officials were biased against it); Breakzone Billiards v. City of Torrance, 81 Cal. App. 4th 1205, 97 Cal. Rptr. 2d 467 (2000) (where no individual procedural errors occurred, cumulative effect of city's actions did not create appearance of bias resulting in violation of due process rights of billiard parlor during de novo review by city council of city planning commission's grant of conditional use permit allowing expansion of parlor); John E. Long, Inc. v. Borough of Ringwood, 61 F. Supp. 2d 273 (D.N.J. 1998) (property owners in New Jersey were not denied procedural due process by denial of rezoning application, despite allegation that local zoning authorities were biased; state provided full judicial mechanism for challenging decision), aff'd, 213 F.3d 628 (3d Cir. 2000).

The Sixth Circuit held, in Braun v. Ann Arbor Charter Twp., 519 F.3d 564 (6th Cir. 2008), that landowners had no protected property interest in rezoning to allow a trailer park and other residential development on their land that was zoned for agricultural use, and thus no procedural due process violation occurred from a township's refusal to rezone; there was no showing of any policy, law, or understanding with the township to create a "rezoning benefit," and the township had the discretion to deny the request.

IV. Substantive Due Process

In order to prove a denial of substantive due process, a party must show that he was arbitrarily and capriciously deprived of a cognizable property interest rooted in state law; the burden of proving the invalidity of a zoning ordinance (or decision) is on the party attacking it, and it is incumbent upon the challenger to show the arbitrary and capricious character of the ordinance (or decision) through clear and convincing evidence. McMaster v. Columbia Bd. of Zoning Appeals, 395 S.C. 499, 719 S.E.2d 660 (2011). As stated in McMaster, the validity of a particular zoning measure must be considered not in the abstract, but in connection with the locality and surrounding circumstances. The authority of a municipality to restrict the use of privately owned property through zoning is founded in the police power. Id. at 505, 719 S.E.2d at 663.

A property owner's substantive due process challenge to a zoning ordinance may be analyzed under the arbitrary and capricious framework. Dunes W. Golf Club, LLC v. Town of Mount Pleasant, 401 S.C. 280, 737 S.E.2d 601 (2013).

In McMaster, a zoning restriction withstood a substantive due process challenge. In that case, the court held that a zoning ordinance that limited to three the number of unrelated individuals who may live together as a single housekeeping unit was a valid exercise of the city's broad police power, and because a rational relationship existed between the city's decision to limit the number of unrelated individuals who may live together and the legitimate governmental interests of controlling the undesirable qualities associated with mass student congestion, the city's decision did not violate the Due Process Clause of the State Constitution. 395 S.C. at 508, 719 S.E.2d at 664 (citing Ames Rental Prop. Ass'n v. City of Ames, 736 N.W.2d 255, 261 (Iowa 2007))¹⁰

¹⁰ (citing Ames Rental Prop. Ass'n v. City of Ames, 736 N.W.2d 255, 261 (Iowa 2007) ("Based on its experience with students living off campus, the Ames city council made a reasonable policy decision to limit to three the number of unrelated persons who may reside in a single-family dwelling in certain areas. It did so because groups of unrelated persons typically have different living styles in comparison to groups of related persons. . .By limiting the number of unrelated persons who may live together, Ames's ordinance furthers the City's goal of creating family-oriented neighborhoods that are safe and quiet for young children.")).

In the zoning context, substantive due process plaintiffs first must prove that the state deprived them of a property interest and that its action fell so far beyond the outer limits of legitimate governmental action that no process could cure the deficiency, and they also must overcome a court's extreme reluctance to upset the delicate political balance at play in local land-use disputes. Henry v. Jefferson County Comm'n, 637 F.3d 269 (4th Cir. 2011). In determining whether a zoning action violates substantive due process, the court may consider, among other factors, whether (1) the zoning decision is tainted with fundamental procedural irregularity, (2) the action is targeted at a single party, and (3) the action deviates from or is inconsistent with regular practice. MLC Auto., LLC v. Town of Southern Pines, 532 F.3d 269 (4th Cir. 2008). Absent any of these factors, the rezoning denial must withstand a substantive due process challenge.

The principle that for a violation of substantive due process, there must be conduct by the defendant that "shocks the conscience" has been applied in the zoning context. See Huggins v. Prince George's County, 683 F.3d 525 (4th Cir. 2012) (even if property owner had residual protected property interest in operating salvage automobile wholesaling business on property under revoked permits, county's shutting down of business for owner's failure to obtain grading and occupancy permits did not approach conscience shocking threshold for substantive due process violation by executive action; county did not deliberately intended to injure owner, indeed, county worked with owner for over two years to help it obtain permits). The "shock the conscience" standard is a difficult one to satisfy, requiring more than mere arbitrariness.

Here, no fair reading of the record would indicate anything close to a "shock the conscience" scenario legislative process occurred in the instant case.

As was also recognized and followed in Bear Enterprises, only where a local government's zoning action (including a decision whether to rezone) is so unreasonable as to impair or destroy constitutional rights will courts declare the action unconstitutional, and if the propriety of the decision is even "fairly debatable," a reviewing court cannot inject its judgment into the review of the decision, but must leave the decision undisturbed. As in Town of Iva, it was incumbent upon the party challenging the zoning decision to show by clear and convincing evidence the arbitrary and capricious nature of that action. Bear Enters., 319 S.C. at 140-41, 459 S.E.2d at 886. In upholding the refusal to rezone in Bear Enterprises, the court also stated that a local legislative body does not deny due process simply because it does not permit a landowner to make the most beneficial use of its property.

V. Other Claims

All other claims are derivative and not ripe for determination.

CONCLUSION

This is not a case for summary judgment and Plaintiff's motion should be denied.

He noted that he owns the GC zoned lot on the corner and would like to combine.

Mr. Day asked for opposition. None opposed the request.

- 3. AN ORDINANCE TO MODIFY THE OFFICIAL ZONING AND DEVELOPMENT STANDARDS MAP OF BERKELEY COUNTY, SOUTH CAROLINA, IN REGARD TO BONNELL W. MEESE FOR 1.29 ACRES ON A LOT INDICATED WITH TMS# 233-09-02-046, LOCATED ON ROYLE ROAD NEAR FARMINGTON RD/I-26; FROM R-2, MANUFACTURED RESIDENTIAL DISTRICT TO R-3, MOBILE HOME DISTRICT IN COUNCIL DISTRICT 4

TMS:233-09-02-046; R2 to R3 Meese

Ty Adley presented an overview of the request. He noted the intent of the application and adjacent uses and zoning.

The applicant, Todd Olds; Stoney Point Court, N. Charleston SC, approached the podium. He noted that it is currently legally non-conforming. Sale of the property is contingent upon sale. He noted that he has standards for mobile homes in his park. Mr. Turner asked about whether or not the existing mobile homes would meet those standards. Mr. Olds noted that they would not. He said that typically he works with tenants to comply over a 6 - 12 month time frame.

Mr. Turner asked if the access drive would be improved. The applicant noted that he would. He noted that he would look at placing 18 - 22 mobile homes on the property. Mr. Sineath asked if there would be a Manager and policing. The applicant noted that he will grant access to the Police Department.

Wade Arnett, adjacent property owner, approached the podium and noted that thinks that there is an overabundance of mobile homes already in the area. He said that he did not think that the lot was big enough to accommodate the number of MHs proposed.

Mr. Olds noted that he is a licensed Realtor and will be the property management. Mr. Arnett further noted that he is concerned about the children. He is concerned about the safety in the children that currently live in the neighborhood as well as those that may reside in the future mobile home park.

Mr. Olds noted that there is a Keating Rule, noting limitations under Fair Housing Laws for number of occupants for a house of a certain number of rooms (2 persons per room).

Frances (Donald) O'Gibson, resident at Royal Road, presented and read from a letter. Since 2002, he and other residents have been coming up here to demonstrate opposition. Previous properties of similar requests have been routinely denied because of over saturation of mobile home parks. He noted that increased traffic, drug problems, increased crime, increased demand for police, and a precedent that was set for similar types of request. He asked that the rezoning request adhere to those that were evaluated in the past.

Susan Yoeh; 385 Frankie Lane: noted that she had a question for the existing mobile home parks in Stahl Road. She asked if the condition of this park would be similar to that one?

James Jackson; 769 Royal Road: Is concerned about lighting and kids getting into his pool and is opposed to this the rezoning of this property.

Ann Jackson, 769 Royal Road, she noted that her fence separates this MH park and that she has had problems with trespassing into her yard and pontune boat.

Xxx resident xxx - he pointed out his house and that his appraised value is diminished because of adjacent mobile homes. He noted that he has had issues with animal abandonment. He noted that across the street is a mobile home with a burn barrel, HVAC junked in yard, and porch in poor condition. He noted that cars are parking on the side of the road, obstructing traffic. His wife approached the podium and noted that she did not have anything but problems; she asked that the PC consider the repercussions of these types of requests. She noted that she smells meth being cooked.

Mr. Day noted that the PC has a history of denying these types of requests in this community. Mr. Sineath noted that the PC cannot do anything about children, drugs, etc. However, a resident noted that community concerns extend beyond those things, but include traffic.

Mr. Day asked for a motion

Mrs. Hoover made the motion to deny the request, Sineath seconded the motion. All were in favor. (Denied)

- 4. AN ORDINANCE TO MODIFY THE OFFICIAL ZONING AND DEVELOPMENT STANDARDS MAP OF BERKELEY COUNTY, SOUTH CAROLINA, IN REGARD TO HEIRS OF JERRY FORDHAM FOR 7.43 ACRES ON A LOT INDICATED WITH TMS# 263-00-01-003, LOCATED ON CLEMENTS FERRY ROAD NEAR CAINHOY ROAD; FROM R-2, MANUFACTURED RESIDENTIAL DISTRICT TO R-4, MULTIFAMILY RESIDENTIAL DISTRICT IN COUNCIL DISTRICT 8

Ron Hanna presented an overview of the request.

Wofford Strinbling approached the podium; he noted that the request is compatible with the FLU. However, he feels that if this was a 15 acre lot, that he would be able to provide twice the number of units. He noted that the lot has been for sale for a number of years and wetlands constrain the site. In order to make the project economically feasible, he noted that a town home project is necessary. He feels as though town homes will bring an affordable housing product to the area.

Layne Baker, 2722 Crooked Stick Lane (River Town), noted that he did a similar town home project in MTP where he provided 37 town homes on 3.3 acres. He noted that he is a boutique town home developer. He noted that the product contains metal roofs, hurricane windows/doors, hardy plank, etc. He noted that adjacent uses are commercial, so he does not know what this site will be if it doesnt develop as TH.

Mr. Sineath asked the proposed SF of each unit. The applicant noted that without the garage, 1300 SF, with garage - 1500 SF. HE noted that the price point will be $175 - $195k.

Mr. Carl Townsend, resident in Hanahan, noted that he traverses Clements Ferry Road and he feels as though traffic congestion is significant on this road and 49 town homes and the proposed school will make it worse.

Mr. Wofford noted that multi-car families are not the ones moving into these types of communities. He noted that TH will not generate as many trips as say commercial. He noted that he feels as though this is an extension of Mt. Pleasant. He feels as though this area is set up for growth.

CONSIDERATION PRIOR TO FIRST READING

- 1. AN ORDINANCE TO MODIFY THE OFFICIAL ZONING AND DEVELOPMENT STANDARDS MAP OF BERKELEY COUNTY, SOUTH CAROLINA, IN REGARD TO BONNELL W. MEESE FOR 1.29 ACRES ON A LOT INDICATED WITH TMS# 233-09-02-046, LOCATED ON ROYLE ROAD NEAR FARMINGTON RD/I-26; FROM R-2, MANUFACTURED RESIDENTIAL DISTRICT TO R-3, MOBILE HOME DISTRICT IN COUNCIL DISTRICT 4

Committee Member Davis moved for approval.

Committee Member Newell stated that since he is the Council Member for that District, he should have the right to move whether to approve or deny.

Committee Member Whitley inquired as to where it says that in Council Rules.

Chairman Schurlknight stated that it is kind of an understood thing.

Committee Member Davis withdrew his motion.

Ms. Alison Simmons, Planning & Zoning Director, stated that the applicant is requesting to rezone in order to conform and combine with an adjacent 1.2-acre R-3 zoned parcel. She stated that, upon combination, the minimum lot size requirement for R-3 zoning would be met. She stated that the subject property is contained in the Future Land Use Plan recommendation of Low Density Suburban, which seeks to include diverse housing choices and will act as a transition from Constrained Growth Areas to Higher Density Residential and Commercial areas. She stated that, based on adjacent zoning and adjacent Uses in the Comprehensive Plan recommendation, Staff recommended approval. She stated that the Planning Commission recommended denial in a unanimous vote. She stated that, after reviewing the requested change and hearing from many community stakeholders and opposition to the request, the Planning Commission found the request incompatible and potentially detrimental in the context of the community concerned. Members of the community present verbalized concerns regarding traffic, saturation of mobile home parks in the area, and the diminution of property values and quality of life. She stated that a petition from stakeholders was included in the Committee Members' agenda packets.

Committee Member Whitley inquired as to if the Planning Commission's decision is articulated within the Standards that would protect us from a legal standpoint.

Ms. Simmons stated that she thinks so. She stated that the reason is because, in her opinion, the best gauge of compatibility is public input. She stated that while the requested change is supported by the Comprehensive Plan, the existing zoning is, as well.

Committee Member Whitley stated that both parcels allow mobile homes. He stated that this would only change one to be in conformance - one is currently grandfathered in. He inquired as to if he was correct.

Ms. Simmons stated that the adjacent parcel is currently zoned R-3, so it supports the request. She stated that the adjacent property is grandfathered and supports a mobile home park.

Committee Member Whitley stated that either way, the protest against the mobile homes does not hold water because it has mobile homes and it is grandfathered in for mobile homes.

Ms. Simmons stated that there are currently only 2 mobile homes on this other parcel.

Committee Member Whitley inquired as to what the impact would be if this was rezoned.

Ms. Simmons stated that they would be able to provide additional mobile homes in accordance with the requirements for R-3 zoning.

Committee Member Whitley inquired as to how many.

Ms. Simmons stated that it would allow for up to 27 mobile homes on both parcels upon combination.

Committee Member Whitley stated that on the one parcel where it is already allowed, that is part of the 27 mobile homes.

Ms. Simmons stated that 13 mobile homes are allowed on that lot. She stated that if the parcel is rezoned, 14 mobile homes would be allowed on the subject parcel.

Committee Member Whitley clarified that the change would be from 2 to 14 mobile homes.

Ms. Simmons stated that this was correct.

Committee Member Cox stated that the reason for the grandfathered-in part is that County Council has decided that this is not the appropriate zoning for that area, so as mobile homes are pulled out, they are no longer allowed to bring additional mobile homes in. He inquired as to if he was correct.

Ms. Simmons stated that if a mobile home is removed from the subject parcel for a period longer than 6 months, it cannot be brought back.

Committee Member Cox inquired as to if that meant the same mobile home or any mobile home.

Ms. Simmons stated that it could be any mobile home.

Committee Member Davis inquired as to if there can be an increase from 2 mobile homes to more mobile homes under the grandfather clause provision.

Ms. Simmons replied to the negative.

Committee Member Davis stated that it is always limited to 2 or extinction/complete removal.

Ms. Simmons stated that this was correct.

Committee Member Whitley stated that, with approval, you get 27 mobile homes and, with denial, you get 15 mobile homes.

It was moved by Committee Member Newell and seconded by Committee Member Gunn to deny prior to First Reading, an Ordinance to Modify the Official Zoning and Development Standards Map of Berkeley County, South Carolina, in regard to Bonnell W. Meese for 1.29 Acres on a Lot Indicated with TMS#: 233-09-02-046, Located on Royle Road near Farmington Rd/I-26; from R-2 to R-3

PUBLIC DISCUSSION

1. Requests to be heard must be made prior to the Call to Order. [Comments on any Public Discussion items will be limited to four (4) minutes per speaker. A total of 30 minutes will be allotted for this Public Discussion period.]

Chairman Peagler explained the rules for addressing Council during Public Discussion.

Mr. Todd Olds, 431 Stoney Poynt Court, North Charleston, stated that he came before Council this evening on a request to rezone a property at Royle Road. There are some compelling facts and substantial issues that he wishes to present to Council this evening. The papers being passed out are some signatures of residents that live on the property and support the rezoning, in addition to some photos of Royle Road. One of the compelling facts he wishes to present tonight is if they base their decision this evening based on the people who are opposed to this, he'll probably go home a loser, if it is based on facts of the law, the area, its character, and what is near Royle Road, then he should walk out with approval. The Planning Director of the County has made a recommendation for approval. The Berkeley County Land Use Plan totally supports this rezoning. This rezoning request is harmonious in its entirety. Royal Road has 66 parcels. Out of 66 parcels that butt Royal Road, 42 of them have a mobile home or multiple mobile homes. The property that he is asking to be rezoned presently has two mobile homes. The adjacent property that he has beside it, has approval already for at least 13 mobile homes. The actual residents support the rezoning. The request does not negate in any way or create a negative character to the district, community or existing development of the area. They will hear consistently tonight about drugs, people in the street, traffic, that is subjective and arbitrary. There is nothing factual that can be presented to them to demonstrate that any property values have been decreased based on mobile homes. This is a mobile home community. It's an affordable living area. They are asking for a rezoning based on those facts. Based on what the County website says in bold print that the future land use and comprehensive plan is a strong guide for decision making and rezoning request. Therefore, they are asking they do this based on the law, Comprehensive Plan, the Planning Director's recommendation and not on anyone's subjective reasons, not being factual, and not being a supporter. Planning Commissions do not always get it right. They solely base their decision on subject, arbitrary reason.

Mr. Raymond Heading, 760 Royle Road, Ladson, stated that he is standing opposed to the property, TMS # 233-09-02-046, being changed from the present zone status R-2 to R-3, because there is high traffic on this road at certain times of the day. There are 13 trailer parks presently on Royle Road, that he personally counted, from I-26

overpass, Northeast, to Highway 17-A. There are trailer parks on Royle Road, Southwest of I-26 overpass. There have been 11 applications denied since as far back as April of 2002. Here they have another, same type of application trying to be passed. There have been approximately 13 trailer parks along with parcels consisting of 2 to 4 trailer parked on them. A total count was done showing an approximate count of 316 trailers off of Royle Road off of Highway 17-A to Highway 78. He is concerned about where he lives, which is directly in front of this property that is trying to be rezoned. He has put his house up for sale twice and was told by the real estate agent that because of the trailers next door and around in the area, the value of his real estate, he couldn't get what it really is worth because it is depreciated. He has woken early in the mornings and have had suspicious people sitting in his driveway. He's witnessed a large amount of consistent traffic of coming and going, which is a common red flag to predict high drug trafficking. Sometimes there are cars, truck, and mopeds that frequent the same trailer as many as twelve times within an approximate three hour period. There are unusual and strange vehicles up and down the driveways and dirt roads in search of a specific trailer. The appearance of the homes is falling apart, skirting is missing, pieces or all of it, old vehicles parked in the yards without license plates on them, and everything left out in the open of all to see. There are no privacy fencing requirements. This is a two-lane road. All traffic has no alternate means of travel. He has witnessed a boy from one of the trailers on the same tract of land that is in question and he was hit.

Mr. James Jackson, 769 Royle Road, Ladson, stated he is adjacent to the property that is in question here. He has been there for 51 years. If there was something they could have done 45 or 55 years ago, they would have done it then. There wasn't Planning Commissions then or anything back then. Most of these parcels of land on this road are around three acres in size. They bought these properties out there 50 years ago, because they wanted a country style living, but the community around there and in the southern part of Berkeley County is growing tremendously. The Summerville area where they live is growing wild. The subdivision down the road from them that is going in, they still have more house being built. Around the Sangaree school, you can't get by there in the mornings or afternoons from people dropping off and picking up kids there. They even park in the highway, and you have to sit there and wait for them to get through before they can get through that section.

Mr. Francis Gibson, 1076 Royle Road, Ladson, stated that they have nine pages of a petition of residents that have signed in opposition of the rezoning. He has been coming here since 2002, and he has been living there since 1978. He has seen the area turn from acreage to trailers. They don't need any more trailers. The precedent has been set all those times. There's one common thing, every person that comes up here that wants to put trailers in the area, they don't live there. He just wants Council to keep in mind, that since 2002, there have been 12 TMS's that they have shot down. They don't need any more trailers in the area.

Mr. Auvo Kemppinen, 329 Lake Moultrie Drive, Bonneau, stated that he is here to express his concern about the present contract with Berkeley County and Republic Services about trash and recyclables disposal. He is an immigrant, retired citizen from Finland, and he feels responsible for separating trash and recyclables. He delivers paper and cardboard to the disposal center outside of Moncks Corner once a week. There, they don't accept recyclables like they used to. Republic Service now imposes a monthly charge of $15.00 per month for doing his civic duty. He wanted to deliver his recyclables to their gathering point, but they refused. To a retired person, this amounts to real money. Something is wrong. This $15.00 a month fine for doing his civic duty appalls him, leaving him no other option than throw it out with the trash. He would like to know who the brilliant attorney was who concocted this crazy scheme, and with Council's approval. He sincerely hopes this matter will be revisited.

CHAIRMAN OF COUNTY COUNCIL

REPORTS FROM STANDING COMMITTEES

1. Committee on Finance

Chairman Joshua S. Whitley, District No. 2

a. Fiscal Year 2017 Budget Status Report

Presenters: Tim Callanan/Johnette Connelley

Chairman Whitley stated that Mr. Tim Callanan provided a Fiscal Year 2017 Budget Status Report, and no action was taken.

(That concluded Chairman Whitley's report.)

2. Committee on Land Use & Economic Development

Chairman Jack Schurlknight, District No. 6

a. AN ORDINANCE TO MODIFY THE OFFICIAL ZONING AND DEVELOPMENT STANDARDS MAP OF BERKELEY COUNTY, SOUTH CAROLINA, IN REGARD TO BONNELL W. MEESE FOR 1.29 ACRES ON A LOT INDICATED WITH TMS# 233-09-02-046, LOCATED ON ROYLE ROAD NEAR FARMINGTON RD/I-26; FROM R-2, MANUFACTURED RESIDENTIAL DISTRICT TO R-3, MOBILE HOME DISTRICT IN COUNCIL DISTRICT 4

Council Member Davis stated that he hears the citizens. Eventually, change is going to come. He is always leery of when the Planning Commission makes its decision, and when staff makes a decision. He has always been guided by those principals. It's no question that it fits within the Comprehensive Zoning Plan. Unfortunately, the fine citizens are trapped in the dilemmas of it. He told Mr. Olds that he would support it, because it fits the overall Comprehensive Plan and he wanted the folks to understand that he consistently follows this pattern. Change is hard, difficult and they don't deserve all the things happening out there, but at the same time the Comprehensive Zoning Plan was put in place for specific reasons.

Council Member Schurlknight stated that he has a lot of concerns about the effects it is going to have on the individuals that live on Royle Road. They've been there a long time, and have seen a lot. He is hearing that they have hosted a lot of development on the road, and it comes to a tipping point to where you must look at the capacity of the road, and safety. He understands that the Planning Commission denied and Staff recommended, but he thinks Council has a lead way in some of this stuff. He likes to look at it by a case by case basis. He inquired to Mr. John O. Williams, County Attorney, if he has had a chance to look at this situation and if he would address the legality of it. If Council is within its legal right.

Mr. John O. Williams, County Attorney, replied in the affirmative, and Council is justified in a vote in either direction.

Council Member Schurlknight stated that with that in mind, he has been down Royle Road many times. He has seen a lot of stuff going on in the area. It does devalue the property. He thinks they have suffered enough when it comes to development and quality of life. It concerns him that when the dust settles, they are going to be there. As Chairman of the Land Use Committee, he agrees with Council on the original recommendation of denial.

Council Member Whitley stated that he thinks he was in the minority voting for approval for First Reading, and he would send it to at least Second Reading or Third Reading not committing to voting for the potential rezoning. He is hesitant to vote for a rezoning for a mobile home park unless it fits the character of the area. His understanding though, is this rezoning would change very little, except on the 10 overall units. He is going to vote consistent as he did in Committee, and send it to Second Reading.

On recommendation of the Committee, Chairman Schurlknight moved to deny an Ordinance to Modify the Official Zoning and Development Standards Map of Berkeley County, South Carolina, in Regard to Bonnell W. Meese for 1.29 Acres on a Lot Indicated with TMS# 233-09-02-046, located on Royle Road near Farmington Rd/I-26; from R-2, Manufactured Residential District to R-3, Mobile Home District in Council District 4. The motion to deny passed by majority voice vote of Council. Council Member Whitley and Council Member Davis voted Nay.

- 02/28/17 Planning Commission RECOMMENDATION OF DENIAL
- 03/13/17 Land Use & Economic Development Committee DEFEATED

Berkeley County Planning Department staff reviewed Appellant's application and recommended (based solely on conformance with the Comprehensive Land-Use Plan) to the Planning Commission that the rezoning request be approved.

The Planning Commission held a hearing on February 28, 2017 upon the rezoning request, at which time the applicant spoke in favor of the request and members of the public, including neighboring property owners, spoke against the requested rezoning. No member of the general public spoke in favor of the request.

After hearing from the public and considering the merits of application for rezoning, the Planning Commission voted unanimously to recommend to the County Council that it deny the rezoning request.

The matter then procedurally continued in the ordinary course and was brought before the County's Land Use & Economic Development Committee on March 13, 2017. Planning staff reported on the status of the matter. Following receipt of input from the public and discussion by members of the committee, the Land Use & Economic Development Committee voted 6-2 to deny the rezoning request.

The matter was then presented to the full County Council for action on a proposed ordinance to rezone the subject property at its March 27, 2017 meeting. Members of the public appeared and expressed a variety of concerns in the "Public Discussion" period of the hearing.

When the question of consideration of first reading on the proposed ordinance to rezone the subject property came for a vote by County Council, on motion properly made and seconded, after deliberation and discussion, County Council voted 5-2 to deny the rezoning request.

As reflected in the summary minutes and the real time video recordings of the proceedings, throughout the legislative consideration of the rezoning proposal, opinions for and against the proposal were voiced and for a variety of reasons.

Appellant brought the instant case when he was denied his request to have the subject property rezoned in order to place up to 14 mobile homes for rent on the 1.29 acre lot.

The parties have consented to the appointment of a Special Referee and to adjudicate the matter before him as an appeal.

STATEMENT OF FACTS

The following facts are undisputed:

(1) that at all times relevant to these proceedings, the only matter before Berkeley County government was Mr. Olds' rezoning request;

(2) that he was afforded the unrestricted opportunity to be heard at three public hearings on his application for rezoning;

(3) that in each forum Mr. Olds appeared in person, spoke at length and addressed all panels directly;

(4) that Mr. Olds "made his case" for rezoning in each forum;

(5) that various members of the general public appeared before each panel and voiced a variety of concerns, positions and opinions; and

(6) that his rezoning request was not favorably received in all instances;

What is in substantial dispute forms the basis of Appellant's appeal; that is to say, according to the Appellant the actions of the appointed and elected officials of Berkeley County in denying his rezoning request were based solely on subjective, arbitrary and capricious considerations.

The actual record establishes the rezoning request was at all times and in all venues fairly debatable.

In her presentation before the Land Use & Economic Development Committee on March 13, 2017, Planning and Zoning Director Alison Simmons testified as follows:

"... Planning Commission recommended denial in a unanimous vote after reviewing the requested change and hearing from many community stakeholders in opposition to the request. Planning Commission found the request incompatible and potentially detrimental in the context of the community concerned. Members of the community present verbalized concerns regarding traffic, saturation of mobile home parks in the area and the diminution of property values and quality of life..."

Excerpts of testimony and comments from the video recording of the March 27th Council meeting include inter alia:

- “In a couple of those (pictures) you will see it is high traffic on this road at certain times of day”... “And yes, I can say that I have put my house up for sale twice and was told by the real estate agent that because of the trailers next door and around in my area that the value of my real estate, I could not get what it would really be worth because it has depreciated” ... “There is a two and a half mile stretch from 17A to 78. It takes approximately twenty to twenty-two minutes to travel both ways or one way in heavy traffic time. We are posed with a major problem with the safety factor of those emergency vehicles going to and from. One person being trapped in a fire, losing one minute can cost him his life”. Raymond Heddin.
- “My concern is about traffic, safety and children”... “That’s a big concern right there.” Councilman Jack Schurlknight.
- “From the four way stop to my house is probably 800 yards, roughly, and it backs up every day. And I’ve got video standing on my front porch where they’re stopped in the road waiting to get through.” Raymond Heddin.
- “Traffic and everything on there around Sangaree School. You can’t get there in the afternoons or in the mornings for people dropping or picking up kids there. They even park in the highway. You got to sit there and wait for them to get through before you can get through that intersection there around the school. Y’all need to come around there in the afternoons and see what kind of traffic we got on the road.” James Jackson.
- “It comes to a tipping point to where you know you got carrying capacity on the road. You got to look at the safety. And that’s the direction I’m coming from. Totally.” Councilman Jack Schurlknight.
- “I don’t hear anyone saying mobile homes are a bad thing because you live there. However, I do hear concerns about traffic and safety of the residents and children.” Supervisor and Chairman of County Council William Peagler.

ARGUMENTS

Berkeley County Council has been vested with the following powers by state law:

All counties of the State, in addition to the powers conferred to their specific form of government, have authority to enact regulations, resolutions, and ordinances, not inconsistent with the Constitution and general law of this State, including the exercise of these powers in relation to health and order in counties or respecting any subject as appears to them necessary and proper for the security, general welfare, and convenience of counties or for preserving health, peace, order, and good government in them. The powers of a county must be liberally construed in favor of the county (emphasis added) and the specific mention of particular powers may not be construed as limiting in any manner the general powers of counties. S.C. Code Ann. § 4-9-25.

With respect to its zoning ordinances, Berkeley County Council must abide by the following statutory mandate:

(A) Zoning ordinances must be for the general purposes of guiding development in accordance with existing and future needs and promoting the public health, safety, morals, convenience, order, appearance, prosperity, and general welfare. S.C. Code Ann. § 6-29-710.

Berkeley County has adopted a county wide zoning ordinance. It is known as the Berkeley County Zoning and Development Standards Ordinance, (“Zoning Ordinance”). Effective August 28, 2001. There is no dispute here as to whether the Zoning Ordinance comports with state law.

All purposes of the Zoning Ordinance are stated in Article 1.2. There are many stated purposes, which are not mutually exclusive. The “Purpose and Authority” article reads as follows:

ARTICLE 1. - PURPOSE AND AUTHORITY

1.1. - Authority.

This ordinance is adopted pursuant to the statutory authority conferred by S.C. Code 1976, § 6-29-710 et seq., as amended.

1.2. - Purpose.

It is the purpose of this ordinance to:

- A. Implement the goals and policies outlined in the Berkeley County Comprehensive Plan;
- B. Provide for adequate light, air, and open space;
- C. Prevent the overcrowding of land, to avoid undue concentration of population, and to lessen congestion in the streets;
- D. Facilitate the creation of a convenient, attractive, and harmonious community; to protect and preserve scenic, historic, or ecologically sensitive areas;
- E. Regulate the density and distribution of populations and the uses of buildings, structures and land for trade, industry, residence, recreation, agriculture, forestry, conservation, airports and approaches thereto, water supply, sanitation, and public activities;
- F. Facilitate the adequate provision or availability of transportation, police and fire protection, water, sewage, schools, parks, and other recreational facilities, affordable housing, and disaster evacuation;
- G. Distribution of population and traffic that will tend to create conditions favorable to health, safety, convenience, appearance, prosperity, morals, order, and the general welfare of the county.

The legislative actions of the Planning Commission, the Land Use & Economic Development Committee and the full County Council to retain the previously established R-2 zoning designation on the subject property are wholly consistent with several of the purposes of the Zoning Ordinance.

Appellant's Argument No. 1

Appellant first argues that the decision of County Council to deny his rezoning request was based on unsupported, subjective complaints of neighbors. The record does not support his contention.

What the whole record establishes and puts in open display is a much different picture, a snapshot of a very typical local legislative process. Sometimes the local legislative process can be boring. Sometimes it can be entertaining; sometimes ragged and occasionally raw. Rarely is it a version from a Civics Class.

It is undeniable here that there were folks who took the microphone and spoke freely, passionately and frankly on Appellant's rezoning request. Some of those sentiments were apparently not as "pure" or "politically correct" as Appellant would prefer. Some sentiments were calmly communicated. Others were more vociferous. Most testified as to what they actually saw and experienced in the neighborhood, all objectively observable and not utterly "subjective" as Appellant chooses to characterize them.

However, in an overly zealous insistence on a sanitized and fanciful version of every local legislative process, Appellant is demanding a process that does not exist in the real world. Moreover, in a not so subtle display of his own arbitrariness, Appellant is attempting to impute the words of citizen participants in a public forum to every appointed and elected official who disagreed with his zoning change request. In so doing, Appellant is staining the very process that he says was stained.

There is nothing in the entire record that evidences that any voting member of the Planning Commission or voting member of Council voted a specific way based on any improper consideration.³ In other words, the subject was fairly debatable.

Moreover, it is well-settled in South Carolina that rezoning is a legislative matter⁴, and a court has no power to zone property; a rezoning decision is presumptively valid, and a property owner bears the burden of proving otherwise. (emphasis added). Bear Enterprises. v. County of Greenville, 319 S.C. 137, 459 S.E.2d 883 (Ct. App. 1995).⁵ A presumption of validity can only be overcome by clear and convincing evidence.⁶ Lenardis v. City of Greenville, 316 S.C. 471, 450 S.E.2d 597 (Ct. App. 1994) (propriety of city's decision in refusing to rezone property from office use to commercial use was not so unreasonable as to impair or destroy property owner's constitutional rights; owner bought property as speculative investment with full knowledge of existing zoning and surrounding commercial development, and vast majority of surrounding property in city was residential); Harbit v. City of Charleston, 382 S.C. 383, 675 S.E.2d 776 (Ct. App. 2009), as amended (May 4, 2009) (City's denial of application to rezone property consisting

⁴ The City of Aiken's zoning decision in the matter of Knowles v. City of Aiken, 305 S.C. 219, 407 S.E. 2d 639 (1991), was not upset. Our Supreme Court restated well-settled law in this state that local zoning is a legislative act which will not be interfered with by the courts unless there is a clear violation of citizen's constitutional rights. In order to successfully assault a city's zoning decision, a citizen must establish that the decision was arbitrary and unreasonable, citing Byrd, et al. v. City of North Augusta, 261 S.C. 591, 201 S.E.2d 744 (1974).

Courts have no prerogative to pass upon the wisdom of the municipality's decision unless such decision is "so unreasonable as to impair or destroy citizen's constitutional rights." Hampton v. Richland County, 292 S.C. at 503, 357 S.E.2d at 465 (Ct.App.1987) [quoting Rush v. City of Greenville, 246 S.C. 268, 276, 143 S.E.2d 527, 531 (1965)]; and the decision should not be overturned by a court so long as the decision is "fairly debatable." Ibid. [quoting Rushing v. City of Greenville, 265 S.C. at 288, 217 S.E.2d at 799 (1975)]. In Knowles, the Court held that even if the City's ordinance does constitute spot zoning, it cannot invalidate this zoning because its propriety is at the least "fairly debatable" and is not "so unreasonable as to impair or destroy citizen's constitutional rights" so as to allow us to second guess the City's wisdom in passing the ordinance.

⁶ In Footnote 1 to the Bear Enterprises opinion the Court noted:

"We note that Bear deposed Council members and presented their testimony as evidence to support Bear's argument that Council's decision was arbitrary. We are aware of no authority allowing someone challenging action by Council to interrogate members individually to impeach Council's decision. The governing body of a municipality acts as a collective body, not as individuals, and decisions made in this fashion are the product of debate and compromise. If individuals are not satisfied with decisions made by members of a municipal government within the limits of the law, their remedy is at the polls, not the courts. Although we feel it was inappropriate to examine Council members in this manner, the County did not object to the procedure in this case".

of house on corner lot from residential to limited commercial use was fairly debatable and not so unreasonable as to impair or destroy property owner's constitutional rights, even though other similarly situated properties on one of two bordering streets were zoned for limited commercial use, where city had a vested interest in reserving the area's residential character, neighborhood citizens were concerned that the area would become too commercial, and the property at issue acted as a buffer between residential area and a busier commercial area).

The Supreme Court of South Carolina has held that a zoning ordinance excluding mobile homes from all areas except mobile home districts was valid and enforceable. To overcome the presumption of validity there must be an absence of any evidence supporting the legislative action. Town of Scranton v. Willoughby, 306 S.C. 421, 412 S.E.2d 424 (1991). Particular reasons for the mobile homes ordinance in Willoughby are not discussed in depth in that opinion, though the court noted that the zoning ordinance was enacted "for the purpose of promoting the health, safety, morals, and general welfare of the community." Id. at 422, 412 S.E.2d at 425. That is precisely the case here.

Of course, in the instant case, the County is not seeking to confine mobile homes in a particular district or districts, but Willoughby suggests in any case that a Plaintiff may defeat the rezoning decision only with clear and convincing evidence. Willoughby suggests that the decision was unobjectionable to the extent that it was based on any evidence that there would be a significant increase in noise or traffic congestion if the rezoning was approved.

Appellant also alleges that the Comprehensive Plan requires the property in question to be zoned R-3, the classification he seeks in the rezoning process.

The County planning staff here found that the requested rezoning was consistent with the Comprehensive Plan, but the elected officials, possessed with their legislative authority determined that staff's recommendation, although a proper consideration, was outweighed by other considerations rooted in public safety, health, and welfare, among other purposes.

The mere fact that the Planning Commission and the County Council reached a decision different from that recommended by planning staff does not render the final decision arbitrary and capricious. The decision was for the Council to make, after due deliberations and taking into account all of the facts. See Greb v. Bd. of Comm'rs for Klamath County, 32 Or. App. 39, 573

P.2d 733 (1978) (each county governing body is required to retain responsibility for land use planning within its county, and is therefore vested with authority to make county land use decisions; County Board of Commissioners is not bound by recommendations of County Planning Commission even if supported by substantial evidence); Adams v. City of Richmond, 340 S.W.2d 204 (Ky. 1960) (zoning is vested by statute in the city legislative body, and it had power to override or reject a recommendation of the zoning commission which merely makes recommendations).

Appellant cites three (3) cases in his brief. Each case cited involves a matter originating before a local Board of Zoning Appeals in connection with an application for a special exception. The BZA was acting in each instance in the cases cited by the Plaintiff in a “quasi-judicial role”.

This is not an appeal from the BZA which by ordinance prescribes the duties of the BZA⁷. Rather it is a challenge to the legislative function of County Council. This Court should, as all Courts are required by law, practice judicial restraint and not supplant its judgment for the local government’s legislative judgment. Lenardis, Id. et al.

Appellant’s second argument relates to substantive due process. In order to prove a denial of substantive due process, a party must show that he was arbitrarily and capriciously deprived of a cognizable property interest rooted in state law; the burden of proving the invalidity of a zoning ordinance (or decision) is on the party attacking it, and it is incumbent upon the challenger to show the arbitrary and capricious character of the ordinance (or decision) through clear and convincing evidence. McMaster v. Columbia Bd. of Zoning Appeals, 395 S.C. 499, 719 S.E.2d 660 (2011). As stated in McMaster, the validity of a particular zoning measure must be considered not in the abstract, but in connection with the locality and surrounding circumstances. The authority of a municipality to restrict the use of privately- owned property through zoning is founded in the police power. Id. at 505, 719 S.E.2d at 663.

⁷ Berkeley County Zoning Ordinance 21.6. - Decisions of the board of zoning appeals. All final decisions and orders of the board must be in writing and be permanently filed as a public record. All findings of fact and conclusions of law must be separately stated in final decisions or orders of the board, which must be delivered to parties of interest by certified mail.

A property owner's substantive due process challenge to a zoning ordinance may be analyzed under the arbitrary and capricious framework. Dunes W. Golf Club, LLC v. Town of Mount Pleasant, 401 S.C. 280, 737 S.E.2d 601 (2013).

In McMaster, a zoning restriction withstood a substantive due process challenge. In that case, the court held that a zoning ordinance that limited to three the number of unrelated individuals who may live together as a single housekeeping unit was a valid exercise of the city's broad police power, and because a rational relationship existed between the city's decision to limit the number of unrelated individuals who may live together and the legitimate governmental interests of controlling the undesirable qualities associated with mass student congestion, the city's decision did not violate the Due Process Clause of the State Constitution. 395 S.C. at 508, 719 S.E.2d at 664 (citing Ames Rental Prop. Ass'n v. City of Ames, 736 N.W.2d 255, 261 (Iowa 2007))⁸

In the zoning context, substantive due process plaintiffs first must prove that the state deprived them of a property interest and that its action fell so far beyond the outer limits of legitimate governmental action that no process could cure the deficiency, and they also must overcome a court's extreme reluctance to upset the delicate political balance at play in local land-use disputes. Henry v. Jefferson County Comm'n, 637 F.3d 269 (4th Cir. 2011). In determining whether a zoning action violates substantive due process, the court may consider, among other factors, whether (1) the zoning decision is tainted with fundamental procedural irregularity, (2) the action is targeted at a single party, and (3) the action deviates from or is inconsistent with regular practice. MLC Auto., LLC v. Town of Southern Pines, 532 F.3d 269 (4th Cir. 2008). Absent any of these factors, the rezoning denial must withstand a substantive due process challenge.

The principle that for a violation of substantive due process, there must be conduct by the defendant that "shocks the conscience" has been applied in the zoning context. See Huggins v. Prince George's County, 683 F.3d 525 (4th Cir. 2012) (even if property owner had residual protected property interest in operating a salvage automobile wholesaling business on property under revoked permits, county's shutting down of business for owner's failure to obtain grading and occupancy permits did not approach conscience shocking threshold for substantive due process violation by executive action; county did not deliberately intended to injure owner, indeed, county worked with owner for over two years to help it obtain permits). The "shock the conscience" standard is a difficult one to satisfy, requiring more than mere arbitrariness.

Here, no fair reading and review of the record would indicate anything close to a "shock the conscience" scenario relative to the legislative process which played out in the instant case.

Appellant's Argument No. 3

Appellant's third argument relates to his claim that the decision of County Council to deny his rezoning request was a violation of equal protection. Respondents deny the claim and the record does not support it.

If there is no suspect or quasi-suspect class and no fundamental right is involved, a zoning ordinance's viability under the equal protection clause, or a zoning decision, should be tested under the "rational basis" standard. Bibco Corp. v. City of Sumter, 332 S.C. 45, 504 S.E.2d 112 (1998); King v. Rubenstein, 825 F.3d 206 (4th Cir. 2016) (in general, unless a suspect class is involved, disparate treatment is presumed to be valid under equal protection clause, and will be sustained if there is a rational relationship between the disparity of treatment and some legitimate governmental purpose).

There are three steps in determining whether an ordinance (or decision) survives rational basis scrutiny under the equal protection clause: (1) whether plaintiff was treated differently than others similarly situated; (2) whether defendant intentionally discriminated against plaintiff and had a rational basis for doing so; and (3) whether the discrimination/classification bears a rational relationship to a legitimate government purpose or goal. Bibco Corp., 332 S.C. at 52-53, 504 S.E.2d at 116. All of the elements of the rational basis test are fact intensive.

In Bibco Corp., a city residential zoning ordinance's exclusion of mobile homes from some, but not all, residential districts in the city was rationally related to legitimate government purposes of preserving land for low density, single-family dwellings, protecting surrounding property values, guarding against increased crime, guarding against increased traffic flow and congestion, and maintaining aesthetics, and thus the ordinance did not violate the equal protection clause.

The Fourth Circuit has held that discriminatory motivations of people who testified before a decision-making body could only be probative of the body's motivations for purposes of an equal protection analysis where (1) the public testimony was overwhelmingly opposed to the proposal; (2) for a distinct discriminatory reason; and (3) the body's members were clearly swayed by that public opposition, fully aware of its basis in discrimination and prejudice. Sylvia Dev. Corp. v. Calvert County, 48 F.3d 810 (4th Cir. 1995). In Sylvia Dev. Corp., a developer failed to establish, in his civil rights action alleging violation of the equal protection clause, that County Commissioners' denial of his application for a special zoning designation was based on his status as nonresident of the county, even though an activist at a hearing on the application stated that she wanted to know where the developer "came from" and that "outside people" were developing the county; ten (10) other citizens testified at the hearing, there was no other comment or question on the subject of the developer's out-of-county residence, a commissioner noted the irrelevance of the activist's comments, and, in the ensuing debate among commissioners, no reference was made to the activist's comments.

Appellant's Argument No. 4

Appellant's fourth argument is based on his claim that the decision of County Council to deny his rezoning request violated procedural due process. Respondents deny the claim and the record does not support it.

Due process does not require a trial-type hearing in every conceivable case of alleged government impairment of a private interest. The fundamental requirement of procedural due process is the opportunity to be heard at a meaningful time and in a meaningful manner. S.C. Dep't of Soc. Servs. v. Wilson, 352 S.C. 445, 574 S.E.2d 730 (2002).

Appellant clearly received procedural due process⁹. His only specific complaint for this cause of action concerns alleged disagreement with those opposing the rezoning, and rejection of the staff recommendations.

The statutory procedure for an amendment of a zoning regulation is set out in S.C. Code Ann. § 6-29-760:

(A) Before enacting or amending any zoning regulations or maps, the governing authority or the planning commission, if authorized by the governing authority, shall hold a public hearing on it, which must be advertised and conducted according to lawfully prescribed procedures. If no established procedures exist, then at least fifteen days' notice of the time and place of the public hearing must be given in a newspaper of general circulation in the municipality or county. In cases involving rezoning, conspicuous notice shall be posted on or adjacent to the property affected, with at least one such notice being visible from each public thoroughfare that abuts the property. If the local government maintains a list of groups that have expressed an interest in being informed of zoning proceedings, notice of such meetings must be mailed to these groups. No change in or departure from the text or maps as recommended by the local planning commission may be made pursuant to the hearing unless the change or departure be first submitted to the planning commission for review and recommendation. The planning commission shall have a time prescribed in the ordinance which may not be more than thirty days within which to submit its report and recommendation on the change to the governing authority. If the planning commission fails to submit a report within the prescribed time period, it is deemed to have approved the change or departure. When the required public hearing is held by the planning commission, no public hearing by the governing authority is required before amending the zoning ordinance text or maps.

(B) If a landowner whose land is the subject of a proposed amendment will be allowed to present oral or written comments to the planning commission, at least ten days' notice and an opportunity to comment in the same manner must be given to other interested members of the public, including owners of adjoining property.

(C) An owner of adjoining land or his representative has standing to bring an action contesting the ordinance or amendment; however, this subsection does not create any new substantive right in any party.

(D) No challenge to the adequacy of notice or challenge to the validity of a regulation or map, or amendment to it, whether enacted before or after the effective date of this section, may be made sixty days after the decision of the governing body if there has been substantial compliance with the notice requirements of this section or with established procedures of the governing authority or the planning commission.

⁹ Plaintiff had more minutes of "podium time" with appointed and elected officials than any other speaker over the course of the three hearings.

In Harbit v. City of Charleston, 382 S.C. 383, 675 S.E.2d 776 (Ct. App. 2009), as amended (May 4, 2009), a property owner who sought to rezone property from residential use to limited commercial use was afforded procedural due process, where he received notice of the public hearing on the matter, was allowed to present his arguments at the planning commission and city council levels, and was given three levels of review of the decision not to rezone property. All of the above components of procedural due process were available to the Appellant and he directly participated in the process.

With regard to a procedural due process claim, the Fourth Circuit in Sylvia Dev. Corp., ruled that a developer did not have a constitutionally protected property interest in approval of an application for a special zoning designation to develop agricultural land in the county into a subdivision of single-family homes, even though zoning ordinances required creation of special zoning areas; the location of special zoning areas was discretionary with the County Commissioners, and the criteria imposed by a zoning ordinance for the land to qualify for special zoning were merely preconditions for consideration for approval. Moreover, a County Planning Commission's favorable recommendation with respect to the developer's application did not create a constitutionally protected property interest in approval of the application; while the County Commissioners were required to seek the recommendation of the planning commission, the zoning ordinance required only that the commissioners consider, not follow, that recommendation. 48 F.3d at 826-27. Even a state court judgment reversing the County Commissioners' denial of the developer's application did not indicate that the developer had a preexisting constitutionally protected property interest in approval of application.

The court further held that even if the developer had a constitutionally protected property interest in approval of his application for the special zoning designation to develop agricultural land into a subdivision of single-family homes, he failed to establish a violation of procedural due process with respect to denial of the application, notwithstanding his assertion that the County Commissioners' decision was mistaken and lacked evidentiary support. The commissioners conducted an open hearing, following proper notice, at which they heard the positions of all interested parties, following the hearing the commissioners made their decision and stated the reasons for decision, and the developer was entitled to appeal the decision and did so successfully. Likewise, arguably, the Plaintiff here has no property interest in obtaining the requested rezoning and, in any case, he was afforded all the process that was due.

In another case, landowners were provided with a meaningful opportunity to be heard at a hearing on a city planning commission's decision on the landowners' application to subdivide their property, and thus the landowners' procedural due process rights were not violated; the commission held a public hearing at which the landowners submitted 26 exhibits to support their application, and the commission did not preclude the landowners from accessing the evidence in opposition to their application, which mostly consisted of public information regarding the historical significance of the property. Kurschner v. City of Camden Planning Comm'n, 376 S.C. 165, 656 S.E.2d 346 (2008). As also stated in Kurschner, a trial-type hearing was not required, as that would greatly hinder the commission's ability to make an informed and reasoned decision, as well as intrude upon a municipality's statutorily granted legislative authority.

If there otherwise are sufficient procedures to satisfy the right to notice and an opportunity to be heard, including judicial review, general allegations of bias in a zoning decision should not be sufficient to support an allegation of denial of procedural due process. See Pellegrino Food Prods. Co. v. City of Warren, 136 F. Supp. 2d 391 (W.D. Pa. 2000) (bakery owner was not denied procedural due process, when it was granted administrative appeal of adverse zoning and building permit decisions, even though owner claimed that city officials were biased against it); Breakzone Billiards v. City of Torrance, 81 Cal. App. 4th 1205, 97 Cal. Rptr. 2d 467 (2000) (where no individual procedural errors occurred, cumulative effect of city's actions did not create appearance of bias resulting in violation of due process rights of billiard parlor during de novo review by city council of city planning commission's grant of conditional use permit allowing expansion of parlor); John E. Long, Inc. v. Borough of Ringwood, 61 F. Supp. 2d 273 (D.N.J. 1998) (property owners in New Jersey were not denied procedural due process by denial of rezoning application, despite allegation that local zoning authorities were biased; state provided full judicial mechanism for challenging decision), aff'd, 213 F.3d 628 (3d Cir. 2000).

The Sixth Circuit held, in Braun v. Ann Arbor Charter Twp., 519 F.3d 564 (6th Cir. 2008), that landowners had no protected property interest in rezoning to allow a trailer park and other residential development on their land that was zoned for agricultural use, and thus no procedural due process violation occurred from a township's refusal to rezone; there was no showing of any policy, law, or understanding with the township to create a "rezoning benefit," and the township had the discretion to deny the request.

As was also recognized and followed in Bear Enterprises, only where a local government's zoning action (including a decision whether to rezone) is so unreasonable as to impair or destroy constitutional rights, will courts declare the action unconstitutional, and if the propriety of the decision is even "fairly debatable," a reviewing court cannot inject its judgment into the review of the decision, but must leave the decision undisturbed. As in Town of Iva, it was incumbent upon the party challenging the zoning decision to show by clear and convincing evidence the arbitrary and capricious nature of that action. Bear Enters., 319 S.C. at 140-41, 459 S.E.2d at 886. In upholding the refusal to rezone in Bear Enterprises, the court also stated that a local legislative body does not deny due process simply because it does not permit a landowner to make the most beneficial use of its property.

CONCLUSION

For the reasons set forth above, the legislative decision of Berkeley County Council to deny Appellant's rezoning request should and must as a matter of law be declared valid and affirmed.

RESPONDENTS' SUPPLEMENTAL BRIEF

Respondents submit this Supplemental Brief to their July 5, 2019 Brief to elaborate on the question whether the 2010 Berkeley County Comprehensive Plan, (“Plan”) standing alone has the force of law. Respondents incorporate their July 5, 2019 Brief by expressed reference.

The answer to the question posed is that while Plan is a creation and product of a lawful process, the Plan is not law. That inescapable conclusion is found in the plain words of the Plan itself.¹

Specifically, reference is made to the Introduction which states in pertinent part:

Since the passage of Berkeley County’s Comprehensive Plan Update, continued growth and development has led to a changing set of issues, goals and needs for the jurisdiction. The 2010 Comprehensive Plan is a document intended to both identify the positive attributes and components which continue to define Berkeley County, while guiding the growth and development of Berkeley County for the next fifteen to twenty years. It is in essence, a new blueprint for the County’s future. (emphasis added).

Reference is also made to the Purpose of the Plan which states in pertinent part:

The purpose of the Plan is to provide a snapshot of where the County is currently, and to set forth goals for future land use development with specific policies and recommended strategies for achieving these goals. The plan will guide decision-makers when making decisions, policies and laws regarding the future development of land, provision of essential community facilities, and preservation of natural and cultural resources. It is intended to generate local pride and enthusiasm about the future of the community, thereby ensuring the citizens are involved with the implementation of the Plan.

The goals in this Plan do not supersede those adopted by individual jurisdictions, however identifies areas where coordinated planning should be done on inter-jurisdictional issues that affect both the County and its municipalities.

The result is a concise, user-friendly document intended to operate in conjunction with adopted and amended zoning and land use regulations, in that issues identified in the Plan may be addressed through the development of suitable regulations and ordinances consistent with the policies identified in the Plan. The purpose of the 2010 Comprehensive Plan is to serve as a mechanism for which future land use and development decisions can be made that will help shape the future of Berkeley County, (emphasis added).

Reference is also made to the Vision of the Plan which states in pertinent part:

Throughout the planning process, Planning Commission and citizen input consistently come back to the same basic ideas or principles of how Berkeley County is envisioned. This includes concerns over issues such as rapid growth, adequate infrastructure and quality of life; and hopes such as better planning, more jobs and preservation.

Based on the information gathered, the following overall vision has been expressed and embraced:

Berkeley County is a vibrant community that embraces its history while promoting growth and development. The County will continue to promote sustainability by implementing the five guiding principals of the adopted comprehensive plan:

- Protect and promote distinctive, diverse communities;
- Manage infrastructure systems effectively and expand them efficiently;
- Respect and enhance historical and natural resources and expand their public accessibility;
- Make recreational opportunities--- both active and passive---available county-wide; and
- Draft a clear, fair plan to be implemented through simplified and streamlined processes.

Reference is also made to the Plan Implementation section of the Plan which states in pertinent part:

The Comprehensive Plan is part of an ongoing process... the policies in this Plan are intended to be building blocks for future planning efforts and land development decisions. (emphasis added).

State law also contemplates that a comprehensive plan is intended to be a guide to decision-makers. Title 6, Chapter 7 of the South Carolina Code of Laws, under the heading Planning by Local Governments provides as follows:

The intent of this chapter is to enable municipalities and counties acting individually or in concert to preserve and enhance their present advantages, to overcome their present handicaps, and to prevent or minimize such future problems as may be foreseen. To accomplish this intent local governments are encouraged to plan for future development; to prepare, adopt, and from time to time revise, a comprehensive plan to guide future local development; and to participate in a regional planning organization to coordinate local planning and development with that of the surrounding region. As aids in the implementation of the comprehensive plan local governments are encouraged to adopt and enforce appropriate land use controls, and cooperate with other governmental authorities. (emphasis added).

The provisions of this chapter are declared to be necessary for the promotion, protection, and improvement of the public health, safety, comfort, good order, appearance, convenience, prosperity, morals, and general welfare.

Any county or municipality may, but shall not be required to, exercise any of the powers granted by this chapter. Whenever such a governing authority shall elect to exercise any of the powers granted by this chapter, such powers shall be exercised in the manner hereinafter prescribed. S.C. Code Ann. § 6-7-10. Declaration of Purpose.

Within Title 6, Chapter 29 of the South Carolina Code of Laws, The South Carolina Local Government Comprehensive Planning Enabling Act of 1994 are found the following:

(A) The local planning commission shall develop and maintain a planning process which will result in the systematic preparation and continual re-evaluation and updating of those elements considered critical, necessary, and desirable to guide the development and redevelopment of its area of jurisdiction. S.C. Code Ann. § 6-29-510. Planning process; elements; comprehensive plan. (emphasis added).

(A) Zoning ordinances must be for the general purposes of guiding development in accordance with existing and future needs and promoting the public health, safety, morals, convenience, order, appearance, prosperity, and general welfare. To these ends, zoning ordinances must be made with reasonable consideration of the following purposes, where applicable:

(1) to provide for adequate light, air, and open space;

(2) to prevent the overcrowding of land, to avoid undue concentration of population, and to lessen congestion in the streets;

(3) to facilitate the creation of a convenient, attractive, and harmonious community;

(4) to protect and preserve scenic, historic, or ecologically sensitive areas;

(5) to regulate the density and distribution of populations and the uses of buildings, structures and land for trade, industry, residence, recreation, agriculture, forestry, conservation, airports and approaches thereto, water supply, sanitation, protection against floods, public activities, and other purposes;

(6) to facilitate the adequate provision or availability of transportation, police and fire protection, water, sewage, schools, parks, and other recreational facilities, affordable housing, disaster evacuation, and other public services and requirements. "Other public requirements" which the local governing body intends to address by a particular ordinance or action must be specified in the preamble or some other part of the ordinance or action;

(7) to secure safety from fire, flood, and other dangers; and

(8) to further the public welfare in any other regard specified by a local governing body. S.C. Code Ann. §6-29-710.

CONCLUSION

The Plan, the County's Zoning Ordinance² and state law all plainly and consistently describe the Plan and associated zoning decisions in broad, purpose-driven terms. It would render the legislative and constitutional mandate and authority of County Council to carry out those purposes meaningless if it were otherwise.

TO: John West, Esq., Attorney for Defendants:

Pursuant to Rules 59 and 60 of the South Carolina Rules of Civil Procedure, the plaintiff requests that the Court amend or alter the Final Order entered May 12, 2020, on the ground that the Court overlooks important matters of fact and law as set forth more specifically in the Memorandum of Law being submitted simultaneously with this Motion. Specifically, the plaintiff contends that a government decision that is “fairly debatable,” becomes arbitrary and capricious when the decision is grounded only upon pure speculation unsupported by a scintilla of evidence. The plaintiff also contends that the Court erred in applying “an extremely high burden of proof” on the plaintiff.

It is impossible to determine who dislikes Motions for Reconsideration more: judges or lawyers. However, the appellate courts do not hesitate to dismiss appeals on the ground that a party failed to give a trial court an opportunity to address an issue raised on appeal, so lawyers, being overly cautious humans, routinely file Motions for Reconsideration, which are just as routinely summarily denied by trial courts. (Although, to be fair to the Rule and to the capacity of the Bench for self-correction, on three occasions, the undersigned convinced three separate trial courts to reverse a decision.)

There is no dispute that the May 12, 2020, Order under review is a well-written and well analyzed judicial Order, and no party can question the time and thoroughness invested in its composition as is evident throughout. However, appellant respectfully submits that the conclusion reached in the Order is the result of an error of law, being controlled in equal parts by an improper inference and a misapplication of South Carolina law.

The error at the heart of the Court's reasoning starts with the legal conclusion reached by the Court on page 19; to wit, that Council's rejection of the rezoning request is a "fairly debatable" conclusion: "That the Plaintiff's application to rezone his property was consistent with the Comprehensive Plan is certainly a strong point in his favor. However, it is not enough to overcome his extremely high burden of proving that the merits of Council's legislative decision are not at least fairly debatable." (Order page 19.) The Court's decision to hold appellant to an evidentiary standard of "extremely high burden" is erroneous. Appellant concedes that courts give deference to legislative bodies on legislative decisions, but when a governmental body takes up a citizen's request for equal treatment and makes a decision about a particular citizen's use of his property, the burden of showing the decision is controlled by either an error of law or an improper inference is no different than the burden imposed on any civil litigant in any civil dispute; to wit, a preponderance of the evidence.

In a powerful work of legal analysis that focused on whether the State of South Carolina has the power to require a convicted felon who is released from the Department of Corrections after serving her sentence must submit to lifetime electronic monitoring, the Supreme Court took up the question as to whether such legislative decision did or did not violate the plaintiff's due process. While holding that a challenge to the constitutionality of a statute must be proven beyond a reasonable doubt, Justice Hearn, writing for the Court stated:

However, one does not have a general liberty interest simply in being free from arbitrary and capricious government action. Hawkins v. Freeman, 195 F.3d 732, 749 (4th Cir. 1999) (en banc). Rather, "the substantive component of the due process clause only protects from arbitrary government action that infringes a specific liberty interest." Id. If the interest infringed upon is a fundamental right, the statute must be "narrowly tailored to serve a compelling state interest." Reno v. Flores, 507 U.S. 292, 302 (1993); see also In re Treatment and Care of Luckabaugh, 351 S.C. 122, 140, 568 S.E.2d 338, 347 (2002). If the right is not a fundamental one, the statute is only subject to rational basis review. Luckabaugh, 351 S.C. at 140, 568 S.E.2d at 347. Dykes does not argue South Carolina's satellite monitoring scheme fails the lesser rational basis review, choosing instead to rely exclusively on strict scrutiny. Accordingly, we proceed only under this heightened review and must first determine whether the alleged right the statute infringes upon is fundamental.

In 2013, the Supreme Court withdrew Justice Hearn's 2012 Opinion, which contained a concurring opinion by Justice Kittredge, and reissued it with Justice Kittredge writing the Opinion, with a dissent by Justice Hearn. (The 2012 Opinion reversed the trial court; the 2013 Opinion affirmed the Court of Appeals as modified.) The only difference between the 2012 and the 2013 Opinions is that the Court narrowed the portion of the statute it declared unconstitutional, but Justice Kittredge articulated the same legal principal as Justice Hearn in 2012 concerning the burden of proof although he stated it differently:

The complete absence of any opportunity for judicial review to assess a risk of re-offending, which is beyond the norm of Jessica's law, is arbitrary and cannot be deemed rationally related to the legislature's stated purpose of protecting the public from those with a high risk of re-offending. See Luckabaugh, 351 S.C. at 139-40, 568 S.E.2d at 346 (finding due process ensures that a statute which deprives a person of a liberty interest has "at a minimum, a rational basis, and may not be arbitrary"); see also Lyng v. Int'l Union, 485 U.S. 360, 375 (1988) (Marshall, J., dissenting) (noting that although allegedly arbitrary legislation invokes the least intrusive rational basis test, that standard of review "is not a toothless one") (quoting Matthews v. De Castro, 429 U.S. 181, 185 (1976)))

Thus, while the appellant must carry the burden of proof, it is not correct to characterize it as being "extremely high." Even the lower standard of review requires that a legislative decision be "rationally based."

As to the Court's conclusion that the legislative decision reached by County Council must be at least "fairly debatable," the parties stand on common ground. If Council's decision to deny Plaintiff's rezoning request is "fairly debatable," then the Court's conclusion is correct, and Plaintiff cannot prevail. However, if the decision is not "fairly debatable," then the Court's May 12, 2020, Order is based on an incorrect application of South Carolina law. The question is whether the record contains any evidence to support the Court's conclusion that the Council's decision is "fairly debatable," and it is here that the Court errs.

First, the term cannot be either read or applied in a vacuum. The term, "fairly debatable," contains two words, an adjective, "debatable," modified by an adverb, "fairly." (Of course, the adjective, "debatable," is based on the noun "debate.") Neither the noun, debate, nor the adjective, debatable, requires discussion—the parties agree that anything and everything is subject to "debate" and is, therefore, "debatable." In logic and in mathematics, everything and nothing, are interchangeable and equivalent. Therefore, because everything is "debatable," an analysis of this yields nothing useful and sheds no light on whether the Order under review is or is not controlled by an error of law.

Rather, it is the application of the adverb, "fairly," that requires careful attention and which, when analyzed, reveals the error of the Order under review because if the issue is not fairly debatable, then the decision is arbitrary. The Court makes a mistake on page 13 when it concludes that the record contains evidence supporting Council's denial: "However, evidence in the record suggests that the residents of that area had for years consistently opposed more mobile homes¹ and the County consistently denied applications for them." This is incorrect. The only objective evidence in the case is the evidence presented by the County's Planning Department and the Council's decision in adopting the Comprehensive Plan. The County, through its legislative process, determined Royle Road is the appropriate place for allowing additional mobile homes for the reasons stated in the Staff Report (Exhibit 3) and in in the Comprehensive Plan. The Court's slippery slope conclusion runs in the opposite direction because if Council can deny appellant's request without any evidence of impact on safety, traffic or children, then it can deny every multi-family residential project anywhere else, and since Berkeley County is experiencing a residential boom, it is clear that this decision is premised on nothing more than an unsupported prejudice against mobile homes.

Since everything is subject to debate, even existence itself, when faced with the issue of whether a governmental action is or is not arbitrary and capricious, Courts have focused on whether the legislative debate is fair or unfair. As this Court correctly notes on page 7 of its order, citing Sylvia Dev. Corp. v. Calvert County, 48 F.3d 810, 827 (4th Circ. 1995): "And in the context of a zoning action involving property, it must be clear that the state's action 'has no foundation in reason and is a mere arbitrary or irrational exercise of power having no substantial relation to the public health, the public morals, the public safety or the public welfare in its proper sense.'" (Order under review at page 7) Thus a zoning decision is arbitrary if it is unsupported by evidence of a "substantial relation to public health." Courts express the distinction between substantial relation and arbitrary when they void legislative decisions determined to be "arbitrary" or "capricious." Expressed logically or mathematically, this formula is: "fairly debatable" = "not arbitrary" or "not capricious." A legislative decision that is "fairly debatable" cannot be simultaneously "arbitrary or capricious." By the commutative operation, $a + b = b + a$; if a decision is arbitrary and capricious, then it is not "fairly debatable." Either formulation allows the proposition to be put through the syllogistic rules of logic, which logicians call "Modus Tollens":

If p then q.	If fairly debatable then not arbitrary or capricious.
Not q.	Arbitrary and Capricious.
Therefore not p.	Therefore, not fairly debatable

Thus, the Court reached the correct conclusion if, and only if, the legislative decision to deny the landowner's request for rezoning is not arbitrary or capricious, and this requires the Court to apply the well-established legal definitions of arbitrary and capricious in South Carolina law to the record.

As this Court says on page 12 of the Order under review, "The decision was for the Council to make, after due deliberations and taking into account all of the facts." (Order under review at page 12, emphasis added). This sentence illustrates the Court's error because the record shows no evidentiary support for the required "due deliberation." In making the motion to deny the application for rezoning Council Member Schurlknight summarized the lack of evidence by stating he was basing his decision on the fact that he has been down Royle Road and is concerned about the "stuff" going on out there. This despite the fact that there is not a scintilla of evidence in this case that supports "due deliberation," and the only "facts" in the record on which the Council could rely are those put forth by the Planning Department and the Council's own Comprehensive Plan. By stating that the decision is based on unsupported "stuff," and the putative devaluation of property values, the County Council conceded it was making its decision on prejudice. In short, there is no "due deliberation" in Council's decision making, and no taking into account "all of the facts"—and as this Order under review holds, only then may Council make its decision. The record lacks support for Council considering any fact, let alone deliberating "all" the facts.

In affirming an administrative decision to grant a mining permit in Bursey v. South Carolina Department of Health and Environmental Control, 360 S.C. 135, 600 S.E.2d 80 (Ct. App., 2004), cert. granted, affirmed at 369 S.C. 176, 631 S.E.2d 899 (2006)² the Court of Appeals said:

Under the scope of review established in the APA, this Court “shall not substitute its judgment for that of the agency as to the weight of the evidence on questions of fact.” S.C. Code Ann. § 1-23-380(A)(6) (Supp. 2003); Long Cove Home Owners’ Ass’n. v. Beaufort County Tax Equalization Bd., 327 S.C. 135, 488 S.E.2d 857 (1997). A reviewing court may reverse or modify a decision of an agency if the findings, inferences, conclusions or decisions of that agency are “clearly erroneous in view of the reliable, probative and substantial evidence on the whole record,” or “arbitrary or capricious or characterized by abuse of discretion or clearly unwarranted exercise of discretion.” S.C. Code Ann. § 1-23-380(A)(6)(e), (f) (Supp. 2003); McCraw v. Mary Black Hosp., 350 S.C. 229, 565 S.E.2d 286 (2002); Waters v. South Carolina Land Res. Conservation Comm’n, 321 S.C. 219, 467 S.E.2d 913 (1996); see also Etheredge v. Monsanto Co., 349 S.C. 451, 562 S.E.2d 679 (Ct. App. 2002) (stating court may not substitute its judgment for that of agency as to weight of evidence on questions of fact unless agency’s findings are clearly erroneous in view of reliable, probative, and substantial evidence on whole record).

The Court of Appeals defines capricious for us:

A decision is arbitrary if it is without a rational basis, is based alone on one's will and not upon any course of reasoning and exercise of judgment, is made at pleasure, without adequate determining principles, or is [286 S.C. 185] governed by no fixed rules or standards. Hatcher v. South Carolina District Council of assemblies of God, Inc., 267 S.C. 107, 226 S.E.2d 253 (1976); Turbeville v. Morris, 203 S.C. 287, 26 S.E.2d 821 (1943). Deese v. S. C. State Board of Dentistry, 286 S.C. 182, 332 S.E.2d 539, (Ct. App. 1985)

In the Order under review, the Court concluded that “. . . neighbors’ fears about increased housing density and its attendant aggravation of traffic congestion and increased burden on infrastructure are fairly debatable.” (Order under review at page 13) This error, as discussed above, is that while such assertions may be “debatable,” the record lacks evidentiary support for them, and therefore the decision cannot be “fairly debatable.” Thus, the decision becomes, by definition, arbitrary and capricious under the definitions quoted above. The Council relied entirely upon the neighbors’ speculations and canards, leading to a decision “without a rational basis, . . . based on [their] will, and not upon any course of reasoning and exercise of judgment, . . . made without adequate determining principles [and not] governed by . . . fixed rules or standards.” The Planning Department’s concluded that the area has transformed over the years, which is why the Comprehensive Plan designated the lot as one to be rezoned to bring it in conformity with the adjoining lot and the surrounding neighborhood. Thus, all the “fixed rules or standards” support the request for rezoning.

The precise legal issue of the need for evidentiary support for a “fairly debatable” decision came before the Court of Appeals in 2012 when a Board of Zoning Appeals refused to grant a special exception for an application to open a fireworks store. The Court of Appeals’ analysis controls the outcome of this case as can be seen by substituting “mobile homes” for “fireworks” in the Court’s 2012 opinion:

We find the BZA's decision was arbitrary and capricious. Regarding the third criterion, the BZA determined the special exception would not discourage or negate the use of the commercially zoned property immediately surrounding the property, but would have a detrimental impact on existing and proposed residential development. At the hearing, residents testified as to their concerns regarding the proposed [mobile homes]. These concerns included an increase in traffic, a decline in property values, and a detrimental impact on the [401 S.C. 150] character of the surrounding area. The testimony proffered was based on speculation and opinion. Although property owners can generally testify as to the value of and damage to their own property, here only one of numerous witnesses addressed the special exception's effect on property value. Moreover, the property owner did not testify about his specific parcel but rather testified broadly about the undesired [mobile homes’] possible effect on the neighborhood's home values as a whole. This testimony was not competent to support the denial of the special exception. Compare Olson v. South Carolina Dept. of Health & Entl. Control, 379 S.C. 57, 67, 663 S.E.2d 497, 502–03 (Ct.App.2008) (affirming an administrative law court's finding that the effect on the value of adjacent landowners' property warranted the denial of a dock permit because those adjacent landowners testified the desired permit would diminish the value of their respective properties); [735 S.E.2d 663] Myrtle Beach Farms Co. v. Hirsch, 304 S.C. 94, 96–97, 401 S.E.2d 196, 198 (Ct.App.1991) (reversing the denial of an injunction based upon a restrictive covenant and stating “Myrtle Beach Farms based its decision to withhold approval mainly on its opinion, which it was competent to make as the owner of the surrounding property, that the use of the subject property as a site for a helicopter ride service would have an adverse impact on the future marketability or desirability of the surrounding property” (emphasis added)).

Additionally, none of the residents properly explained why Appellants' [mobile homes] would cause a decrease in property values when . . . [mobile homes are] located across the street from the property and [others] located nearby. The residents' testimony also failed to relate how their concerns about [mobile homes] would be different from their concerns regarding [other mobile homes] which would be allowed as a matter of right without the need to seek a special exception. No competent testimony was presented differentiating the effect of [mobile homes] on property values from the effect of a [condominium or duplex] on property values. Both of these types of business would be entitled to open in the same commercial location as a matter of right.

Regarding the residents' traffic concerns, we note that although there was testimony that residents felt the [mobile homes] would increase traffic, they failed to offer any competent [401 S.C. 151] evidence to support their opinions. See Bannum v. City of Columbia, 335 S.C. 202, 206, 516 S.E.2d 439, 441 (1999) (reversing a zoning board's denial of a special exception permit and holding that although neighboring residents testified they felt a proposed halfway house would increase traffic, there was no factual evidence presented to support that allegation). Multiple neighborhood residents provided accounts of problems exiting and entering the neighborhood at the location of the proposed [mobile home park]. However, this testimony failed to establish how adding the [mobile homes] would increase traffic problems in any way but a conjectural manner. Additionally, the [County's Planning Staff's] own traffic consultant determined the proposed [mobile homes] would not generate a significant amount of traffic.

As to the second criterion, the BZA determined the special exception was not in substantial harmony with the surrounding area. The record reflects the property is located within a [residential] district near another [mobile home park], and [a Church]. Although the BZA determined the [mobile home park] was in substantial harmony with these [residential] uses, the BZA found the [mobile homes] was not in substantial harmony with nearby residential developments. We find the BZA's decision to give deference to residential neighborhoods outside the [residential] zoning district in which the [mobile homes] would be located was arbitrary and capricious. Furthermore, as stated above, the record is void of any factual evidence to support the testimony that this particular [mobile home park] would have a detrimental impact on the character of the surrounding area.

Wyndham Enterprises v. City of North Augusta, 401 S.C. 144, 735 S.E.2d 659 (Ct. App. 2012)

At oral argument, the County distinguishes this line of cases on the ground that they involved Boards of Zoning Appeals and not County Councils. The implication of this argument is concerning: Boards of Zoning Appeals must be rational, but elected officials can be arbitrary. First, there is no case law justifying a lower degree of reason for a legislative body. Sylvia Dev. Corp. v. Calvert County, 48 F.3d 810, 827 (4th Cir. 1995). Second, reason applies universally. Thus, while it may be a tautology to state that the issue—any issue—can be “debated,” the question put before this Court is whether this record contains enough evidence to serve as the basis for a rational conclusion, i.e. “fairly debatable.” To be rational must be more than pure speculation. If the premise providing underpinning for Council's refusal to rezone is nothing more than complaining neighbors, absent any supporting facts or evidence, then the question as to whether the application for rezoning was “fairly debated” must be answered in the negative. Otherwise the Court places its imprimatur upon prejudice as a rationally based finding for legislative action.

Therefore, the Court should amend and alter its May 12th Order and conclude that based on the lack of evidence presented, County Council's decision cannot be supported as "fairly" debatable.³ Or, as the Court of Appeals said in Wyndham, "not supported by competent, substantial, and material evidence, [but] was based on opinion and speculation testimony." Wyndham Enterprises v. City of North Augusta, 401 S.C. 144, 735 S.E.2d 659 (Ct. App. 2012) As the Supreme Court in Bannum said:

After reading the entire record in this case, it is inescapable to us that the ZBA's decision was based, not on the requirements of the "special exception" ordinance, but upon the fears of neighboring residents who did not want "those type of people" in their neighborhood. Although we are sympathetic to the concerns of neighboring individuals, the ordinance simply does not provide such a basis for denial of the permit. Accordingly, the circuit court's order affirming the denial of Bannum's special exception permit is REVERSED.

As discussed above, the Court of Appeals in Wyndham Enterprises v. City of North Augusta, 401 S.C. 144, 735 S.E.2d 659 (Ct. App. 2012) summarized the "evidence" adduced against the applicant, which is identical to the "evidence" relied upon by Council here:

Also, at the hearing, fourteen residents of nearby residential neighborhoods testified against the special exception. Residents' concerns included increased traffic, decreased property values, and a negative image of the community due to multiple [401 S.C. 147] fireworks retailers in the same area.

³ History is an effective reminder of legislative decisions that were "fairly debatable" though unsupported by evidence. Such decisions enslaved a race of people, denied women the right to vote, approved separate but equal education and accommodation, confined citizens in internment camps, etc. Each one of these legislative decisions claimed to be "fairly debatable." Whenever citizens' rights are impaired by canards, the decision can never be "fairly debatable," and courts exist to prevent such injustices. As one of South Carolina's preeminent jurists, Tommy Kemmerlin, often said: "The whole world envies us for it."

In order to evaluate whether such “evidence” is sufficient, the Court of Appeals relied on Bannum, and pointed out that while residents are entitled to be heard and entitled to express their opinions, statements to the Board about traffic or safety or property values must be based on something more than subjective, unsupported statements:

Thus, because the BZA's decision was not supported by competent, substantial, and material evidence, and was based on opinion and speculation testimony, we reverse the circuit court's decision to affirm the BZA.

The Court of Appeals reached the same conclusion for the same reason in 2015 in Helicopter Solutions v. Hinde, 414 S.C. 1, 776 S.E.2d 753 (Ct. App. 2015). Like the neighbors in this case, and like the neighbors in Bannum, and in Wyndham, Hinde contended, without evidence, that the operation of the helicopter business injured him by diminishing his property values. He had nothing to support his opinion, which is the common link through all these cases with the case now before the Court. After the Board of Zoning Appeals sided with the neighbors and ordered the business closed, the circuit court reversed the Board of Zoning Appeals, and the Court of Appeals affirmed the circuit court, holding:

This court is prohibited from writing into an ordinance language restricting property rights to a greater degree than intended by the legislative body. It is a well-founded principle of law that statutes or ordinances in derogation of natural rights of persons over their property are to be strictly construed as they are in derogation of the common law right to use private property so as to realize its highest utility and should not be impliedly extended to cases not clearly within their scope and purpose. It follows that the terms limiting the use of the property must be liberally construed for the benefit of the property owner. Purdy v. Moise, 223 S.C. 298, 302, 75 S.E.2d 605, 607 (1953) (citations omitted); see also Keane/Sherratt P'ship by Keane v. Hodge, 292 S.C. 459, 465, 357 S.E.2d 193, 196 (Ct.App.1987) (holding that while “[l]ocal governments have wide latitude to enact ordinances regulating what people can do with their property,” they “must draft their ordinances so that people can have a clear understanding as to what is permitted and what is not. Otherwise, we must construe such ordinances to allow people to use their property so as to realize its highest utility.”) (footnote omitted). Thus, we find the circuit court properly held the Zoning Board made an error of law in construing the County Ordinance to exclude a helicopter sightseeing tour facility as a permissible use within the AC district.

The holdings running through all these cases, included the cases cited in the quoted language is the same; to wit, that while the neighbors are entitled to be heard, their unsupported objections cannot form the basis of a decision. In short, prejudice and speculation are insufficient to raise the debate to the level of “fairly debatable.” This is a logical principle of law that the Court is required to apply to do justice and prevent the impairment of rights based on nothing more than prejudice. Both the summary of Council’s deliberation as well as the recorded video of that body demonstrates that Council failed to deliberate “all of the facts” around this rezoning request to bring the subject parcel into conformity with adjacent parcel and in conformity with the County’s legislative decision enacted in its Comprehensive Plan and Future Land Use Map. The Court’s May 12, 2020 Order allows the appellant’s property rights to be overruled by the barely disguised canards of complaining neighbors. It is the sole province of the Court to protect citizens’ fundamental rights, and for this reason, the appellant respectfully requests that the Court examine the record and re-evaluate its conclusion that the debate before County Council reached the level of “fairly debatable.”

Respectfully submitted,

“FAIRLY DEBATABLE” STANDARD IN ZONING DECISIONS

Plaintiff first contends Judge Cooke erred by concluding that the decision of Berkeley County Council in denying his rezoning request was “fairly debatable”.

He admits the obvious in his memorandum that ... “If Council’s decision to deny Plaintiff’s rezoning request is ‘fairly debatable’, then the Court’s conclusion is correct, and Plaintiff cannot prevail. However, if the decision is not ‘fairly debatable’, then the Court’s May 12, 2020 Order is based on an incorrect application of South Carolina law.” Plaintiff’s Memorandum, p. 3.

Judge Cooke correctly concluded that Plaintiff’s rezoning request was “fairly debatable and fairly debated” and the record supports his conclusions.

In his memorandum, Plaintiff artfully (and exhaustively) parses the words “fairly” and “debatable” into a non-existent legal construct.

In so doing, he ignores the law in this state and the full, complete and ample record in this case.¹ He does so as if the matter of “fairly debatable” in a zoning context is a matter of first impression in South Carolina. This case is not the first case where the application of the “fairly debatable” standard was the subject of appellate scrutiny. There are many.

The Harbit case is a regularly and often cited authority on the subject of “fairly debatable” in a zoning context. In Harbit v. City of Charleston, 382 S.C. 383, 675 S.E. 2d 776, (Ct. App. 2009)², Mr. Harbit, an owner of property located at 7 Wesley Drive, applied for rezoning of the property based on its location within the Savannah Highway Overlay Zone. The Zone was created as a result of a comprehensive study of land surrounding the Ashley River Bridge in Charleston. Based on this study, the City developed the “Ashley Bridge District” plan, which identified the need to maintain residential communities in the Zone, despite increased commercialization. While highlighting the need to maintain residential uses in the Zone, the plan allows certain properties along Savannah Highway and Wesley Drive to be used for limited commercial purposes, including professional office use. Under the Ashley Bridge District plan, the other properties on the owner’s side of Wesley Drive within the Zone had been rezoned for limited commercial use.

The City of Charleston Planning Commission reviewed the owner’s application, at which time the owner’s counsel presented his position for rezoning the Wesley Drive property. The Planning Commission, however, voted to recommend denying the rezoning application. Charleston City Council received the Planning Commission’s recommendation and held a public hearing² to address Harbit’s application. City Council denied Harbit’s request.

After City Council’s denial of his application, Harbit appealed the zoning decision to the circuit court and asserted additional grounds for relief, including causes of action for due process and equal protection violations. The City filed a motion for summary judgment on all claims, which the circuit court granted. Harbit appealed.

The Court of Appeals was unmoved by Harbit’s assertion that City Council’s refusal to rezone Harbit’s property was so unreasonable that the appellate Court should invalidate City Council’s decision. The Court affirmed the lower court and restated well-settled law in South Carolina:

Rezoning is a legislative matter. Lenardis v. City of Greenville, 316 S.C. 471, 471, 450 S.E.2d 597, 597 (Ct.App.1994). The legislative body’s decision in zoning matters is presumptively valid, and the property owner has the burden of proving to the contrary. Rushing v. City of Greenville, 265 S.C. 285, 288, 217 S.E.2d 797, 799 (1975). The authority of a municipality to enact zoning ordinances that restrict the use of privately-owned property is founded in the municipality’s police power. Rush v. City of Greenville, 246 S.C. 268, 276, 143 S.E.2d 527, 530–31 (1965). The governing bodies of municipalities clothed with authority to decide residential and industrial districts are better qualified by their knowledge of the situation to act upon these matters than are the courts, and their decisions will not be interfered with unless there is a plain violation of the constitutional rights of citizens. Id. As in this case, the determinative question is whether the city council's refusal to change the zoning of the owner's property is so unreasonable as to impair or destroy the owner's constitutional rights. Rushing, 265 S.C. at 288, 217 S.E.2d at 799. We cannot insinuate our judgment into a review of the city council's decision but must leave that decision undisturbed if the propriety of that decision is even "fairly debatable." Knowles v. City of Aiken, 305 S.C. 219, 223, 407 S.E.2d 639, 642 (1991).

Additionally, there is a strong presumption in favor of the validity of municipal zoning ordinances, and in favor of the validity of their application, and when the planning commission and the city council of a municipality have acted after reviewing all of the facts, the court should not disturb the finding unless such action is arbitrary, unreasonable, or in clear abuse of its discretion, or unless it has acted illegally and in excess of its lawfully delegated authority. Bob Jones Univ., Inc. v. City of Greenville, 243 S.C. 351, 360, 133 S.E.2d 843, 847 (1963). Likewise, the power to declare an ordinance invalid because it is so unreasonable as to impair or destroy constitutional rights is one which will be exercised carefully and cautiously, as it is not the court's function to pass upon the wisdom or expediency of municipal ordinances or regulations. Id.

We find that City Council's decision is "fairly debatable" because the City proffered several reasonable grounds for the denial of Harbit's rezoning application. First, the Planning Commission and City Council concluded that rezoning Harbit's property would not be in the community's best interests because the City has a vested interest in preserving the area's residential character and in minimizing commercialization. As stated in the Ashley Bridge District Plan, one of the major concerns in this area was increased commercialization due to rezoning. Further, both the Planning Commission and City Council cited concerns of neighborhood residents who feared loss of residential use in the area and the possibility that continued rezoning would create a domino effect. While all of the residents' concerns might not be well-founded, City Council's response to public opposition does not rise to the level of a constitutional violation. See Sunrise Corp. of Myrtle Beach v. City of Myrtle Beach, 420 F.3d 322, 329 (4th Cir.2005) (in finding the state court of appeals' decision was not res judicata of the developers' § 1983 due process and equal protection claims, the Fourth Circuit Court of Appeals determined the city council's improper denial of the zoning application in response to public opposition did not rise to the level of a constitutional violation because "matters of zoning are inherently political, and it is a zoning official's responsibility to mediate disputes between developers and local residents").

Additionally, City Council specifically cited the unique location of Harbit's property as opposed to other properties on Wesley Drive that were zoned for limited commercial use, noting that two of its sides are situated on the interior of the neighborhood. Moreover, because it is a corner lot, the property effectively serves as a buffer between the heavier-traveled Wesley Drive and the purely residential Stocker Drive. See Hampton v. Richland

County, 292 S.C. 500, 503, 357 S.E.2d 463, 465 (Ct.App.1987) (finding the city council's refusal to rezone property from an office and industrial classification to a general commercial classification was "fairly debatable" because the property lay between commercial and residential properties thus creating a buffer between the two zones).

While other similarly situated properties on Wesley Drive are zoned for limited commercial use, the record does not indicate that Harbit was the subject of purposeful, invidious discrimination. See Sylvia Dev. Corp. v. Calvert County, Md., 48 F.3d 810, 825 (4th Cir.1995) (internal citations omitted) ("If disparate treatment alone were sufficient to warrant a constitutional remedy, then every blunder by a local authority, in which the authority erroneously or mistakenly treats an individual differently than it treats another who is similarly situated, would rise to the level of a federal constitutional claim."). For instance, there are other properties on Harbit's side of Wesley Drive that are currently zoned residential, and with the exception of one property cornering on Savannah Highway and Wesley Drive, all of the properties on the other side of Wesley Drive are zoned residential. The properties on his side of Wesley Drive that are zoned for limited commercial use are distinguishable in that they either also front on Savannah Highway or are not accessed by a purely residential street.

Based on the evidence in the record, the City properly denied Harbit's rezoning application in an effort to hold the line on commercial development in the area and protect its residential nature. We will not invalidate City Council's decision as its propriety is at least "fairly debatable" based on the facts and is not "so unreasonable as to impair or destroy constitutional rights." See Knowles, 305 S.C. at 224, 407 S.E.2d at 642. As such, it is not this Court's function to pass upon the wisdom or expediency of City Council's decision. See Bob Jones Univ., Inc., 243 S.C. at 360, 133 S.E.2d at 847. (Emphasis added).

Under the heading "The Record" in Judge Cooke's Order, p. 4 of 20, there is an especially telling and informative excerpt, which captures the fact that the matter of Plaintiff's rezoning request was "fairly debatable" and embodies the very essence of the term:

"The matter was then presented to the full County Council for action on the proposed ordinance to rezone the subject property at its March 27, 2017 meeting. A Planning staff member again introduced the application and explained it. Plaintiff/applicant spoke in favor of his application. Members of the public appeared and expressed a variety of concerns in the "Public Discussion" period of the hearing, similar to the concerns previously voiced to the Planning Commission. When the question of consideration of first reading on the proposed ordinance to rezone the subject property came for a vote by County Council, Council voted 5-2 to deny the rezoning request.

As reflected in the summary minutes and the video recordings of the proceedings, throughout consideration of the rezoning proposal, opinions for and against the proposal were voiced and for a variety of reasons."

There can be no genuine doubt from the excerpt above and from the whole record that the "fairly debatable" standard was met and satisfied here.

PLAINTIFF'S BURDEN

Plaintiff next contends that the Court misapplied the standard of review seizing upon language on Page 19 of the Order:

"However, it is not enough to overcome his extremely high burden of proving that the merits of Council's legislative decision are not at least fairly debatable."

Plaintiff protests the use of the cited language as if it was not true. It is. The Court accurately described the Plaintiff's burden and accurately applied the correct standard. The standard for the Plaintiff is high.

The Court did not create law in this case. The law is clear, well-settled and amply summarized in Judge Cooke's Order. The "presumption of validity" granted to a legislative body is a high burden to overcome. "Judicial restraint" is a governing principal which can only be overcome in the most egregious cases by a legislative body. "Any evidence" is a high burden for Plaintiff to overcome.

The cases and statutes cited by the Court in its Order form the bedrock of zoning law in South Carolina. See Order, pp. 6-13.

CONCLUSION

In his contemporaneously filed memorandum in support of his motion, Plaintiff says:

"There is no dispute that the May 12, 2020 Order under review is a well-written and well analyzed judicial order, and no party can question the time and thoroughness invested in its composition as is evident throughout."

Notwithstanding what can only be interpreted to be his "nod to the Judge", Plaintiff then contends that the Judge made "improper inferences" and "misapplied South Carolina law."

In other words, Plaintiff argues that the Judge did everything right except rule his way.

Defendants agree with the first observation by Plaintiff regarding the quality of Judge Cooke's Order. They disagree with Plaintiff's second observations as being without merit.

The Judge came to the right conclusion under the facts and the law. There is no basis under SCRCP 59 or SCRCP 60 for the Court to grant a new trial or to amend his Order.

For the reasons set forth herein, Plaintiff's Motion For Reconsideration should be DENIED.

2010 Berkeley County Comprehensive Plan 5-year Review

EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

Overview

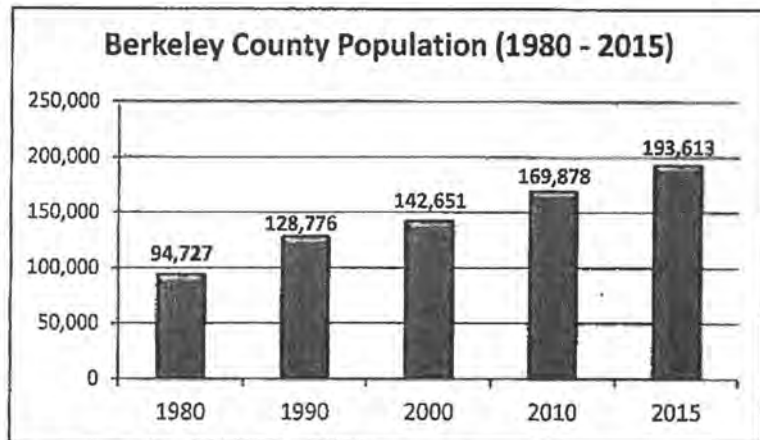

SC Code Section 6-292-510(E), mandates that the Planning Commission review its adopted County Comprehensive Plan or elements thereof not less than once every five years to determine whether changes in the amount, kind, or direction of development or other reasons make it desirable to make additions or amendments to the plan. In 2015, the Planning Commission determined that while most of the adopted 2010 Comprehensive Plan elements are still applicable, announcement of the planned Volvo manufacturing facility on a mega-industrial site outside the Principal Growth Area merited deeper consideration of how future development patterns might be impacted and place additional demands on community facilities and public infrastructure. As a result, the County Planning Commission met several times during 2016 and 2017 to consider current and future plans for growth, the County's transportation, water, and sewer systems, and whether changes in the adopted Land Use policies and/or the Future Land Use Map were needed.

After adoption of the 2010 Comprehensive Plan, not only did housing construction in the County accelerate as the nation recovered from the Great Recession, but Berkeley County announced that future economic investments totaling more than $1 billion had been committed by new corporate arrivals. In anticipation of more than 4,100 new jobs by these companies, it is expected that there will be even greater demand for housing and services in the near future. As a result, the updated data presented in this addendum establishes a more recent picture of the County's growth and justification for the proposed updates to policies and strategies in the County's Land Use Element.

A Snapshot of Growth

Population and Housing

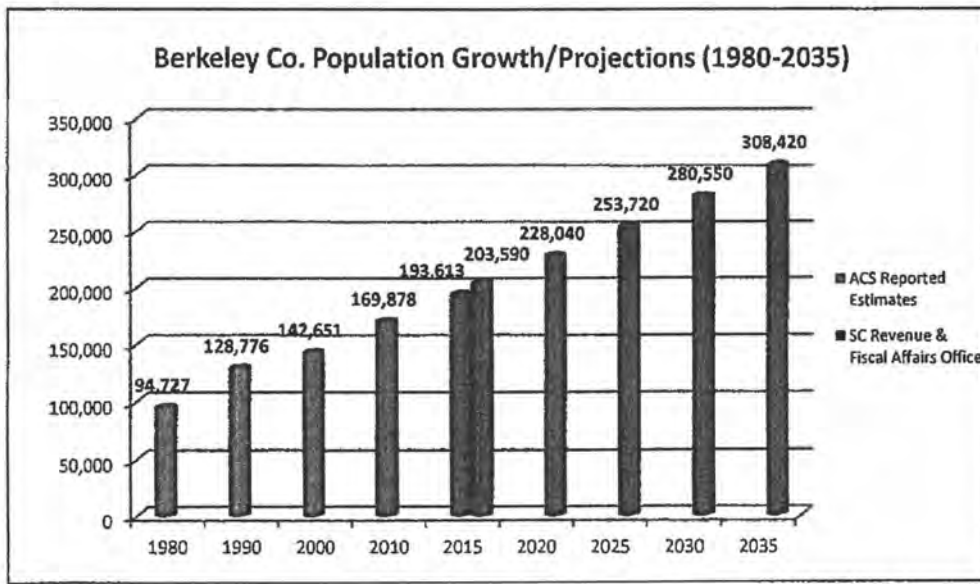

In the first five years of this decade (2010-2015), Berkeley County experienced significant growth, with a 13.9% increase in population. This growth rate was even higher, by about one-third, than that of the previous decade (2000-2010) when a 19% increase occurred over ten years. In 2010, the SC Office of Research and Statistics projected the County's population would reach 194,000 around the year 2025. However, the US Census Bureau American Community Survey (ACS) has estimated that projected population has already been reached. As a result, the SC Office of Research and Statistics has projected an even greater growth rate into the future, such that it is anticipated the County's population will continue to reach or exceed previous projections at least 10 years ahead of time.

Berkeley County is now expected to have the highest population growth rate in the region over the next two decades, 24.6%, reaching over 250,000 people by 2025 and over 300,000 residents by 2035.

Source: US Census Bureau, 2011-2015 American Community Survey; SC Revenue & Fiscal Affairs Office

As population estimates have continually increased in the County, it would be assumed that the number of households rose proportionately. However, from 2000 to 2010, the number of households grew 31.0% (from 49,922 households to 65,419). Currently, the US Census bureau estimates that the number of households in the past five years increased only 13.4% (from 65,419 to 74,167). Given the relative population increase, this indicates that household sizes are increasing to accommodate the discrepancy.

While the number of households has been increasing, so has the housing stock. A significant portion of the County's housing stock was built between 2000 and 2010 causing an increase in the total number of housing units of just over 30%. Since 2010, the number of housing units has increased at a slower rate, with an estimated increase of only 9.1% units, much less than half of growth in the previous decade, yielding a total housing stock estimated at 76,503 units in 2015.

Building permit data for all of Berkeley County shows that 1,373 housing units were permitted for construction in 2016, including 58 multifamily units. This 1.79% increase in housing units for the one year is comparable to the rate of increase experienced between 2010 and 2015.

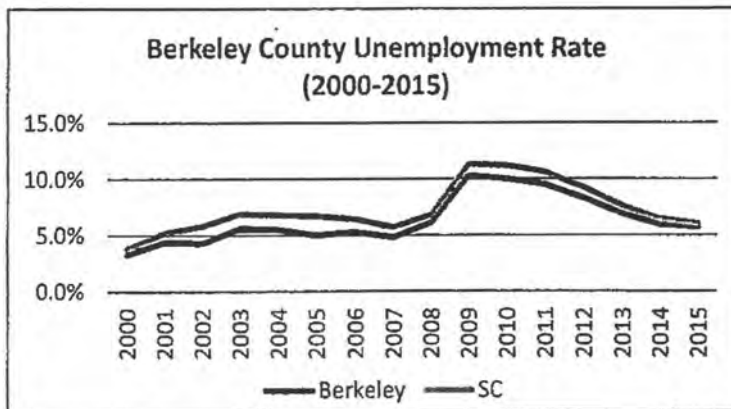

The regional travel demand model, maintained by the Berkeley Charleston Dorchester Council of Governments, demonstrates where growth in household units will occur over the next thirty years so the County can plan accordingly.

Jobs and Incomes:

A slightly lower percentage (65.2%) of the County's potential labor force (residents 16 years of age and older) are actively employed or seeking employment than were participating in the labor force in 2010 (68.3%). Given improvements in the job market since 2010, this drop could be an indication that more retirees are moving to the County.

Unemployment rates spiked in 2009-2010 during the Great Recession, yet Berkeley County consistently had a slightly lower unemployment rate than that for the state. Since the County's unemployment rate peaked in 2009 at approximately 10%, unemployment rates have continued a downward progression, reaching slightly below 6% as of 2015.

Employment by Industry

As seen in the table below, very little has changed in the type of industries that employ the County's labor force. In the first five years of the decade, employment in the Construction industry actually decreased as well as employment in Transportation, Warehousing and Utilities.

The largest increases of employment in special industry sectors over the past five years were in the Professional, Scientific and Management as well as Educational Services, Health Care and Social Assistance industries. Employment in manufacturing has increased only slightly. Should Volvo and the anticipated spin-off industries employ Berkeley County residents or bring in employees that chose to live in Berkeley County, the distribution of industries employing the County's labor force could change dramatically as those facilities are completed.

Employment Industries of Berkeley County's Labor Force	2010	2015
Agriculture, Forestry, etc.	0.4%	0.4%
Construction	10.4%	8.0%
Manufacturing	12.0%	12.8%
Wholesale Trade	2.5%	2.4%
Retail Trade	11.9%	12.8%
Transportation, Warehousing & Utilities	7.3%	6.0%
Information	2.0%	2.3%
Finance, Insurance & Real estate	5.4%	4.5%
Professional, Scientific & Management	10.8%	12.1%
Educational Services, Health Care & Social Assistance	17.6%	19.3%
Arts, Entertainment, Accommodation, etc.	8.8%	7.6%
Other Services	5.0%	5.1%
Public Administration	5.9%	6.7%

Employment by Occupation

Approximately one-third, of the County's labor force work in Management, Business, Science and Arts occupations (32.9%). Much of this can be attributed to the growth of information and technology companies in the County, as well as expansions in distribution facilities. Some of these companies include Fruit of the Loom, Gildan, AGRO and Blackbaud. As these occupations have increased, employment in other occupations have decreased slightly.

Despite increases in employment opportunities, almost half of the County's labor force still commutes outside the county for employment, with an average commute of about 26 minutes each way. The County has been successful increasing employment opportunities within the County itself, however recent assessments of the County's economic status concur with the regionally recognized challenge of ensuring that the demands for workforce development and career preparation are met. As a result, there are a number of initiatives, either ongoing or being planned, to ensure that the County's future labor force is educated and trained to meet the needs of future industries.

As with households, the BCDCOG regional travel demand mode demonstrates where employment growth is projected to occur over the next thirty years. Berkeley County is poised to provide more employment opportunities for its residents.

Keeping Pace

Median Household Income

In 2015, the median household income (MHI) in Berkeley County was $52,506, 7.6% less than the national MHI of $56,500 for that year. Although the County's MHI is still the lowest in the Tri-County region, it has increased 3% since 2010. By comparison, Dorchester County's MHI income has consistently been the region's highest since 2000, albeit decreased slightly during the first same period (2010-2015), while Charleston County's MHI increased by slightly more than 10%. As a result, for the first time in this century, the MHI for all three counties is relatively similar.

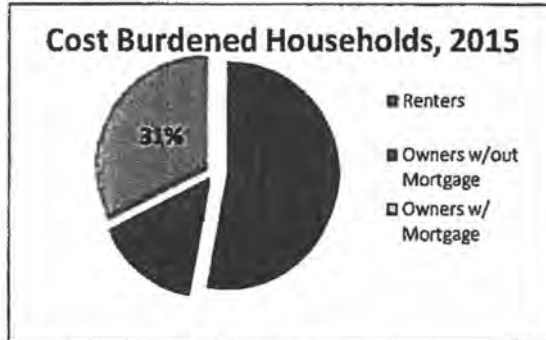

Source: US Census Bureau, 2011-2015 American Community Survey

Should all committed economic investments prove to be successful, the County's median household income should continue to rise. However, whether or not incomes can keep pace with relative changes in the affordability of housing is of great concern as a lack of housing affordable to employees can be a deterrent to the location of new industries.

Housing Costs

Housing is considered to be "affordable" when its cost is no more than 30% of a household's income. Despite the fact that many newcomers to the region have chosen to live in some of Berkeley County's developing subdivisions even if not near the region's employment centers, the proportion of households paying more than 30% of their income on housing is still significant. Similar to other counties in the region, Berkeley County households that are renting are more "cost-burdened" (paying more than 30% of the household income on housing) than homeowners.

Although the median household income increased slightly more for renters (8.0%) than owners (7.3%) between 2010 and 2015, the average cost of rent increased by 16.2% while the monthly housing costs for homeowners remained relatively stable. Indications are that there was a higher demand for rental units regionally during this period as the proportion of units that were owner occupied decreased. This could be a result of the recession when many homeowners were foreclosed upon or forced to sell and to rent housing. Reports of lower vacancy rates in rental units support the notion that higher demand may be justifying higher rents for landlords.

Overall, housing prices in Berkeley County have been relatively stable over the past decade. During the period from 2008-2012, prices were almost flat with an actual decline countywide of 2.3% from $171,010 to $165,000. As shown on the follow page, Rural Berkeley sales took the largest hit of the recession, decreasing over 44% while Daniel Island prices increased slightly (4.2%).

However, the post-recession recovery in median sales prices was less diverse from area to area. Across the county, median sales prices regained the loss and more, increasing 25.5% between 2012 and 2016 from $167,413 to $210,143. During this period, not only did median sales prices on Daniel Island increase 43%, but prices in Hanahan increased by 34%, in Goose Creek/Moncks Corner by 28.1%, and in Rural Berkeley by 46%.

Source: Charleston Trident Association of Realtors, 2016 Annual Report

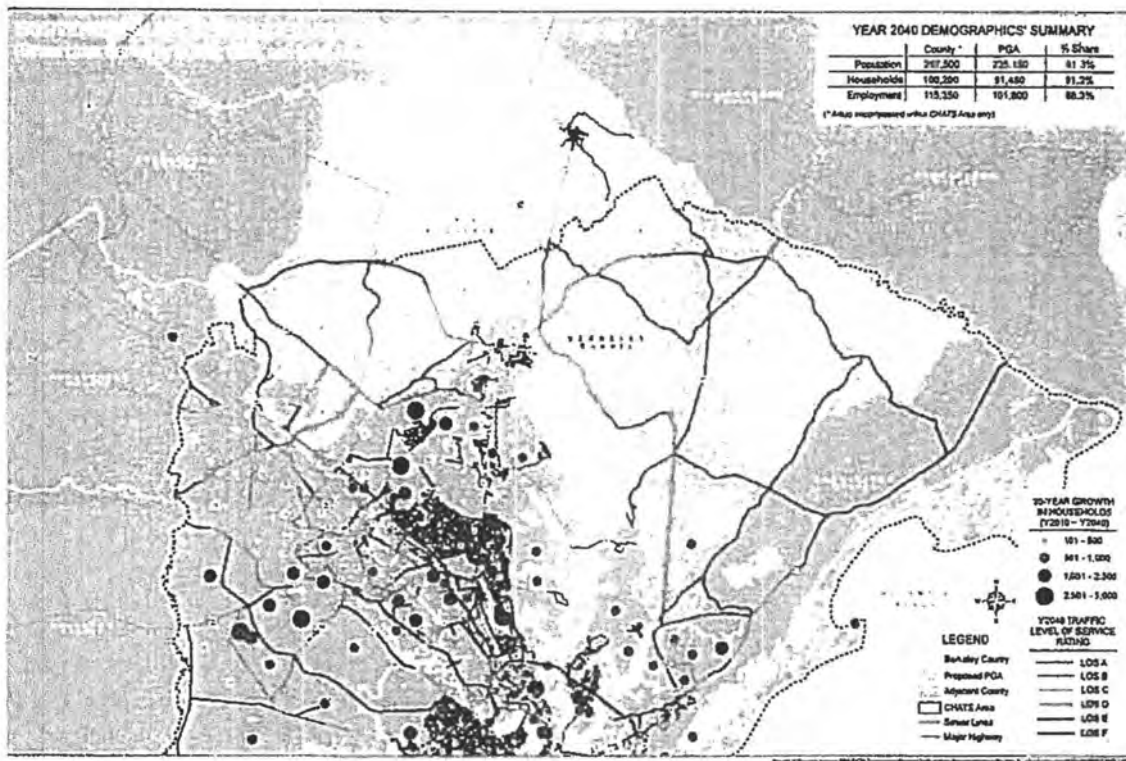

Source: Charleston Trident Association of Realtors Annual Report, 2016

Considering the median income of households in the county only increased by 3.4% between 2010 and 2015, home prices are increasingly less affordable for current residents. For example, a household had to earn $55,000 or 108% of the median household income to afford the median priced home in 2010. By comparison, a household had to earn $66,960 or 128% of the county’s median household income to afford the median priced home in 2015. Looking at the trend in household numbers compared to changes in housing stock, this discrepancy appears to result from a delay in construction of developments approved prior to the Great Recession. Efforts should continue to bring those units into the market, increasing the supply of housing that is needed to keep pace with the demand expected to accompany new employment and overall regional growth.

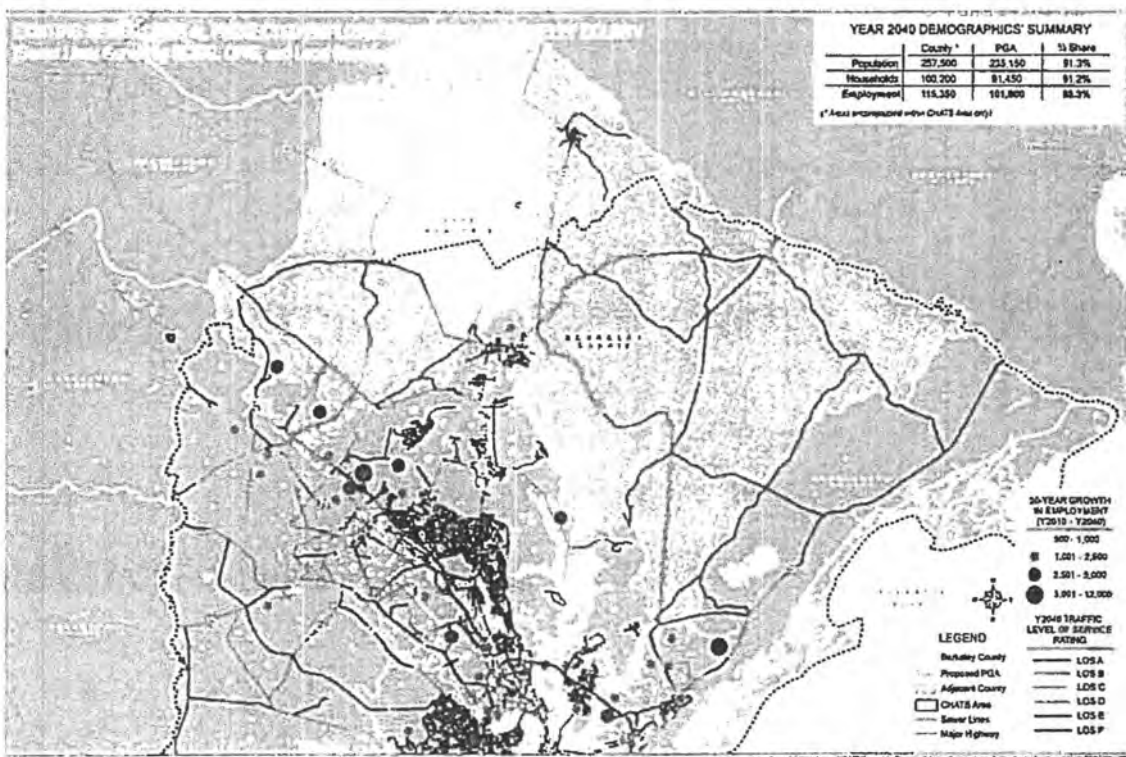

Infrastructure

Employment locations and a supply of affordable housing are directly related to the provision of adequate infrastructure. Ensuring the provision of adequate community facilities through a Capital Improvements Program, including the transportation system, balanced with preservation of the County’s rural areas and natural resources through strategic land use plan implementation remain priorities for investments in the County. During review of the 2010 Comprehensive Plan, the Commission was presented with information on the state of transportation infrastructure and planned improvements. Likewise, the Commission considered the County’s master planning for its public water and sewer systems and coordination with school facilities planning.

Berkeley County has recognized a need to increase its capacity to provide water and sewer for development approved and not yet constructed, in addition to future development approvals. In order to ensure adequate water and sewer service capacities to accommodate the County’s projected growth, Berkeley County Water and Sewer (BCWS) is conducting studies on and has budgeted for necessary upgrades to the Lower Berkeley and Center Berkeley Wastewater Treatment Plants. Moreover, the water treatment plant is being upgraded to provide an additional capacity of approximately 4 MGD to our system when completed. BCWS is planning additional water transmission mains, flow control valves, and redundant mains to ensure service area coverage and service reliability.

Projected growth in housing units and households dictate the need for expansion of the County's sewer system. Maintaining current development intensities outside the Principal Growth Area will enable the County to serve new developments already approved within the PGA, as well as new employment areas.

Berkeley County uses a comprehensive transportation planning process to identify and plan needed network improvements in a Capital Improvements Program that is annually presented to Council. The County's one-cent transportation sales tax and CTC funds support a number of transportation projects to accommodate increased demands on the network. These projects are coordinated both with the region's Metropolitan Planning Organization (MPO) or CHATS to leverage investment of federal funding for major transportation improvements in the urbanized area and SCDOT's program for maintenance and safety improvements of the rural road system. The Transportation Sales Tax program was renewed in 2014 for a period of seven (7) years or until $230 billion are collected. Many of the projects to be funded will alleviate increased demands resulting from developments approved since 2000. The County continues to agree that careful consideration must be given to whether the transportation system can accommodate additional land developments or new capacity improvements will be needed as it evaluates future land development proposals.

Significant capacity improvements to Clements Ferry Road, the Henry Brown Boulevard extension, construction of the Sheep Island Parkway/I-26 interchange in conjunction with Nexton Parkway as well as widenings of I-26 and US176 are being funded to accommodate new developments approved in the past 15 years.

Berkeley County's School District is a separate entity that relies on the County's comprehensive plan to provide guidance where to anticipate future needs for additional school facilities. A study by the Strom Thurmond Institute, completed in 2015, identified a need for up to 22 additional school facilities by 2035. A presentation by the School District on its master plan process confirmed that new school facilities and facility expansions are currently planned where population and enrollment projections indicate a deficit in existing or future capacity. The School District passed a referendum in 2012 to build five new schools and add to two of its high schools as a means of relieving capacity deficits from the Cainhoy peninsula to Moncks Corner. Discussions by the Commission and the School District identified the need for continuous coordination on the review of future land development proposals and planning processes.

Adjusting to Changes

The primary objective of the 5-year review process was to consider whether policies in the adopted 2010 Comprehensive Plan remain valid and sufficient to support goals for the County's future. Early in the review process, it was determined that the County remains committed to the Guiding Principles adopted in the 2010 Plan; to:

1. Protect and promote the existence of distinctive and diverse, sustainable communities within its boundaries;
2. Manage development and expansion of infrastructure systems efficiently in order to effectively serve residents and employees within the County;
3. Respect and enhance historic, cultural and natural resources, while providing expanded public access to them;
4. Ensure that both active and passive recreational opportunities are available to residents countywide;
5. Have an adopted plan that is clear, fair and can be implemented through simplified costs and streamlined processes.

Significant consideration was given during a 15-month series of monthly workshops as to how the existing policies and processes within the County align with the second guiding principle, ensuring that adequate infrastructure systems are provided in an efficient manner to serve residents and industries. As previously discussed, the Planning Commission gave careful consideration to the County's plans for economic development, planned improvements to its transportation, water and sewer systems, and the Berkeley County School District's plans for school facilities. All workshops were open to the public, several being designated for stakeholder input on consideration of changes to the goals and strategies implementing Guiding Principle #2 above.

Since the County adopted its first Comprehensive Plan in 1999, the adopted Future Land Use Map and Land Use Goals have included a Principal Growth Area, where the County foresees an intensity of development and land uses that will necessitate public water and sewer as well as a more robust transportation network. However it was found that there is ambiguity within the existing policies as to whether and how consideration might be given to adjusting the extent of this area outside the process for updating the Plan every ten years. As a result, the bulk of the 5-year review discussions were focused on considering two elements of the Plan: (1) Adjustments to the future land use map and (2) Amendments to the policies in the Section 1: Issues and Opportunities, Guiding Principle 2, Goal G2.1.

Careful consideration of recent development approvals and coordination with the Future Land Use Map (FLUM) were made particularly in designating the area of anticipated development at the Camp Hall Tract as a major Employment Center, clarifying designations of Village Centers and Rural Crossroads to be consistent with location and infrastructure considerations, ensuring that employment areas align with the County's economic development plan, and expanding policies to help ensure that infrastructure and public facilities needs keep pace with new development. A summary of modifications proposed for the adopted Future Land Use Map is provided on subsequent pages, followed by a Future Land Use Map that has been revised to illustrate these modifications and is proposed for adoption.

Revisions to Section 2: Land Use and Development Principles of the adopted plan are proposed as clarifications to be consistent with revisions proposed to the Future Land Use Map in Attachment A.

Future Land Use Map Summary of Modifications

1. The Constrained Residential Growth area has been renamed Constrained Growth.
2. The Village Center designation has been applied to the incorporated towns outside the Principal Growth Area where public water and/or sewer service exists.
3. Neighborhood and/or Village Centers previously designated within the Constrained Growth area that are not incorporated have been re-designated as Rural Crossroads in order to reflect context and suitability for nonresidential development. Specifically:
 - a. The Highway 27/Interstate 26 Neighborhood Center is now designated as a Rural Crossroad.
 - b. The Village Center designation at the Diversion Canal in Cross is now designated as a Rural Crossroad.
4. With the exception of the incorporated municipalities within the Constrained Growth area, all other Village Centers and Neighborhood Centers are now contained within the PGA (Suburban Area). Please note that a few of the Neighborhood Center designations were shifted to more accurately align with nonresidential intersections.
5. All Rural Crossroads are designated outside the PGA or Suburban Area with the exception of those in Cainho and Wando, neither of which have public systems.
6. Commercial Corridors were removed in order to emphasize the goal of focusing commercial development at highly-visible intersection nodes (as designated) and to discourage strip-commercial development, which, with the proliferation of curb-cuts, can impede vehicular flow/level of service over time.
7. A Town Center designation was added to Highway 176 at Cane Bay Marketplace and Nexton frontage. The two Neighborhood Centers along this corridor were consolidated into the Town Center, overlaying a Moderate Density Suburban area.
8. A Town Center designation, overlaying an employment area, was placed at the future Sheep Isle Road interchange as there is commercial office and employment uses proposed for this location in the Nexton PD.
9. Highway 78 in the Ladson Community was designated as an Employment Corridor as there are many existing industrial and commercial uses and zoning designations. An aside, Charleston County reached out to Berkeley County to collaborate on a more in-depth assessment of this corridor through a joint small area planning effort.
10. The Employment Center designation that encompasses Camp Hall was expanded to align with the property boundaries for the Camp Hall assemblage. The PGA was modified to encompass the Camp Hall assemblage property boundaries as well.
11. A gradient was applied to all land use designations in order to establish fluidity for reasonable transition of land uses and flexibility in interpretation. This flexibility will be reflected in the written policies and strategies as well.
12. Inclusion of a Rural Crossroads designation at Highway 27 and 176 in the Holly Hill vicinity.
13. Modified delineation of the PGA to exclude the Nucor/Hagen Plantation Conservation Easement assemblage AND include existing suburban residential zoned/developed areas along the Charity Church Road corridor that are already served by existing water and sewer services (e.g. Brightwood Subdivision).
14. The I-26/Jedburg Road Interstate Interchange Employment Center designation has been trimmed so to remove existing residential uses south of Old Dairy Road/Woodpatch Hill Lane based on community feedback at the July 26 Regular Planning Commission meeting.

15. In order to direct and cluster commercial development at designated intersection nodes that boast high-visibility and easy accessibility for motorists and pedestrians, staff defined the following radii:
- a. Town Center Designation: 1-Mile Radii (Page 2-7)
 - b. Rural Crossroads Designation: ¼-Mile Radii (Page 2-9)
 - c. Village Center Designation: ½-Mile Radii (page 2-2; 2-6)
 - d. Neighborhood Center Designation: ½-Mile Radii (Page 2-6)

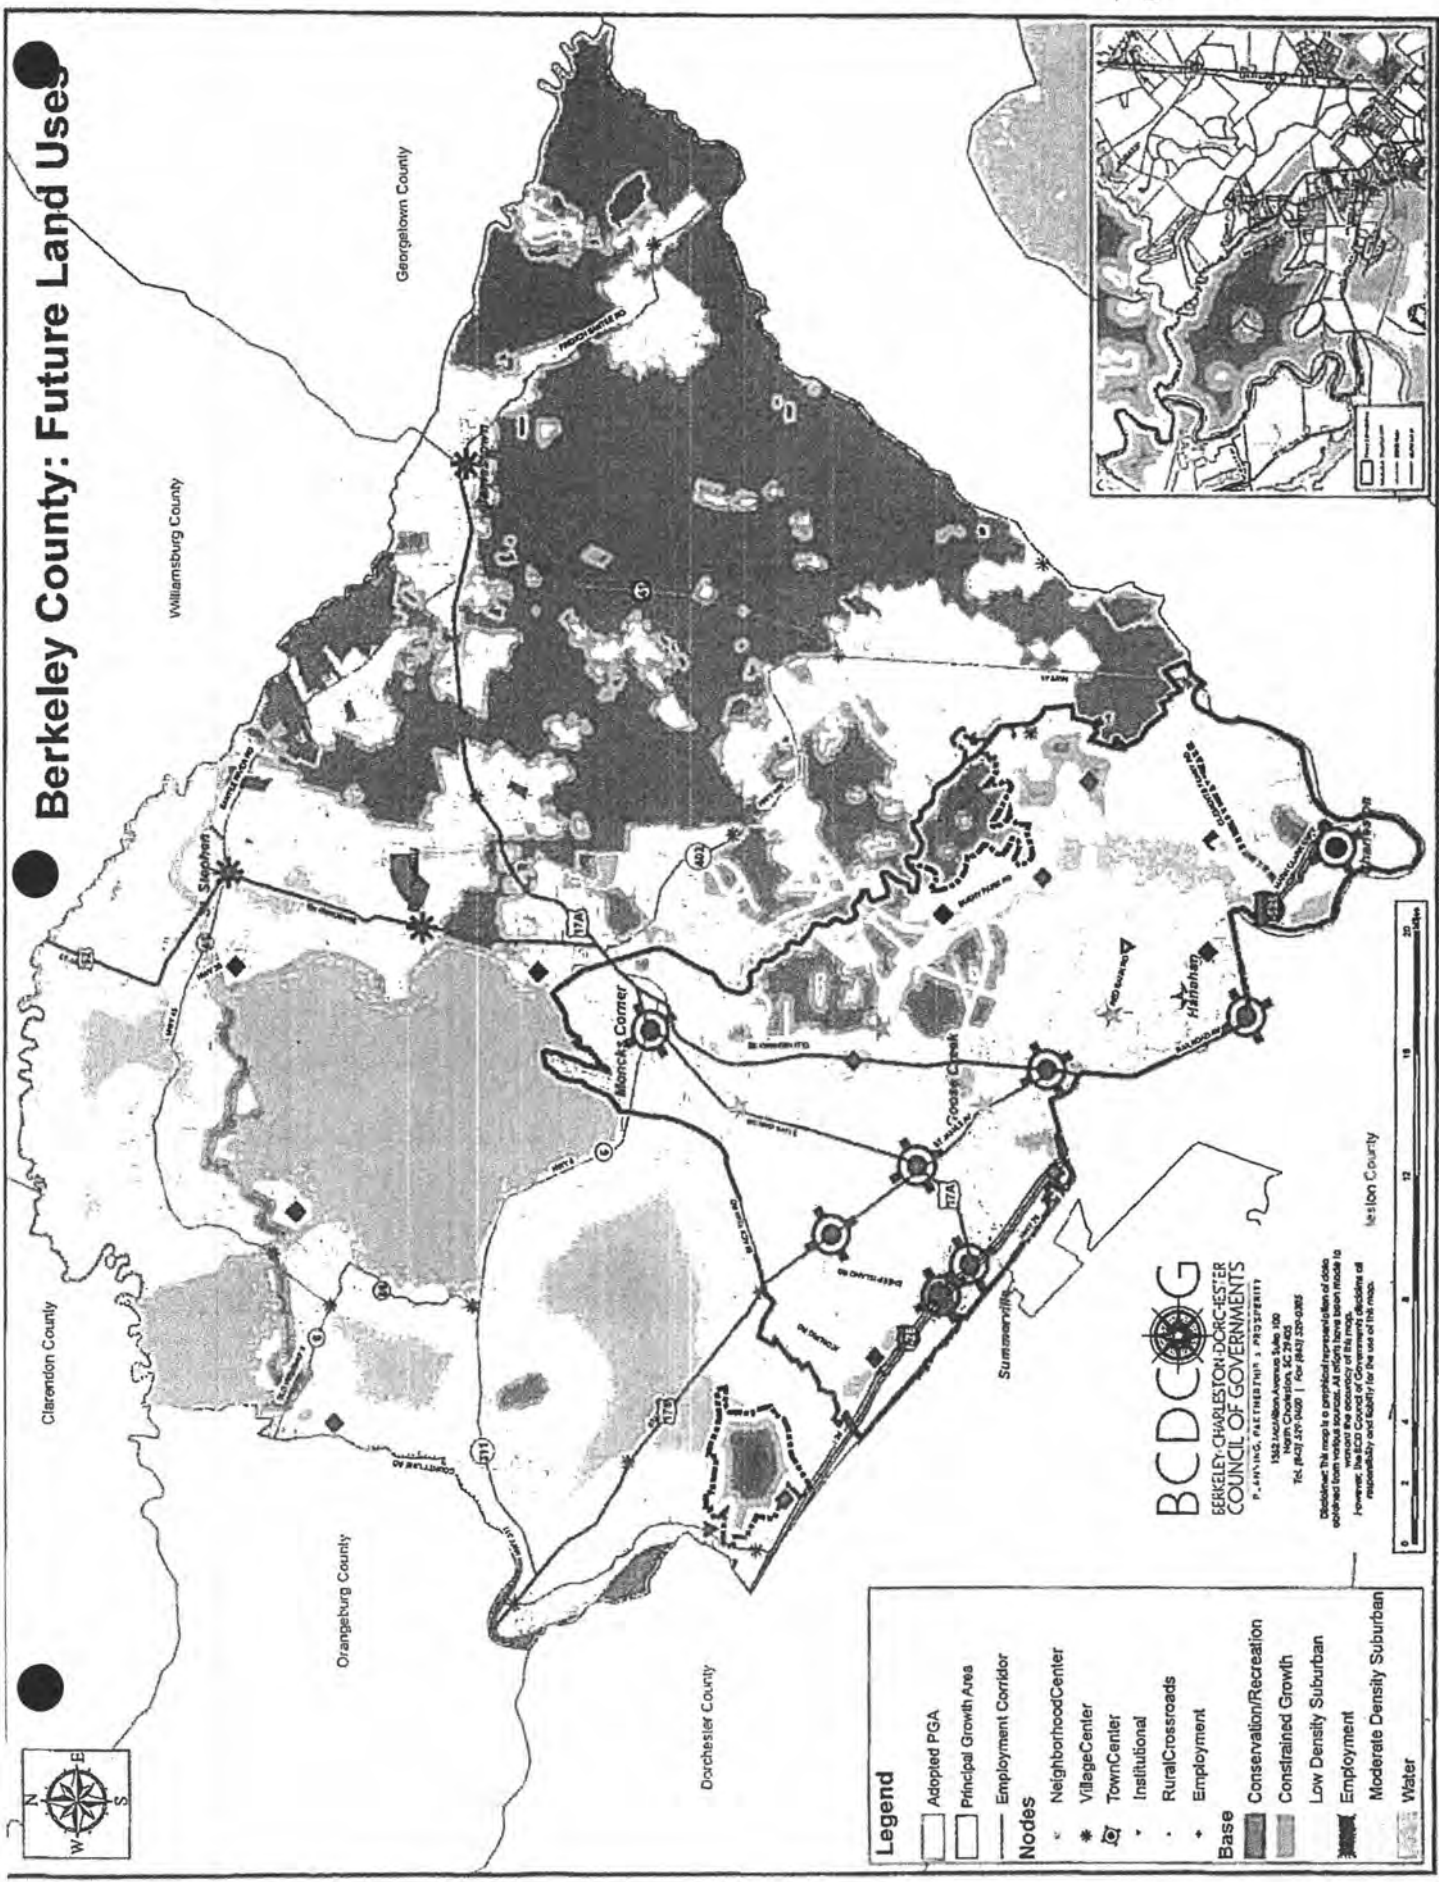

Section 1: Issues and Opportunities of the adopted 2010 Plan sets forth goals and strategies for implementation of the Guiding Principles. While some minor edits have been proposed to provide a more updated explanation of current issues and opportunities, substantive revisions are proposed to reflect the County's desire to continue aligning development of land with the availability of infrastructure. Section 1: Issues and Opportunities has been revised in Attachment B to include the proposed revisions to these goals and strategies.

As previously stated, at the onset of its 5-year review, the Planning Commission determined that it would focus discussions on whether the Land Use and/or Transportation elements of the adopted Plan warranted reconsideration. While these elements have not been rewritten, proposed revisions to Section 1: Issues and Opportunities and Section 2: Land Use and Development Principles reflect the County's desire to strengthen its coordination with other planning processes and agencies with the objective of better aligning growth and development with existing and planned capacities of infrastructure and community facilities.

Berkeley County strives for a greater overall balance of housing and employment opportunities within areas where infrastructure exists or is planned while rural and natural areas are conserved. The Plan, therefore, designates a defined Principal Growth Area (PGA) within Berkeley County. The Principal Growth Area is the area within which more intense development of various uses should occur, to be served by existing, and efficiently expanded infrastructure and other public facilities and services. Remaining portions of the County remain designated for limited development and land uses that complement the County's abundant natural and agricultural lands. This Plan places emphasis on goals and strategies that will ensure future development of any land uses throughout the County will occur such that sensitive cultural and natural resources will not be adversely impacted.

Principal Growth Area

The Principal Growth Area (PGA) includes the County's more urbanized area including larger incorporated towns, as well as limited abutting rural areas already experiencing some transitional development west of Highway 17A, where infrastructure has become available and some intensification might occur. Development within the PGA is encouraged to focus around existing and identified town and neighborhood centers. The goals and objectives herein emphasize infill and redevelopment of land within the PGA to promote more accessible environments with centers that have connections to nearby neighborhoods. A mix of housing types within these centers will better serve the diverse population growth, providing attainable housing and a variety of other needs. By placing community services within designated neighborhood centers, close to where people live and work, residents have greater mobility options, including cycling and walking, between destinations. Development outside the PGA in areas designated for constrained growth and conservation/recreation should also be concentrated in and around existing Village Centers and Rural Crossroads identified on the Future Land Use Map.

Land Use Categories

The County seeks to preserve a unique composite of natural and man-made environments. Development objectives seek to maintain a visual and spatial distinction between suburban development and designated conservation areas within the rural areas of the County. The Berkeley County Future Land Use map shows the anticipated distribution of conservation, residential, non-residential, mixed-use, employment, and institutional land uses. The following sections describe the land use categories depicted on the Future Land Uses map. Each category described below includes a description of the general characteristics and location of each land use type, a listing of primary uses, and development objectives.

Conservation/Recreation

Characteristics and Location:

Conservation/Recreation areas are prioritized for greater protection from development activities in order to maintain natural habitats, provide flood protection, and protect water quality. These areas are also prioritized to provide for recreational opportunities, water access and water-oriented commercial activities. Any development in these areas should be constrained to disturb only highlands and to minimize impacts to these natural features and assets that are environmentally sensitive.

Primary Uses:

Active recreation, passive recreation, eco-tourism establishments, wildlife refuges, water-oriented commercial, community and neighborhood parks.

Development Objectives:

1. The County will consider establishment of a conservation zoning designation for application to properties within these areas that incorporates a combination of regulations and incentives to ensure development adequately mitigates any impacts to areas of significant cultural and natural resources. Such techniques may include low impact development standards, minimum buffer requirements along riparian zones, wetlands, and/or floodplains, and wildlife management areas.
2. Limited development of individual properties within designated conservation areas in conjunction with placement of conservation easements will be encouraged.
3. Potential linkages between designated conservation areas and cultural resources with existing trail systems to establish a natural recreation corridor will be identified and encouraged for development by both the public and private sector in accord with the County's Green Infrastructure Plan.
4. Establishment of recreational facilities and accommodations in these areas will be limited to low-impact uses at an appropriate scale.
5. Scenic byway and historic designations will be pursued for identified roads of significance.

Constrained Growth*Characteristics and Location:*

Areas outside the PGA are designated for Constrained Growth where agricultural lands and low density residential development are integrated with Conservation/Recreation lands. The Constrained Growth areas will remain rural in character and developed at densities that can be served by onsite water and wastewater systems except where public infrastructure can be extended by the municipality to abutting parcels. Land owners may develop large lot single-family rural residential neighborhoods with high proportions of open space (typically 50-70%) or cluster the residential units on smaller lots to conserve comparable open space, agricultural land, historically significant areas, and other natural features. More intense development of residential and nonresidential uses will be preferably focused in or adjacent to the incorporated towns, designated as Village Centers, and/or Rural Crossroads.

Primary Uses:

Traditional land practices such as forestry and agriculture, rural residential/detached single-family residences, supporting and complementary uses, including open space and recreation, equestrian uses, schools, places of worship, and other public uses.

Development Objectives:

1. Public sewer should not be extended to serve development in Constrained Growth areas except where an employment use is proposed within the ½ mile radius of a designated Village Center. Individual well and septic systems may be replaced with communal well and septic systems where justified and approved by SCDHEC.
2. Rural road standards for a network compatible with low density development and the rural character will be supported by the County.
3. New development will fully integrate the elements of green infrastructure and establish natural open spaces as predominant visual elements and enhance the area's natural environment.
4. Green infrastructure elements provided in each development will link with that in adjacent developments to facilitate connectivity and access to conservation areas.

5. The County will encourage clustering of residential lots through a density bonus approach. Clustering should occur near the edges of parcels, close to principal access roads to minimize need for driveways and maximize the amount of land left undeveloped.
6. Larger scale residential developments (greater than 10 lots) will develop in clusters as conservation subdivisions.

Low Density Suburban

Characteristics and Location

Low Density Suburban areas will be developed with diverse housing choices, in neighborhoods that promote a sense of community, providing an aesthetically pleasing transition from Constrained Growth Areas to higher-density residential, nonresidential and mixed-use nodes. Development will be approved for densities in locations where it can be served efficiently by existing infrastructure, facilities and services, and transportation networks. All development activity will be designed to mitigate adverse impacts on any cultural and/or natural resources.

Primary Uses:

Single-family residential detached housing, continuation of agricultural uses, open space, civic and recreation, and mixed-uses where appropriate.

Development Objectives.

1. New developments will provide or complement a mix of land uses and project designs to ensure the long-term sustainability, or economic and environmental health, of both the individual and broader community in which it is located.
2. Communities will be developed as efficient, compact, pedestrian oriented communities with a range of residential lot sizes and measurable standards of open space.
3. Connections to key centers of employment, commerce, service and other developments will be provided for, and between, communities.
4. New developments must be served by or demonstrate the ability to be served by existing or extensions of existing public water and sewer systems.
5. Interconnectivity between adjacent communities will be fostered to minimize overloading of single access/entrance points onto principal access roads for each development.
6. Significant areas of sensitive natural resources and protective buffers will be designated for use as passive recreation or conservation areas, while reallocating development potential of those areas back to privately developed lots within each community.
7. Residential communities will provide a mix of open spaces, including active and passive and/or natural open spaces as appropriate to the scale and location of the site. At least 60% of any required open space should be useable and accessible land, with the majority of it located within the interior of the community. Required buffer areas and outparcels should not account for more than 25% of the total open space required.
8. Density bonus incentives will be considered for developments that conserve open space areas and/or provide buffer areas in excess of ordinance requirements.
9. Development densities of individual communities may average up to 4.0 dwelling units per acre, depending on the adequacy of roads, utilities, and full complement of public services and facilities.

Moderate Density Suburban

Characteristics and Location:

Moderate Density Suburban areas are designated within the Principal Growth Area in locations where such development can provide a transition from low-density suburban to, and infrastructure can support more concentrated developments of, residential and commercial uses.

These areas identified are already proposed for development with various new communities that should strive to include walkable neighborhood units within the community. To the extent possible, future communities developed at moderate densities should be co-located with neighborhood centers of nonresidential development or within 1 mile of a designated Town Center. New neighborhoods/neighborhood units should each include a system of interconnected trails or sidewalks that will provide access to parks, recreation, and open space areas focused near and in between residential communities.

Primary Uses:

Single-family residential detached housing, single-family attached and multi-family housing, neighborhood-oriented commercial and/or mixed-uses, civic and recreation facilities.

Development Objectives:

Development Objectives (1) through (8) for Low Density Suburban communities should apply in addition to the following:

1. Principal accessibility to moderate density developments will be coordinated with regional transportation systems. Communities shall each provide for a hierarchy of internal facilities for vehicular, cycling and pedestrian use.
2. New development proposals within these designated areas will demonstrate linkages, or potential linkages, to public transportation facilities.
3. Performance standards will foster integration of compatible use groups. Application of form-based codes will be encouraged.
4. Development densities of individual communities may average up to 12.0 dwelling units per acre, depending on the adequacy of roads, utilities, and full complement of public services and facilities.

Employment Centers/Corridors

Characteristics and Location:

Locations designated for Employment within the Principal Growth Area as identified on the Future Land Use Map are intended for development of large scale office and light-industrial uses by a major employer or a cluster of multiple employers with a mix of supporting or ancillary uses, such as restaurants, hotels, and limited service retail. Future employment developments within designated centers and corridors will feature high visual quality site design and accommodate uses of high traffic generation. Clustering of buildings within these centers is preferred to preserve open space within the development site. Site plans, building design and landscaping will be sensitive to the natural features of the site, including views. Smaller employment centers may be located adjacent to or in conjunction with Town Centers and/or planned communities. Specific industrial/employment nodes for heavier industrial uses are designated within employment areas on the Future Land Uses Map (FLUM).

Primary Uses:

Office, light industry, and ancillary retail/services for employees, some commercial services, accommodations and public/institutional uses.

Development Objectives:

1. Employment centers will be located with indirect access to primary highways and arterials as shown on the FLUM.
2. Access to employment areas will be provided via internal collector roads to provide safe and efficient movement of traffic, including trucks, without impeding movement on adjacent roadways.
3. Employment uses within the PGA will be served by public water and sewer facilities.
4. Development plans will meet established performance standards that foster environmentally sensitive design to complement existing natural features and reduce potential visual impacts on adjacent residential communities.
5. Employment developments will possess adequate on-site parking, storage and loading areas, as well as landscaped screening of these functions from surrounding neighborhoods.
6. Light industrial uses will be limited to those that do not require outdoor storage and have negligible externalities (i.e., noise, odor, vibration).
7. Provision of safe, convenient and attractive pedestrian access to nearby residential areas and local businesses with ancillary retail services and goods will be evaluated for individual proposals.

Industrial/Employment Nodes ◆Characteristics and Location.

A limited number of Industrial/Employment Nodes are designated throughout the County to accommodate large labor intensive industrial and heavy commercial uses that produce noxious externalities. Parcels developed with these uses will be large enough to include land and buffers that ensure that negative impacts on adjacent properties are mitigated. These areas are not conducive to mixed use development, however in some cases, less intensive industrial uses may be co-located within these nodes to provide the transition between the industrial use and adjacent communities and/or natural areas of environmental sensitivity.

Primary Uses:

Industrial, supporting office, commercial, wholesale, and warehousing.

Development Objectives:

1. Heavy industry will be located along major roadway corridors that provide direct access to interstates and other major transportation facilities, including existing rail lines.
2. Employment nodes within the PGA will be served by public water and sewer facilities.
3. Performance standards will be applied to new industrial development to ensure adequate land for separation and buffering from incompatible/lower intensity land uses, including nearby residential and business uses.
4. Proposals for less intense uses within these nodes will be evaluated for potential incompatibility to ensure development does not jeopardize the viability and functional mobility of existing industries.

Institutional Facilities ▼

Characteristics and Location

Institutional areas designated on the Future Land Use Map are intended to accommodate single uses and activities that already exist and are not compatible with other land use designations both within and outside the PGA. The characteristics and locational requirements of institutional needs will vary on an individual basis. All new institutional facilities of the same magnitude should be co-located with existing areas whenever possible.

Primary Uses

Public institutional uses such as prison, military, and other regional public facilities.

Development Objectives:

1. Institutional uses will be located along major roadway corridors that provide direct access to communities and other major transportation facilities.
2. Future development of institutional areas within the PGA will be served by public water and/or sewer facilities.
3. Development of new institutional uses outside the PGA will be located within or abutting Village Centers within ½ mile of the municipal boundary or Rural Crossroads.
4. Performance standards will be applied to ensure adequate land for separation and buffering from incompatible/lower intensity land uses, including nearby residential and business uses.

Neighborhood Centers ☆

Characteristics and Location

Neighborhood Centers are areas of community-oriented commercial uses that serve needs of nearby neighborhoods and shall be established in locations designated on the future land use map. Neighborhood Centers are an integral part of the residential communities they serve, particularly when established as part of a planned development or through a development agreement. The size and scale should relate to the size of the communities it intends to serve or its market area. Neighborhood Centers, which are much smaller in size than Town Centers, will host a variety of uses, including retail and service options that are accessible to the neighborhoods they serve via various forms of transportation.

Primary Uses

Community institutional and/or gathering places (e.g. schools, parks, churches, community centers, etc.) along with convenience retail, personal and professional service establishments that serve residents of the immediate vicinity.

Development Objectives:

1. Neighborhood centers will be located within the Principal Growth Area adjacent to or within walking distance of established or planned residential developments on major or minor collector roads.
2. Site development will be compact in form and within ½-mile radii of the designated intersection, designed to accommodate pedestrian and vehicular traffic with a full complement of services and amenities.

3. Application of form based codes will be encouraged.
4. The overall concept for design of a community center will complement the character of surrounding communities, so the interrelationship of its parts (commercial, office, civic, public open space, etc.) is evident.
5. Adequate buffering and landscaping will be provided to minimize impacts on natural resources.

Town Centers

Characteristics and Location:

The County will promote development, infill and redevelopment, of areas designated as Town Centers. These centers serve as the “downtowns” of unincorporated communities within the County and will be the primary location for future development of mixed land uses that accommodate commerce, employment and civic activities. Nonresidential, supported by higher density residential uses, will be focused within these centers to foster creation of balanced communities.

Primary Use:

Infill development, mixed-uses, retail, commercial, office, high density residential, cultural, and institutional.

Development Objectives:

1. Town Centers will be located only at nodes designated on the Future Land Uses Map (FLUM), where developments are accessed directly from major collector and/or arterial roads.
2. Town Centers may range up to 50 acres in size yet will be compact development(s), within a one-mile radius of the designated intersection, to encourage pedestrian mobility within the centers, while still accommodating vehicular accessibility, with a full complement of services and amenities, including access to future transit services.
3. The County will consider adoption of Access Management Policies or plans to manage the placement and frequency of curb cuts and require shared access points along arterial and major collector roads to foster maximum mobility along the corridors feeding Town Centers.
4. Development applications will demonstrate a configuration of streets and public/landmark parcels, along with the pedestrian network, preferably through the use of a grid street pattern.
5. On street parking and centralized parking facilities will be interspersed within the development to facilitate mobility within the Town Center without vehicles.
6. Parking, loading and outdoor storage areas will be restricted and screened between buildings and public accessways.
7. Large setbacks will be provided (100 foot minimum) along arterials and major collectors, with minimum setbacks between similar uses and local travelways.
8. Open space areas within each Town Center will be provided to foster natural management of stormwater and impacts on air quality.

Village Centers *

Characteristics and Location:

Village Centers are envisioned as mixed-use communities with residential and nonresidential uses integrated to create pedestrian friendly self-sustaining developments with a mix of housing options outside the Principal Growth Area. Village Centers are designated where incorporated communities exist with a range of complementary uses within distinct neighborhoods. These Centers are distinct physical settlements surrounded by protected or constrained growth areas used for agriculture or conservation purposes. Variations in parcel sizes and base densities within designated Village Centers will provide opportunities for innovative blends of new development. Additional Village Centers may be developed outside the Principal Growth Area provided they have public water and sewer systems and the County approves an amendment to the adopted FLUM.

Primary Uses:

Medium density rural residential, civic, institutional, social/cultural, small neighborhood commercial and retail services, home businesses or local offices.

Development Objectives:

1. Densities and open space requirements for development within Village Centers beyond boundaries of the incorporated towns will vary from center to center, ranging up to two dwelling units per acre where public or communal water/wastewater systems are available.
2. Defined edges of Village Centers will be compatible with the surrounding rural area and should provide identity and a sense of place to the surrounding countryside.
3. Nonresidential uses will be organized around a compact community core to serve individual communities or combinations of neighborhood developments. The community core may vary in scale, design and use depending on the size of the community it serves.
4. The County will support establishment of larger employment uses around the periphery of a Village Center provided they can be served by adequate facilities.
5. New civic uses will be located at prominent locations within the core, at a scale compatible with the residential nature of the Village Center. Large-scale civic or institutional uses will be located on the periphery of an individual neighborhood or the village.
6. Open spaces associated with Village Centers will be dispersed as to be conveniently located to residents. These areas will serve both a recreational and design function.
7. Village Centers will accommodate and promote pedestrian travel, with interconnected (and generally rectilinear) street patterns.

Rural Crossroads *

Characteristics and Location:

Rural Crossroads are nodal and/or village developments at secondary road intersections, with commercial and community/civic uses clustered within one-quarter mile of an intersection identified on the Future Land Use Map in the constrained growth areas. Development of crossroads is limited in scale, compatible with the surrounding rural area and should provide identity and a sense of place to the surrounding countryside.

Primary Uses:

Rural Residential, social/cultural and neighborhood commercial, personal service establishments, and institutional uses

Development Objectives:

1. Rural Crossroad areas are limited in land area, with commercial uses located within ¼ mile of the actual intersection.
2. Standards for development in Rural Crossroad areas will ensure that turning movements at the intersection are not interrupted by access to/from individual lots.
3. Limited parking in Rural Crossroad areas will be sited to the side and rear of commercial, civic and/or social uses.
4. Pedestrian linkages from nonresidential uses will be provided to surrounding residences, and between commercial and social uses.

Overview

This updated section continues to organize the various issues and opportunities discussed during a comprehensive review of the adopted 2010 Comprehensive Plan, in relationship to existing conditions in Berkeley County, the future vision and adopted Guiding Principles of this Plan. Along with a summary of these issues and opportunities, are goals, policies and implementation strategies related to each Guiding Principle. These issues and goals were identified as part of the comprehensive planning process during the public participation phase, which included discussions of existing conditions and future scenarios. They have been updated to reflect changes in the County that have occurred since adoption of the plan in 2012 and discussions during the 5-year review. The goals are intended to attain an ultimate vision for the County, one that achieves a balance between managing growth while protecting and preserving the character and quality of life for Berkeley County residents.

Following goals and policies are tables of implementation strategies for achieving each guiding principle, along with a suggested time frame and a list of agencies responsible for implementation. Short term projects are to be completed in one to five years, while long term projects are to be completed in five to ten years. Ongoing projects are either already occurring or should be occurring on a regular basis.

Guiding Principle 1

Berkeley County will protect and promote the existence of distinctive and diverse, sustainable communities within its boundaries.

Summary of Issues

Experiencing significant growth over the past sixty years, Berkeley County has more than doubled its population since 1980. To accommodate this growth, large tracts of land in areas previously considered rural have been developed mostly by large planned communities in the urbanized area. However, this growth has also been accommodated by development of single family residences on large lots outside the urbanized area by those seeking to live in a rural area. While the County is open to new residences in its rural areas, it is cognizant that increasing demands will not only quickly consume the County's agricultural and forested land but will also place demand for additional infrastructure beyond existing service areas and increase congestion on the rural road network.

It is also important that as the population becomes more prevalent and diverse, the County strives to find the balance between continued growth while maintaining the level of quality of life for its residents. This includes continuing to provide diverse housing options and businesses in order to meet various needs of its population.

In addition, protection of rural Berkeley County's historic communities, such as Pringletown, Cross, Lebanon and Honey Hill, along with its natural resources, including the Cooper River and Lake Moultrie, is becoming increasingly important due to these development pressures. By planning for growth pressures, these communities are more likely to retain their individual characteristics.

During the public participation phase of the planning process, participants repeatedly expressed their concerns regarding the loss of character and quality of life of their communities. In addition, preservation of community character and quality of life was one of their greatest hopes for the future of Berkeley County. Growth or density of development was also of great concern to participants, meaning they were concerned about the type of development taking place throughout the County.

Goals and Policies

- G1.1 Berkeley County will support the provision of community services, essential for all population groups.
1. The County will promote land use regulations that provide appropriate locations for quality health care, day and elderly care, and other services.
 2. The County will encourage the establishment of social services by institutions or community groups.
 3. The County will encourage allocation and efficient management of educational facilities that provide opportunities for residents to enjoy the same, or better, standard of living.
 4. The County will ensure residents in new development are provided with adequate public safety services and facilities.
- G1.2 Berkeley County will support the development of affordable housing and diverse housing types.
1. The County will encourage the provision of diverse housing types within planned developments.
 2. The County will provide incentives for creative housing developments that provide affordable housing or workforce housing in close proximity to existing and future employment centers.
 3. The County will promote housing availability for low to moderate income households and special needs populations.
- G1.3 Berkeley County will plan and implement mitigation strategies to protect existing communities and neighborhoods from physical deterioration due to natural hazards and/or neglect.
1. The County will protect the quality of existing communities and neighborhoods through increased code enforcement and regulations.
 2. The County will support redevelopment or enhancement of existing communities and neighborhoods that have suffered from physical deterioration.
- G1.4 Berkeley County will promote the development of complete communities within the Principal Growth Area (PGA) as designated on the Future Land Use Map (FLUM).
1. The County will make decisions on new development based on their contribution to the community's character and sense of place.
 2. The County will support creation of walkable, safe and attractive neighborhoods with a mix of uses, where appropriate, throughout the Principal Growth Area in accord with Section 2: Land Use and Development Principles.

Guiding Principle 2

Berkeley County will manage development and expansion of infrastructure systems efficiently in order to effectively serve residents and employees within Berkeley County.

Summary of Issues

As growth and development pressures continue, Berkeley County must consider the cost of providing facilities and services for new developments, particularly as it relates to gaps in service provision. Inadequate public facilities, longer response times for emergency services, lack of local employment opportunities, potential impact on existing communities, and longer travel and commuting times for residents are all issues to consider when evaluating the feasibility of a new project or development.

One of the greatest concerns coming out of the visioning process for the adopted plan, and again during the five-year review workshops, was the lack of infrastructure “concurrency,” meaning that the capacity and availability of roads, sewer and water lines, schools, and other public facilities should be available to keep pace with demand for services that accompany new development in order to maintain the County’s quality of life.

Quality of life often requires economic prosperity; therefore, there is a need to promote economic well-being within the County and to provide diverse employment opportunities. By doing so, residents have employment options within the County rather than commuting to neighboring jurisdictions for employment purposes. This leads to decreased mobility and less traffic congestion on the roadways.

The creation of wealth is important not only for individuals and households, but also for the community as a whole, in terms of quality and range of facilities and services available, and for the maintenance of the built and natural environment.

Goals and Policies

- G2.1 Berkeley County will guide population growth to areas where supporting infrastructure exists or can efficiently be expanded.
1. The County will make efficient use of existing infrastructure and public facilities in order to minimize the need for costly new/expanded facilities and services.
 2. The County will plan infrastructure ahead of growth in identified growth areas, and direct intense land uses to areas where infrastructure and carrying capacity already exist.
 3. The County has identified a Principal Growth Area on the Future Land Use Map where existing infrastructure exists and/or is planned and will not support the extension of infrastructure to areas that are outside of the Principal Growth Area (PGA) and areas specified for resource protection.
 4. The County will establish a process to evaluate the adequacy of infrastructure and public facilities with rezoning applications within and outside of the PGA.
 5. The County will evaluate the growth capacity and projected demand for developable land within the PGA every five years and amend if necessary in order to continue to focus development within areas that are served by efficient extension of existing utilities as consistent with the County’s Comprehensive Plan, Water and Sewer Master Plans, and other infrastructure or capital improvements plans.
- G2.2 Berkeley County will encourage the provision of infrastructure as needed to support economic and workforce development initiatives.

1. The County will consider impacts on infrastructure, including rail access, and natural resources when making locational decisions on economic and workforce development projects.
2. The County will identify and promote development of manufacturing/industrial corridors and employment/technology corridors where infrastructure exists.
3. The County will increase recruitment efforts and support the establishment of industries that generate economic development.
4. The County will support workforce development programs that provide skilled labor for existing and recruited industries from County population base.
5. The County will promote establishment and expansion of port-related industries.
6. The County will support the local agricultural industry.
7. The County will support development of employment uses in the constrained growth area when adjacent to rural towns where such uses may be supported by infrastructure extensions from the municipalities.

G2.3 Berkeley County will improve the operation and efficiency of its transportation network to serve residents and employers.

1. The County will prioritize transportation improvements that support desired development patterns, better serve residents and employers, and promote connectivity while accommodating multiple functions.
2. The County will continue to support a strategic transportation plan for system improvements addressing existing and projected demand for all modes of transportation countywide.
3. The County will encourage connectivity by expanding the number of alternative routes and the provision of multimodal corridors throughout the County road network for local traffic.

Guiding Principle 3

Berkeley County will respect and enhance historic, cultural and natural resources, while providing expanded public access to them.

Summary of Issues

Berkeley County has an abundance of cultural and natural resources that provide many benefits to the community. These identify the County's unique character, help to foster civic pride, offer economic opportunities by helping attract new residents, businesses and visitors, and contribute to the overall quality of life for residents.

Many of the concerns expressed during citizen input revolved around the impact development has had or will have on the County's historic and cultural resources, as well as its agricultural lands. More specifically, citizens want to ensure: development is occurring in areas where suitable soil and geologic features exist; where impacts on the quality of wetlands and other water resources and natural habitats of site development, infrastructure, and/or structures can be mitigated; and such that air quality standards are maintained and industrial noise reduced or mitigated.

Sites that exemplify Berkeley County's character and landscape include, but are not limited to, the Francis Marion National Forest, Lakes Marion and Moultrie, Medway Plantation, and Cypress Gardens. Sites such as these provide scenic value, cultural and recreational opportunities, and natural habitats to be protected and enjoyed. Because these resources play such an important role, they should be protected and, where possible, shared with the greater community.

Goals and Policies

G3.1 Berkeley County will support local agricultural and forestry practices through the preservation of its rural areas.

Attachment B: SECTION 1: ISSUES AND OPPORTUNITIES

- 1. The County will support the protection of agriculture and farmlands, including timberlands, from development pressures, recognizing the contributions of farming and the rural character of the community.
 - 2. The County will support policies and programs that provide opportunities for agricultural activities to remain an integral part of the community.
 - 3. The County will promote agri-tourism opportunities.
 - 4. The County will support the aquaculture industry through preservation of water quality.
- G3.2 Berkeley County will develop and market heritage and eco-tourism opportunities based on its cultural and natural resources.
- 1. Protection and conservation of the County's cultural and natural resources will play a vital role in the decision-making process.
 - 2. The County will promote and support the protection and enhancement of the County's unique historic resources.
- G3.3 Berkeley County will adopt and apply land use principles and development practices which ensure development works in harmony with cultural and natural resources.
- 1. The County will encourage new development to locate in suitable locations in accord with Section 2: Land Use and Development Objectives in order to protect and preserve natural resources, environmentally-sensitive areas, or valuable historic or cultural resources from encroachment.
 - 2. The County will adopt and implement policies and standards that minimize impacts of site development, including land disturbance, infrastructure and structures, on the quality of wetlands and other nonrenewable natural resources.

Guiding Principle 4

Berkeley County will make sure that both active and passive recreational opportunities are available to its residents countywide.

Summary of Issues

Berkeley County has many recreational resources, most of which are commonly found in association with the area’s natural and cultural resources. Examples of these include: recreational boating at Lions Beach on the shore of Lake Moultrie; recreational boating on Lake Marion; Richardson Landing boat-launching facility at Bonneau Beach; boating and fishing on the upper Cooper River and Santee River; and the Berkeley County Blueways paddling trail system.

Despite these resources, citizens who participated in the public workshops expressed concern over the lack of public recreation facilities, playgrounds, and ballparks, particularly in rural areas of the County. Berkeley County has many opportunities to enhance and promote existing facilities while developing new ones to meet the needs of the community.

An exercise conducted at the public workshops asked participants to review photographs of various community components and choose what they felt would be an appropriate addition to their communities. One of the most popular images chosen was that of a neighborhood playground. While these facilities may be provided within a planned community, they are not easily accessed by most rural residents. The need for these types of facilities was concentrated in two rural areas on maps at the community planning workshops: Wando-Huger and New Hope-Longridge.

Community recreation was also desired around Lake Moultrie, often near boat launches; on the west side of Moncks Corner, near existing public schools; and in or near the communities of Pringleton, Sangaree, Oakley, and Macedonia. Participants also expressed a need for access to water on the southwest side of Lake Moultrie, the Goose Creek Reservoir, the upper reaches of the Cooper River, the Wando River, and Four Holes Swamp. There were comments expressing a need for upgrades to existing facilities on the Lake as well.

Goals and Policies

G4.1 Berkeley County is committed to providing pleasant, accessible public gathering places and parks throughout the community.

1. The County will support initiation of a countywide park planning program, to include trails and blueways networks.
2. The County will promote a balance of recreation opportunities between identified growth areas and existing communities.
3. The County will invest in parks and open space to enhance the quality of life for its citizens.

G4.2 Berkeley County will increase public accessibility to recreation areas within the County.

1. The County will promote connectivity between existing recreational sites and cultural/scenic resources, and communities, using its Green Infrastructure Plan as a guide.
2. The County will explore opportunities for increased and enhanced public access to waterways.
3. The County will seek to establish public beach areas along lake shores to better serve residents.

Guiding Principle 5

Berkeley County will adopt a clear, fair plan that can be implemented through simplified costs and streamlined processes.

Summary of Issues

One of the best ways to strengthen a community is to create opportunities for citizens to work collaboratively on the challenges that shape their community. The same applies to the development of a comprehensive plan. A comprehensive plan must be created from diverse public input in order to be successfully implemented.

It is through this public participation that the County was able to adequately define its vision for the future and identify goals and strategies for achieving that vision.

It is even more important for citizens to understand that the comprehensive plan is a document intended to guide all development, regardless of size or scope. Therefore, the County has created a comprehensive plan that establishes a clear intent and policy base which can be used to develop and interpret local regulations. The Plan should be used to assist local elected and appointed officials in making land use decisions that are fair, consistent, and impartial.

This means that all development proposals and requests for changes in land use and zoning should be considered consistently and processed in a timely and fair manner.

It is also vital that as growth does occur, the County strive towards improved service delivery at all levels of public service. During the public workshops citizens expressed concern over the growth taking place and the burden on taxpayers to build the infrastructure to service this new growth. The County will need to explore new ways of funding these additional facilities and infrastructure in order to mitigate a decline in current levels of service.

Goals and Policies

GS.1 Berkeley County will encourage public participation in achieving goals to ensure that all communities have a voice.

1. The County will seek opportunities to share information and engage the public regarding issues that are likely to have an impact on the community.
2. The County will explore ways to increase public awareness with regards to public meetings and hearings.

G5.2 Berkeley County will make improvements to its service delivery.

1. The County will ensure that new development does not cause a decline in existing levels of service for the community's residents and employers.
2. The County will support sequential, phased extension of utilities and services to encourage rational expansion of development to areas immediately contiguous to already developed areas of the community.
3. The community will use planned infrastructure expansion to promote development in areas identified (in the comprehensive plan) as ready for development.
4. The County will explore ways in which infrastructure for new development does not cause a burden on current residents.

 Total Acreage: ± 1.29 acres
 Applicant: B. Todd Olds
 Owner: Bonnell W. Meese
 Council District: 4

Planning Commission Recommendation: DENIAL (Unanimous)

Background:

The applicant, B. Todd Olds, is requesting to rezone a 1.29-acre parcel, located along Royle Road and indicated by the following TMS number: 233-09-02-046, from Manufactured (R-2) to Mobile Home (R-3). According to the Application, the applicant wishes to conform with the adjacent property (TMS 233-09-02-007) which is already zoned R-3. The Applicant's intent is to combine the subject property with the adjacent 1.2-acre R3 zoned parcel (TMS 233-09-02-007). Upon combination, the 2-acre minimum lot size requirement for R3 zoning would be met.

Existing Uses and Adjacent Property Information:

The subject property currently contains multiple mobile homes and is adjacent to R-3 property along Royle Rd. The parcel is located just off Farmington Rd./ I-26, adjacent to a R-3 property also owned by Bonnell Meese. There are multiple R-3 mobile home parks as well as multiple non-conforming R-2 mobile home parks.

Adjacent property characteristics are listed below.

Adjacent Property Information
	Zone	Use
North	R-3	Mobile Home Park
South	R-2	Commercial/ Mobile Home Park
East	R-2	Mobile Home Park
West	OI	Church

Conformance with Comprehensive Plan: Yes - The subject property contains the 2010 Future Land Use Plan recommendation of Low Density Suburban, which seeks to include diverse housing choices and will act as a transition from Constrained Growth Areas to higher density residential and commercial areas.

Staff Recommendation: APPROVAL - Staff recommends approval of this request as it provides an opportunity for the development of a diversity of housing options, which align with Future Land Use Plan and are compatible in the context of the area concerned. The proposed use of the property is compatible with surrounding land uses. There is also an understanding between the applicant and the Planning Department that parcels 233-09-02-046 and 233-09-02-007 will be combined and recorded prior to third reading at County Council.

Planning Commission Recommendation: DENIAL IN A UNANIMOUS VOTE. After reviewing the requested change and hearing from many community stakeholders in opposition to the request, Planning Commission found the request incompatible and potentially-detrimental in the context of the community concerned. Members of the community present verbalized concerns regarding traffic, saturation of mobile home parks in the area, and diminution of property values and quality of life. A petition from stakeholders, Francis and Donald Gibson, is enclosed.

Potential Impacts:

2815

Denial- The applicant will continue to be held to standards required in the R-2 zoning category, restricting the combination with the adjacent property and any associated residential uses.

Approval- The applicant will be held to the R-3 zoning requirements and pursue combination of this parcel with the adjacent R-3 parcel.

The subject rezoning request is seeking to change the zoning from R2 manufactured residential status to R3 Mobile Home Park. This type rezoning in Council District 4 has been previously requested in the Pine Vista area. The zoning change request location on this TMS number is close and adjacent to the previous property request presented to this Planning Commission.

The referenced (TMS numbers and dates) were all denied by this committee. In the past we have provided signed petitions by the homeowners in the Pine Vista area stating the concerns of adding any additional Mobile Home Parks to an area that is already overly saturated with the now many existing Mobile Home Parks. The area in question now has drug problems, increased traffic, too many children with no playgrounds, theft and crime increase, require a much increase in additional fire and police department coverage and will add to the already too many transit renters now located in our area.

A correct denial precedent was made by this Planning and Zoning Commission to not allow any additional Mobile Home Parks for this small community in the Pine Vista area located in Ladson. All denials were issued on the above references.

I respectfully ask that this rezoning request follow those already set precedents and this request also be denied.

Thank you once again for your time and the opportunity of being heard.

Best Regards

Francis O. Gibson

- The subject property currently contains 2 mobile homes.

- There are multiple R-3 mobile home parks as well as multiple non-conforming R-2 mobile home parks in the vicinity.
- The subject property contains the 2010 Future Land Use Plan recommendation of Low Density Suburban, which seeks to include diverse housing choices and will act as a transition from Constrained Growth Areas to higher density residential and commercial areas.
- R-1 and R-2 zoning is also consistent with the Comprehensive Plan recommendation.
- Staff recommended approval.
- Planning Commission Recommendation: DENIAL IN A UNANIMOUS VOTE. After reviewing the requested change and hearing from many community stakeholders in opposition to the request, Planning Commission found the request incompatible and potentially-detrimental in the context of the community concerned. A petition from stakeholders, Francis and Donald Gibson, was enclosed in your Agenda Packet.
- The R3, 1.2 acre parcel can accommodate up to 13 mobile homes.
- Upon rezoning and combination, the zoning could support up to 27 MHs. (14 on the subject property).

AN ORDINANCE TO MODIFY THE OFFICIAL ZONING AND DEVELOPMENT STANDARDS MAP OF BERKELEY COUNTY, SOUTH CAROLINA, IN REGARD TO HEIRS OF JERRY FORDHAM FOR 7.43 ACRES ON A LOT INDICATED WITH TMS# 263-00-01-003, LOCATED ON CLEMENTS FERRY ROAD NEAR CAINHOY ROAD; FROM R-2, MANUFACTURED RESIDENTIAL DISTRICT TO R-4, MULTIFAMILY RESIDENTIAL DISTRICT IN COUNCIL DISTRICT 8.

ARTICLE 22. - AMENDMENTS

22.1. - General provisions.

This zoning and development standards ordinance, including the official zoning and development standards map, may be amended from time to time by the county council, either on its own initiative or in response to a petition from a landowner with respect to his property. All requests by landowners for amendments to this ordinance must be submitted in writing on a form provided by the planning and zoning department. Only one zoning classification may be requested by the property owner/applicant for the subject parcel. Should a landowner wish to request a rezoning classification for a portion of his property, that portion shall be subdivided and an approved plat of this subdivision of property shall be duly recorded with Berkeley County prior to the landowner submitting a written request to rezone the newly created parcel.

(Ord. No. 04-11-68, 11-23-2004; Ord. No. 05-08-58, 8-29-2005)

22.2. - Planning commission review.

All proposed amendments must be submitted to the Berkeley County Planning Commission for its review and recommendation. The planning commission shall have 30 days within which to submit its report. If said commission fails to submit a report within the 30-day period, it shall be deemed to have recommended approval of the requested amendment.

22.3. - Public notice.

22.3.1. Public hearing. Before enacting an amendment to this ordinance, county council shall hold a public hearing thereon, at least 15 days' notice of the time and place of which shall be published in a newspaper of general circulation in the county.

22.3.2. Posting. The zoning administrator shall post at least one sign, of a size and in a location so that it is clearly visible from the abutting road, on all property for which a zoning change has been requested. Such sign(s) shall be posted at least seven days prior to the planning commission's review of the amendment request. The developer or landowner must maintain such sign(s) so that they remain clearly visible from the abutting road, and shall notify the zoning administrator immediately upon discovery that a sign has been damaged or removed. No person, except an authorized Berkeley County employee, shall remove a sign once it has been posted.

22.4. - Fees.

A nonrefundable fee of $250.00 shall accompany any rezoning request submitted by a property owner or owners. If two or more parcels (identified by separate TMS numbers) are involved in the rezoning request, and all are owned by the same person(s), one fee shall be submitted. However, if two or more parcels (identified by separate TMS numbers) are involved, and are not owned by the same person(s), separate fees shall be submitted by the owner(s) of each parcel.

For properties rezoning as a planned development with a development plan, the fee for rezoning and approval of the plan shall be nonrefundable in the amount of $1,500.00.

Revision 3 - Rules of Procedure

1. Revision 3 to the Rules of Procedure

Mrs. Simmons: Wanted to mention that Planning Commission makes a recommendation for approval or denial for County Council's consideration. County Council has the final decision making on all rezoning due it being a legislative matter. If an item progresses, it will be reviewed by Land Use Committee, which is County Council. Mr. Day: Do I hear a motion for the approval of the Revisions Rules and Procedures? Mr. Sineath moved to have the revisions approved and Mr. Evans second it.

She noted that she currently lives there, and the applicant is not intending to move to the lot.

Mr. Sineath made a motion to approve & Mr. Evans second the motion. All were in favor of the motion.

Frances Pinto presented an overview of the request, noting adjacent uses and zoning and the intent of the request. She noted that the requested change is within the Arterial Road Overlay District and pointed out the preliminary plat that was submitted to the Department. Terrance Ross, 504 bonnie drive, approached the podium. Mr. Day asked the intended use. Mr. Ross noted that he intends to develop as commercial and that he is kicking around some ideas. He noted that he owns the GC zoned lot on the corner and would like to combine.

Mr. Day asked for opposition. None opposed the request.

Mrs. Hoover made a motion to approve the request and Mr. Sineath second the motion. All were in favor.

MEESE FOR 1.29 ACRES ON A LOT INDICATED WITH TMS# 233-09-02-046, LOCATED ON ROYLE ROAD NEAR FARMINGTON RD/I-26; FROM R-2, MANUFACTURED RESIDENTIAL DISTRICT TO R-3, MOBILE HOME DISTRICT IN COUNCIL DISTRICT 4

TMS:233-09-02-046; R2 to R3 Meese

Ty Adley presented an overview of the request. He noted the intent of the application and adjacent uses and zoning.

The applicant, Todd Olds; Stoney Point Court, N. Charleston SC, approached the podium. He noted that it is currently legally non-conforming. Sale of the property is contingent upon sale. He noted that he has standards for mobile homes in his park. Mr. Turner asked about whether or not the existing mobile homes would meet those standards. Mr. Olds noted that they would not. He said that typically he works with tenants to comply over a 6 - 12 month time frame.

Mr. Turner asked if the access drive would be improved. The applicant noted that he would. He noted that he would look at placing 18 - 22 mobile homes on the property. Mr. Sineath asked if there would be a Manager and policing. The applicant noted that he will grant access to the Police Department.

Wade Arnett, adjacent property owner, approached the podium and noted that thinks that there is an overabundance of mobile homes already in the area. He said that he did not think that the lot was big enough to accommodate the number of MHs proposed.

Mr. Olds noted that he is a licensed Realtor and will be the property management. Mr. Arnett further noted that he is concerned about the children. He is concerned about the safety in the children that currently live in the neighborhood as well as those that may reside in the future mobile home park.

Mr. Olds noted that there is a Keating Rule, noting limitations under Fair Housing Laws for number of occupants for a house of a certain number of rooms (2 persons per room).

Frances (Donald) O'Gibson, resident at Royal Road, presented and read from a letter. Since 2002, he and other residents have been coming up here to demonstrate opposition. Previous properties of similar requests have been routinely denied because of over saturation of mobile home parks. He noted that increased traffic, drug problems, increased crime, increased demand for police, and a precedent that was set for similar types of request. He asked that the rezoning request adhere to those that were evaluated in the past.

Susan Yoeh; 385 Frankie Lane: noted that she had a question for the existing mobile home parks in Stahl Road. She asked if the condition of this park would be similar to that one?

James Jackson; 769 Royal Road: Is concerned about lighting and kids getting into his pool and is opposed to this the rezoning of this property.

Ann Jackson, 769 Royal Road, she noted that her fence separates this MH park and that she has had problems with trespassing into her yard and pontune boat.

Xxx resident xxx - he pointed out his house and that his appraised value is diminished because of adjacent mobile homes. He noted that he has had issues with animal abandonment. He noted that across the street is a mobile home with a burn barrel, HVAC junked in yard, and porch in poor condition. He noted that cars are parking on the side of the road, obstructing traffic. His wife approached the podium and noted that she did not have anything but problems; she asked that the PC consider the repercussions of these types of requests. She noted that she smells meth being cooked.

Mr. Day noted that the PC has a history of denying these types of requests in this community: Mr. Sineath noted that the PC cannot do anything about children, drugs, etc. However, a resident noted that community concerns extend beyond those things, but include traffic.

Mr. Day asked for a motion

Mrs. Hoover made the motion to deny the request, Sineath seconded the motion. All were in favor. (Denied)

- 4. AN ORDINANCE TO MODIFY THE OFFICIAL ZONING AND DEVELOPMENT STANDARDS MAP OF BERKELEY COUNTY, SOUTH CAROLINA, IN REGARD TO HEIRS OF JERRY FORDHAM FOR 7.43 ACRES ON A LOT INDICATED WITH TMS# 263-00-01-003, LOCATED ON CLEMENTS FERRY ROAD NEAR CAINHOY ROAD; FROM R-2, MANUFACTURED RESIDENTIAL DISTRICT TO R-4, MULTIFAMILY RESIDENTIAL DISTRICT IN COUNCIL DISTRICT 8

Ron Hanna presented an overview of the request.

Wofford Strinbling approached the podium; he noted that the request is compatible with the FLU. However, he feels that if this was a 15 acre lot, that he would be able to provide twice the number of units. He noted that the lot has been for sale for a number of years and wetlands constrain the site. In order to make the project economically feasible, he noted that a town home project is necessary. He feels as though town homes will bring an affordable housing product to the area.

Layne Baker, 2722 Crooked Stick Lane (River Town), noted that he did a similar town home project in MTP where he provided 37 town homes on 3.3 acres. He noted that he is a boutique town home developer. He noted that the product contains metal roofs, hurricane windows/doors, hardy plank, etc. He noted that adjacent uses are commercial, so he does not know what this site will be if it doesnt develop as TH.

Mr. Sineath asked the proposed SF of each unit. The applicant noted that without the garage, 1300 SF, with garage - 1500 SF. HE noted that the price point will be $175 - $195k.

Mr. Carl Townsend, resident in Hanahan, noted that he traverses Clements Ferry Road and he feels as though traffic congestion is significant on this road and 49 town homes and the proposed school will make it worse.

Mr. Wofford noted that multi-car families are not the ones moving into these types of communities. He noted that TH will not generate as many trips as say commercial. He noted that he feels as though this is an extension of Mt. Pleasant. He feels as though this area is set up for growth.

CONSIDERATION PRIOR TO FIRST READING

- 1. AN ORDINANCE TO MODIFY THE OFFICIAL ZONING AND DEVELOPMENT STANDARDS MAP OF BERKELEY COUNTY, SOUTH CAROLINA, IN REGARD TO BONNELL W. MEESE FOR 1.29 ACRES ON A LOT INDICATED WITH TMS# 233-09-02-046, LOCATED ON ROYLE ROAD NEAR FARMINGTON RD/I-26; FROM R-2, MANUFACTURED RESIDENTIAL DISTRICT TO R-3, MOBILE HOME DISTRICT IN COUNCIL DISTRICT 4

Committee Member Davis moved for approval.

Committee Member Newell stated that since he is the Council Member for that District, he should have the right to move whether to approve or deny.

Committee Member Whitley inquired as to where it says that in Council Rules.

Chairman Schurlknight stated that it is kind of an understood thing.

Committee Member Davis withdrew his motion.

Ms. Alison Simmons, Planning & Zoning Director, stated that the applicant is requesting to rezone in order to conform and combine with an adjacent 1.2-acre R-3 zoned parcel. She stated that, upon combination, the minimum lot size requirement for R-3 zoning would be met. She stated that the subject property is contained in the Future Land Use Plan recommendation of Low Density Suburban, which seeks to include diverse housing choices and will act as a transition from Constrained Growth Areas to Higher Density Residential and Commercial areas. She stated that, based on adjacent zoning and adjacent Uses in the Comprehensive Plan recommendation, Staff recommended approval. She stated that the Planning Commission recommended denial in a unanimous vote. She stated that, after reviewing the requested change and hearing from many community stakeholders and opposition to the request, the Planning Commission found the request incompatible and potentially detrimental in the context of the community concerned. Members of the community present verbalized concerns regarding traffic, saturation of mobile home parks in the area, and the diminution of property values and quality of life. She stated that a petition from stakeholders was included in the Committee Members' agenda packets.

Committee Member Whitley inquired as to if the Planning Commission's decision is articulated within the Standards that would protect us from a legal standpoint.

Ms. Simmons stated that she thinks so. She stated that the reason is because, in her opinion, the best gauge of compatibility is public input. She stated that while the requested change is supported by the Comprehensive Plan, the existing zoning is, as well.

Committee Member Whitley stated that both parcels allow mobile homes. He stated that this would only change one to be in conformance - one is currently grandfathered in. He inquired as to if he was correct.

Ms. Simmons stated that the adjacent parcel is currently zoned R-3, so it supports the request. She stated that the adjacent property is grandfathered and supports a mobile home park.

Committee Member Whitley stated that either way, the protest against the mobile homes does not hold water because it has mobile homes and it is grandfathered in for mobile homes.

Ms. Simmons stated that there are currently only 2 mobile homes on this other parcel.

Committee Member Whitley inquired as to what the impact would be if this was rezoned.

Ms. Simmons stated that they would be able to provide additional mobile homes in accordance with the requirements for R-3 zoning.

Committee Member Whitley inquired as to how many.

Ms. Simmons stated that it would allow for up to 27 mobile homes on both parcels upon combination.

Committee Member Whitley stated that on the one parcel where it is already allowed, that is part of the 27 mobile homes.

Ms. Simmons stated that 13 mobile homes are allowed on that lot. She stated that if the parcel is rezoned, 14 mobile homes would be allowed on the subject parcel.

Committee Member Whitley clarified that the change would be from 2 to 14 mobile homes.

Ms. Simmons stated that this was correct.

Committee Member Cox stated that the reason for the grandfathered-in part is that County Council has decided that this is not the appropriate zoning for that area, so as mobile homes are pulled out, they are no longer allowed to bring additional mobile homes in. He inquired as to if he was correct.

Ms. Simmons stated that if a mobile home is removed from the subject parcel for a period longer than 6 months, it cannot be brought back.

Committee Member Cox inquired as to if that meant the same mobile home or any mobile home.

Ms. Simmons stated that it could be any mobile home.

Committee Member Davis inquired as to if there can be an increase from 2 mobile homes to more mobile homes under the grandfather clause provision.

Ms. Simmons replied to the negative.

Committee Member Davis stated that it is always limited to 2 or extinction/complete removal.

Ms. Simmons stated that this was correct.

Committee Member Whitley stated that, with approval, you get 27 mobile homes and, with denial, you get 15 mobile homes.

It was moved by Committee Member Newell and seconded by Committee Member Gunn to deny prior to First Reading, an Ordinance to Modify the Official Zoning and Development Standards Map of Berkeley County, South Carolina, in regard to Bonnell W. Meese for 1.29 Acres on a Lot Indicated with TMS#: 233-09-02-046, Located on Royle Road near Farmington Rd/I-26; from R-2 to R-3

PUBLIC DISCUSSION

1. Requests to be heard must be made prior to the Call to Order. [Comments on any Public Discussion items will be limited to four (4) minutes per speaker. A total of 30 minutes will be allotted for this Public Discussion period.]

Chairman Peagler explained the rules for addressing Council during Public Discussion.

Mr. Todd Olds, 431 Stoney Poynt Court, North Charleston, stated that he came before Council this evening on a request to rezone a property at Royle Road. There are some compelling facts and substantial issues that he wishes to present to Council this evening. The papers being passed out are some signatures of residents that live on the property and support the rezoning, in addition to some photos of Royle Road. One of the compelling facts he wishes to present tonight is if they base their decision this evening based on the people who are opposed to this, he'll probably go home a loser, if it is based on facts of the law, the area, its character, and what is near Royle Road, then he should walk out with approval. The Planning Director of the County has made a recommendation for approval. The Berkeley County Land Use Plan totally supports this rezoning. This rezoning request is harmonious in its entirety. Royal Road has 66 parcels. Out of 66 parcels that butt Royal Road, 42 of them have a mobile home or multiple mobile homes. The property that he is asking to be rezoned presently has two mobile homes. The adjacent property that he has beside it, has approval already for at least 13 mobile homes. The actual residents support the rezoning. The request does not negate in any way or create a negative character to the district, community or existing development of the area. They will hear consistently tonight about drugs, people in the street, traffic, that is subjective and arbitrary. There is nothing factual that can be presented to them to demonstrate that any property values have been decreased based on mobile homes. This is a mobile home community. It's an affordable living area. They are asking for a rezoning based on those facts. Based on what the County website says in bold print that the future land use and comprehensive plan is a strong guide for decision making and rezoning request. Therefore, they are asking they do this based on the law, Comprehensive Plan, the Planning Director's recommendation and not on anyone's subjective reasons, not being factual, and not being a supporter. Planning Commissions do not always get it right. They solely base their decision on subject, arbitrary reason.

Mr. Raymond Headding, 760 Royle Road, Ladson, stated that he is standing opposed to the property, TMS # 233-09-02-046, being changed from the present zone status R-2 to R-3, because there is high traffic on this road at certain times of the day. There are 13 trailer parks presently on Royle Road, that he personally counted, from I-26

overpass, Northeast, to Highway 17-A. There are trailer parks on Royle Road, Southwest of I-26 overpass. There have been 11 applications denied since as far back as April of 2002. Here they have another, same type of application trying to be passed. There have been approximately 13 trailer parks along with parcels consisting of 2 to 4 trailer parked on them. A total count was done showing an approximate count of 316 trailers off of Royle Road off of Highway 17-A to Highway 78. He is concerned about where he lives, which is directly in front of this property that is trying to be rezoned. He has put his house up for sale twice and was told by the real estate agent that because of the trailers next door and around in the area, the value of his real estate, he couldn't get what it really is worth because it is depreciated. He has woken early in the mornings and have had suspicious people sitting in his driveway. He's witnessed a large amount of consistent traffic of coming and going, which is a common red flag to predict high drug trafficking. Sometimes there are cars, truck, and mopeds that frequent the same trailer as many as twelve times within an approximate three hour period. There are unusual and strange vehicles up and down the driveways and dirt roads in search of a specific trailer. The appearance of the homes is falling apart, skirting is missing, pieces or all of it, old vehicles parked in the yards without license plates on them, and everything left out in the open of all to see. There are no privacy fencing requirements. This is a two-lane road. All traffic has no alternate means of travel. He has witnessed a boy from one of the trailers on the same tract of land that is in question and he was hit.

Mr. James Jackson, 769 Royle Road, Ladson, stated he is adjacent to the property that is in question here. He has been there for 51 years. If there was something they could have done 45 or 55 years ago, they would have done it then. There wasn't Planning Commissions then or anything back then. Most of these parcels of land on this road are around three acres in size. They bought these properties out there 50 years ago, because they wanted a country style living, but the community around there and in the southern part of Berkeley County is growing tremendously. The Summerville area where they live is growing wild. The subdivision down the road from them that is going in, they still have more house being built. Around the Sangaree school, you can't get by there in the mornings or afternoons from people dropping off and picking up kids there. They even park in the highway, and you have to sit there and wait for them to get through before they can get through that section.

Mr. Francis Gibson, 1076 Royle Road, Ladson, stated that they have nine pages of a petition of residents that have signed in opposition of the rezoning. He has been coming here since 2002, and he has been living there since 1978. He has seen the area turn from acreage to trailers. They don't need any more trailers. The precedent has been set all those times. There's one common thing, every person that comes up here that wants to put trailers in the area, they don't live there. He just wants Council to keep in mind, that since 2002, there have been 12 TMS's that they have shot down. They don't need any more trailers in the area.

Mr. Auvo Kemppinen, 329 Lake Moultrie Drive, Bonneau, stated that he is here to express his concern about the present contract with Berkeley County and Republic Services about trash and recyclables disposal. He is an immigrant, retired citizen from Finland, and he feels responsible for separating trash and recyclables. He delivers paper and cardboard to the disposal center outside of Moncks Corner once a week. There, they don't accept recyclables like they used to. Republic Service now imposes a monthly charge of $15.00 per month for doing his civic duty. He wanted to deliver his recyclables to their gathering point, but they refused. To a retired person, this amounts to real money. Something is wrong. This $15.00 a month fine for doing his civic duty appalls him, leaving him no other option than throw it out with the trash. He would like to know who the brilliant attorney was who concocted this crazy scheme, and with Council's approval. He sincerely hopes this matter will be revisited.

REPORTS FROM STANDING COMMITTEES

1. Committee on Finance

Chairman Joshua S. Whitley, District No. 2

a. Fiscal Year 2017 Budget Status Report

Presenters: Tim Callanan/Johnette Connelley

Chairman Whitley stated that Mr. Tim Callanan provided a Fiscal Year 2017 Budget Status Report, and no action was taken.

(That concluded Chairman Whitley's report.)

2. Committee on Land Use & Economic Development

Chairman Jack Schurlknight, District No. 6

a. AN ORDINANCE TO MODIFY THE OFFICIAL ZONING AND DEVELOPMENT STANDARDS MAP OF BERKELEY COUNTY, SOUTH CAROLINA, IN REGARD TO BONNELL W. MEESE FOR 1.29 ACRES ON A LOT INDICATED WITH TMS# 233-09-02-046, LOCATED ON ROYLE ROAD NEAR FARMINGTON RD/I-26; FROM R-2, MANUFACTURED RESIDENTIAL DISTRICT TO R-3, MOBILE HOME DISTRICT IN COUNCIL DISTRICT 4

Council Member Davis stated that he hears the citizens. Eventually, change is going to come. He is always leery of when the Planning Commission makes its decision, and when staff makes a decision. He has always been guided by those principals. It's no question that it fits within the Comprehensive Zoning Plan. Unfortunately, the fine citizens are trapped in the dilemmas of it. He told Mr. Olds that he would support it, because it fits the overall Comprehensive Plan and he wanted the folks to understand that he consistently follows this pattern. Change is hard, difficult and they don't deserve all the things happening out there, but at the same time the Comprehensive Zoning Plan was put in place for specific reasons.

Council Member Schurlknight stated that he has a lot of concerns about the effects it is going to have on the individuals that live on Royle Road. They've been there a long time, and have seen a lot. He is hearing that they have hosted a lot of development on the road, and it comes to a tipping point to where you must look at the capacity of the road, and safety. He understands that the Planning Commission denied and Staff recommended, but he thinks Council has a lead way in some of this stuff. He likes to look at it by a case by case basis. He inquired to Mr. John O. Williams, County Attorney, if he has had a chance to look at this situation and if he would address the legality of it. If Council is within its legal right.

Mr. John O. Williams, County Attorney, replied in the affirmative, and Council is justified in a vote in either direction.

Council Member Schurlknight stated that with that in mind, he has been down Royle Road many times. He has seen a lot of stuff going on in the area. It does devalue the property. He thinks they have suffered enough when it comes to development and quality of life. It concerns him that when the dust settles, they are going to be there. As Chairman of the Land Use Committee, he agrees with Council on the original recommendation of denial.

Council Member Whitley stated that he thinks he was in the minority voting for approval for First Reading, and he would send it to at least Second Reading or Third Reading not committing to voting for the potential rezoning. He is hesitant to vote for a rezoning for a mobile home park unless it fits the character of the area. His understanding though, is this rezoning would change very little, except on the 10 overall units. He is going to vote consistent as he did in Committee, and send it to Second Reading.

On recommendation of the Committee, Chairman Schurlknight moved to deny an Ordinance to Modify the Official Zoning and Development Standards Map of Berkeley County, South Carolina, in Regard to Bonnell W. Meese for 1.29 Acres on a Lot Indicated with TMS# 233-09-02-046, located on Royle Road near Farmington Rd/I-26; from R-2, Manufactured Residential District to R-3, Mobile Home District in Council District 4. The motion to deny passed by majority voice vote of Council. Council Member Whitley and Council Member Davis voted Nay.

Planning Fundamentals

Identifying Basic Planning

A county making a decision to “plan” can be described as establishing the method and design for accomplishing a particular act or goal. The term “planning” is commonly used to describe local government activities conducted to prepare and organize for the future. For purposes of discussion in this chapter, planning will be defined as an orderly process used by county governments to:

- Identify county problems and needs;
- Collect information and facts necessary to study the county’s problems and needs;
- Arrive at consensus on county goals and objectives;
- Develop plans and programs for fulfilling the adopted goals and objectives; and
- Execute plans and programs in an efficient, organized manner.

When a local government applies the process described above to all private and public actions affecting the development and uses of property within its jurisdiction, it is implementing “land use planning.” The definition of land use planning also includes the activities undertaken by a county government to influence the appearance and growth of the county. Often referred to as “planning,” land use planning is the most visible form of planning because of its impact on the physical makeup of a county. It is important to distinguish land use planning from “zoning.” Zoning is just one of the regulatory tools available to counties carrying out land use planning that can lend a community some influence on the private use of land.

With the local planning activities described above, public input is vital. Citizens’ direct involvement in plan preparation is the primary source for developing accurate assessments of a county’s problems and needs, which in turn can give support to the adoption of a final set of community goals and objectives. Developing plans and programs for a county requires close collaboration between citizens and local government officials. Without a measure of public support and understanding of local planning activities, the county’s plans can result in hollow documents, placing the success of the entire planning process at risk.

Planning History in Brief

Planning and zoning have been around the U.S. since the early part of the last century and are recognized as a function of local governments. The U.S. Supreme Court, in the landmark decision of Village of Euclid v. Ambler Realty Company, upheld the constitutionality of local government zoning in 1926.¹ Around the time of the Euclid decision, the U.S. Department of Commerce published two documents: A Standard State Zoning Enabling Act and A Standard City Planning Enabling Act.² These publications greatly influenced the shape of the local planning enabling legislation passed by state legislatures, including early local laws in South Carolina.

² Herbert H. Smith, The Citizen’s Guide to Zoning (Chicago: APA Planners Press, 1983).

Model planning acts permitted local governments to plan for and control land use and development occurring within their jurisdictions through the oversight of local planning commissions. In South Carolina, the General Assembly passed planning enabling legislation for counties in 1942, after granting similar planning authority to municipalities in 1924.³ Enabling legislation in South Carolina has been reenacted many times over the years, with the last major reenactment occurring in 1994. The General Assembly passed the 1994 S.C. Local Government Planning Enabling Act, which consolidated county and municipal planning laws into one code chapter, the source of current local land use planning and zoning authority.⁴

Planning in the Counties: Behind the Ordinances

Suburban Growth and Changing Rural Landscapes

Urbanized parts of South Carolina have experienced significant growth in both population and building activity in the past six decades. Much of this growth has been experienced in the unincorporated areas of South Carolina's counties. Often, this type of increased development activity is termed "suburban" growth, because it occurs outside the traditional urban/downtown area of communities. The natural impact of suburban growth in the counties is the conversion of once rural, agricultural areas into newly-developed residential and commercial communities.

Planning programs allow counties to foresee and direct the public resources necessary to accommodate new suburban growth. ☹

Changing land uses tend to increase the demand for local government services and infrastructure, as people move out to new developing communities in unincorporated areas of the counties. Planning programs allow counties to foresee and direct the public resources necessary to accommodate new suburban growth. A lack of planning in the suburbs tends to leave impacted local governments unprepared to keep up with the growing demand for public facilities and services. For example, increased residential and commercial traffic on former "farm-to-market roads" can rapidly take up existing capacity and create traffic backups more reminiscent of downtown than the rural area where the congestion is occurring.

Some jurisdictions have attempted to maintain the resources and quality of life that attracted new growth by engaging in planning for the change from rural to suburban. When growth pushes out into the rural areas of a county, planning can play a vital role in preserving open space as well as protecting valued natural, scenic and historic resources. Specialized zoning can protect historic sites from activities that would otherwise disrupt or destroy their character, while other land use policies can provide levels of identification and preservation for natural areas such as forests, mountains, wetlands and coastal areas. In those areas seeking to harmonize land development with the existing rural character of a community, county planning can assist in the conservation of open space and farmland.

Economic Development

The economic life of a county can be aided by an established planning program. For example, information gathered and analyzed on county demographics and the local economy is a frequently utilized tool in successful economic development efforts. Planning studies can benefit industrial prospects looking to invest, as well as counties assessing their economic growth needs. Through the land use planning process, planners can catalog information about appropriate industrial and development sites, which can be utilized by both prospective industries and local economic development recruiters.

⁴ Act No. 355 of 1994.

Avoidance of Adverse Impacts

Planning can also provide indirect economic benefits to residents and industry through appropriate land use controls. When land use planning is in full swing, it has the potential to assist in the stabilization of land values.

An established land use policy, when implemented through appropriate zoning and land development regulations, can foster attractive communities and ensure that incompatible land uses are separated or buffered. The prospect of adjoining and incompatible land uses—such as the placement of heavy industrial activity next to an established single-family, residential neighborhood—can produce a degree of uncertainty that can destabilize a community. An industry may want equal assurance that adequate buffers exist between their location and future residential, educational and community developments.

Planning has an important role in a county council's determinations for the location, capacity and expansion of public facilities, while potentially aiding efforts to strengthen the local economy.

Alternatively, when cities adopt planning programs and enforce strict development regulations within their municipal boundaries, the unincorporated areas of the county can become sites for undesirable and unplanned land uses. In these instances, the outlying areas of the county may become the unwilling depository for activities that have been forced outside of the municipal boundaries of cities with planning programs. This can result in the arrival of activities such as sexually-oriented businesses, junk yards, landfills, hazardous waste sites and noxious industries.

Adequate Infrastructure

Planning has an equally important role in a county council's determinations for the location, capacity and expansion of public facilities, while potentially aiding efforts to strengthen the local economy. A well-managed capital improvement program integrated with land use plans can assist county council in directing the proper amount of public resources. For example, studies on projected county population and land uses can reveal infrastructure needs that allow for the prior identification of potential sites for public facilities. This can reduce infrastructure costs, by allowing the county to plan for the future through early acquisition or protection of expansion sites.

The 1994 Planning Act: Providing the Basis for County Planning

Through legislation passed at the state level, local governments in South Carolina are granted the authority to create and maintain a comprehensive planning process, including land use regulations. As previously noted, the General Assembly last passed major legislation in 1994 to reestablish the organization and powers that counties and municipalities can utilize in their planning efforts.

The 1994 Planning Act as Fundamental Enabling Legislation

The S.C. Local Government Comprehensive Planning Enabling Act (the 1994 Planning Act)⁵ recodified existing planning law into a single location in the S.C. Code of Laws. The 1994 Planning Act accomplished two important goals.⁶ First, it consolidated existing planning legislation that was previously scattered throughout Titles 4, 5 and 6 of the Code into one location.⁷ Second, it updated the old law with contemporary planning practice, providing for several new tools to assist in local government planning.

Counties with planning and zoning programs in place must maintain compliance with the provisions of the 1994 Planning Act. However, for those counties that are not interested in planning, the General Assembly has never passed enabling legislation mandating that counties adopt plans and enact zoning ordinances. The 1994 Planning Act continued the “no mandate to plan” rule, leaving counties under no requirement from the state to engage in planning programs, including zoning, for their jurisdictions.

In discussing the key legal requirements counties must comply with in order to plan and zone, the focus of this chapter will be on the provisions of the 1994 Planning Act. The act affects all aspects of county planning, from how the county organizes its planning-related boards to the actual regulatory powers exercised in its plans and ordinances.

Local Planning Organization

Local government organization for planning in South Carolina is largely rooted in the 1994 Planning Act. When the requirements of the act and common planning practice are combined, county planning organization breaks out into the following four integral parts:

- County Council
- Planning Commission
- Planning staff
- Other boards concerned with zoning

The following overview will focus on the county council, planning commission and staff. A discussion of the role of the other boards will appear in the section on zoning.

The need for public input is essential for local government planning to be successful. ©

Absent from the organizational framework listed above is an extremely vital, but not to be forgotten element—the public. As stated at the outset of this chapter, the need for public input is es-essential for local government planning to be successful. The level of public understanding and involvement in the planning process, whether acting as concerned citizens or participating as planning board members, can dictate the success or failure of a county’s planning program.

County Council

A major factor in determining the direction of a county planning program rests with the county council. As the policy-making body for county government, county council has the power, through planning activities, to set the agenda on how the community grows and develops.

⁵ Act No. 355 of 1994.

⁷ S.C. Code Ann. §§ 4-27-10 et seq.; §§ 5-23-10 et seq. and §§ 6-7-10 et seq. Title 4 was the first county planning act. However, Title 5 (municipalities) and Title 6 (counties and municipalities) have been the main statutes utilized by local governments for planning authorization prior to passage of the 1994 Planning Act.

The vitality of a local planning program can be judged by how county council decides issues affecting the county's development and how closely decisions reflect adopted plans and policies.

The county council makes decisions in other areas of governance that have a significant impact on the planning process beyond those directly affecting specific plans and programs. For example, through the annual approval of the county budget, the council determines the level of funding for the departments and boards/commissions that are responsible for carrying out planning activities. Moreover, county council decisions can also influence planning through their approval of various capital projects and public improvements. Another area where county council has a major impact on the success of the planning program is the appointment process. The caliber of county council appointments to the planning commission, board of zoning appeals or board of architectural review can have a large impact on the quality of the planning program.

Planning Commission

The creation of a county planning commission is the first step that a county council takes to develop a planning process. In essence, the planning commission serves as a citizens' advisory group to the county council on planning matters. The planning commission's advice is embodied in the recommendations it makes to county council for the adoption of plans and ordinances.

Appointing the members of the planning commission is the responsibility of county council. Planning commission membership is typically comprised of laypersons from the community. The 1994 Planning Act requires that membership on the planning commission represent a broad cross-section of the interests and concerns within the jurisdiction. To that end, the law states that planning commission appointments be made in consideration of the member's professional expertise, knowledge of the community and concern for the future welfare of the total community. The permissible size of the planning commission varies, based on the number of jurisdictions it serves. A typical county planning commission may not have less than five nor more than 12 members.⁸

A primary function of a planning commission is "to undertake a continuing planning program for the physical, social and economic growth, development and redevelopment of the area within its jurisdiction."⁹ The planning commission fulfills its responsibilities through oversight and recommendations on planning matters. The planning program is embodied in the planning commission's initial preparation of—and amendments to—the comprehensive plan, zoning ordinance and land development regulations. Finally, in order to ensure that the planning commission can carry out its responsibilities, the commission has the flexibility to contract for staff and experts, if necessary, so long as it is consistent with funds appropriated.¹⁰

Planning Staff

In order to fulfill its statutory duties, a planning commission requires assistance, which most jurisdictions provide through a full-time professional planning staff. Comprised of citizen volunteers, a planning commission by itself lacks the time and expertise to ensure that the information necessary to the planning process is gathered and analyzed in a professional manner. A planning staff typically operates "in-house" as a department of the local government under the county administration. Whether employed through contract or in-house, a planning staff provides both research time and professional expertise to the county planning process. By physically conducting the studies and constructing the background information for plans and appeals, the planning staff's role is vital to the planning commission's work.

⁸ S.C. Code Ann. §§ 6-29-320, 6-29-350.

⁹ S.C. Code Ann. § 6-29-340.

¹⁰ S.C. Code Ann. § 6-29-350(C).

Beyond assisting in the production of plans and studies, a zoning administrator is also needed to enforce the requirements of the zoning ordinance. The role of the zoning administrator will be discussed in the section on zoning.

The Comprehensive Plan

The foundation of the planning process is the comprehensive plan. It forms a blueprint for the county's future growth and development. The comprehensive plan should reflect the county's current physical development and predict where future development will occur. A plan should indicate the extent and character of projected land use activities in the county. The "extent" of development refers to the policy decisions reflected in the plan that forecast where future growth will be encouraged or discouraged, as well as the amount of growth. The "character" of development refers to which areas will be developed for residential, commercial, industrial, agricultural and any other land uses appropriate for the county.

Plan Elements

Under the 1994 Planning Act, the comprehensive plan must be organized into nine separate elements:¹¹

1. Population. Considers historic trends and projections, household numbers and sizes, educational levels and income characteristics.
2. Economic Development. Considers labor force and labor force characteristics, employment by place of work and residence, and analysis of the economic base.
3. Natural Resources. Considers coastal resources, slope characteristics, prime agricultural and forest land, plant and animal habitats, parks and recreation areas, scenic views and sites, wetlands and soil types.
4. Cultural Resources. Considers historic buildings and structures; commercial districts; residential districts; unique, natural or scenic resources; archeological and other cultural resources.
5. Community Facilities. Considers water supply, treatment and distribution; sewage system and wastewater treatment; solid waste collection/disposal; fire protection, emergency medical services and general government facilities; educational facilities; and libraries and other cultural facilities.
6. Housing. Considers location, types, age and condition of housing; owner and renter occupancy; and affordability of housing.
7. Land Use. Considers existing and future land use by categories, including residential, commercial, industrial, agricultural, forestry, mining, public and quasi-public, recreation, parks, open space, and vacant or undeveloped.
8. Transportation. Considers transportation facilities—including major road improvements, new road construction, transit projects, pedestrian and bicycle projects and other elements of the network—coordinated with the land use element.
9. Priority Investment. Considers the likely federal, state and local funding available for public infrastructure and facilities during the next 10 years; recommends the projects for expenditure of those funds for infrastructure such as roads, water, sewer and schools. Recommendations are accomplished through coordination with adjacent jurisdictions and area service providers.

¹¹ S.C. Code Ann. § 6-29-510(D).

The comprehensive plan's land use element alone does not regulate the use of land. It is merely a vision of future land uses. If a county seeks to implement the land use element, a zoning ordinance must be adopted in order to regulate uses of private property. Counties should be ready to reconcile and correct large-scale inconsistencies between the land use element and any later enacted zoning ordinances and amendments.

The 1994 Planning Act also requires that each of the nine elements include at a minimum the following three items:

- Inventory of existing conditions;
- Statement of needs and goals; and
- Implementation strategies with time frames.¹²

These three requirements form an underpinning for bringing the plan elements to life as part of a continuing planning process. Meeting these three requirements can be accomplished through a process that involves both public input and studies of the specific considerations listed in each element of the comprehensive plan, with policymaker input into final strategies.

Plan Formation through Studies

Background studies provide the necessary groundwork for goal and policy formulation that is in turn reflected in the completed elements of the comprehensive plan. The ability to set out a blueprint for the location of all public infrastructure allows the county to begin a process of accommodating and coordinating future growth patterns. Much of the information necessary for planning studies is revealed in the subject matter described in each of the nine elements of the comprehensive plan. The information, once gathered and analyzed, builds a foundation for assessing the county's current and future needs.

Beyond the studies suggested by the planning elements themselves, certain information is typically gathered and analyzed by the planning staff that is indispensable to making informed planning decisions. To that end, planners generally need to research, analyze and bring forward the following types of information in the planning process:

- Survey and assessment of county demographics. This effort involves examining recent and past trends in population growth, which can be accomplished with the aid of U.S. Census data. Population and demographic information provides a picture of the past, present and future attributes of the people in the county. Understanding the characteristics of the county's population—such as sex, age, race, education and other characteristics—lends insight about current problems and future county needs.
- Data illustrating the makeup of the county's economy by means of economic analysis of the county. Characteristics describing the nature and extent of the county's employment and labor force can aid in understanding and describing the local economy. In turn, information about the local economy aids in the formulation of plans designed to direct resources where they will be of maximum use. Economic studies also assess the county's strengths and weaknesses, which is important in tailoring efforts geared toward fostering new industrial and business development.
- Assessment of existing public infrastructure. This study should consider issues of current capacity as well as expansion plans for the future. All public facilities should be studied including utilities, schools, libraries, parks, cultural facilities and hospitals. Issues of capacity and expansion concerning the provision of services should be examined for law enforcement, fire, emergency medical (EMS), social service delivery and other relevant services.

¹² S.C. Code Ann. § 6-29-510(C).

- Studies on land uses in the county, to include both the natural conditions and the existing physical development. Surveys should be conducted mapping the location and qualities of the county's natural features and landscape—such as prime agricultural lands, wetlands, soil types, topography, drainage, forests, surface and groundwaters, and all other natural resources of the county. Inherent in a study of the land and its uses is a survey of the man-made developments in the county. These surveys should record the existing transportation system—including transit by road, rail, water and air. The existing transportation network should be paired with the location and character of all current improvements to the land—including industrial, commercial, residential, governmental and other uses.¹³

In line with the 1994 Planning Act's encouragement of coordinating the plans across multiple jurisdictions, the listed surveys and studies for the comprehensive plan need to include an identification of potential conflicts with adjacent jurisdictions, along with a consideration of regional plans or issues.

Plan Adoption

Oversight of the studies and strategies that set the foundation for comprehensive plan adoption rests with the planning commission. After integration of the studies into the plan elements,

Prior to adopting the plan or an element, the governing body must hold a public hearing and give 30 days notice. (f)

the planning commission recommends a plan and transmits its recommendation to county council. The planning commission can recommend an entire plan or only transmit separate elements of the plan.¹⁴

Formal and final adoption of the plan or elements is accomplished by ordinance of county council. Prior to adopting the plan or an element, the governing body must hold a public hearing and give 30 days notice.¹⁵ Finally, all adopted comprehensive plan elements must be reviewed for possible changes not less than once every five years, and the plan in its entirety must be "updated at least every 10 years."¹⁶

After Plan Adoption—Public Facilities Review

It is interesting to note that completion of a comprehensive plan sets up the possibility for an ongoing public facility review by the planning commission. Under a little used provision of the 1994 Planning Act, no new public facility "construction" may occur until the location, character and extent of it has been submitted to the planning commission for review and comment as to its compatibility with the comprehensive plan.¹⁷ By requesting review of local infrastructure decisions within its jurisdiction, the planning commission has an opportunity to bring infrastructure decisions back to the adopted, public facilities related elements in the comprehensive plan.

Zoning and Land Development Regulations

Zoning

Zoning's Role

The most common tool utilized by a local government to implement a county's land use plan is zoning. In general, a zoning ordinance divides the land within a county's jurisdiction into different districts. Within each district, the zoning ordinance can designate the use, location and size of any structures placed on property. Adoption and enforcement of a zoning ordinance is an exercise of fundamental county authority to protect and preserve the health, safety and general welfare of the county through the regulation of land. Counties derive the ability to enact and enforce zoning through a combination of the Home Rule Act of 1975 and the Planning Act of 1994.¹⁸ These two, long-standing pieces of legislation combine to establish the "police power" of county government and how zoning ordinances are adopted, amended and enforced.

Through a zoning ordinance, a county can determine to undertake a wide array of objectives to encourage outcomes such as: minimum development and design standards; higher aesthetic benefits and values in the community; varied land uses appropriately positioned to avoid potential conflicts; and sufficient land and infrastructure availability for future development.

The control of land use influences the development of the county which, in turn, places importance on how a county conducts its use of zoning. Moreover, zoning actions can have significant impact on the use and value of privately owned lands. Zoning actions are subject to a high degree of scrutiny by citizens' groups and landowners both in favor and against a particular adoption or change. Sometimes, disputes arise over the legality of county zoning actions based on constitutional concerns and private property rights. Because of these heightened interests and potential impacts, zoning can be one of the most controversial activities undertaken by a local government.

Zoning Ordinance Structure

A zoning ordinance generally includes two parts: a text and a map. Included in the text of the zoning ordinance are the regulations that will apply in each of the zoning districts and the process governing amendments to the text and the map. The role of the map is to set out graphically the location of the zoning districts. The text and the map combine to partition the land within the county's planning jurisdiction into zoning districts. Within each district, land can be limited through regulations governing: 1) use; 2) dimensions, density and setback requirements; and 3) other guidelines and specifications—such as screening, tree preservation, landscaping, buffers, required public improvements, signage controls, off-street parking and loading.¹⁹

Three of the most commonly utilized zoning districts are residential, commercial and industrial. A typical zoning ordinance incorporates these common zoning districts along with an assortment of other special districts—such as public use, agricultural, mobile home park, office and institutional, and planned unit development. However, districts may be much broader than that, providing for many types of development with variations for lot sizes, density and dwelling types.

Zoning Provisions in the Planning Act

After adoption of at least the land use element of the comprehensive plan, the county council can adopt a zoning ordinance to help implement the plan.²⁰

¹⁸ S.C. Code Ann. § 4-9-10 et seq.

¹⁹ S.C. Code Ann. § 6-29-720(A).

²⁰ S.C. Code Ann. § 6-29-720(A).

Zoning ordinances must be designed for the general purposes of “guiding development in accordance with existing and future needs” and promoting the “public health, safety, morals, convenience, order, appearance, prosperity, and general welfare.”²¹ Some examples of specific purposes that the 1994 Planning Act references for possible zoning ordinance consideration are:

- Providing adequate open space;
- Preventing the overcrowding of land, lessening congestion in the streets;
- Facilitating the creation of a convenient, attractive and harmonious community;
- Protecting scenic, historic or ecologically sensitive areas; and
- Facilitating the availability of transportation, police and fire protection, recreational facilities, and other public services and requirements.²²

Nonconformities and Variances

Certain uses and buildings may not conform to the regulations set forth in a new zoning ordinance or amendment. Enforcement of the zoning ordinance can create nonconforming uses, otherwise known as “nonconformities.” A nonconforming use results from conditions on the property existing prior to the adoption of zoning regulations, such as buildings in violation of height and setback rules, lots that violate width and total area rules, or former land uses.

By allowing existing uses to be exempt from the ordinance, zoning ordinances can “grandfather” nonconformities. However, the ordinance can also require that once the use is changed, the previous exemption from the ordinance is dissolved and all future new uses of the site or buildings must comply with the ordinance. Another approach to nonconformities is to encourage the discontinuation of the use after a reasonable time period. This approach is generally referred to as “amortization,” and it is among the powers granted to local governments in the 1994 Planning Act.²³

A variance is a device that can grant a property owner relief from the provisions of a zoning ordinance when strict application of the ordinance would result in an unnecessary hardship. For example, a variance may be granted to reduce yard and setback requirements or the number of parking or loading spaces. In order to receive a variance, the hardship must be beyond a mere inconvenience or monetary considerations. The authority to grant variances is vested in the county’s zoning board of appeals, which will be discussed later in this chapter.

Zoning Ordinance Amendments

A zoning ordinance is subject to amendment as needed. In general, amendments to the zoning ordinance alter the zoning district classification of individual properties or descriptions of uses allowed for properties throughout the county within a particular district. The ability to seek a zoning amendment is not an exclusive right vested in any one individual, group or body. The process for amending the zoning ordinance is set forth for each county in the 1994 Planning Act and the local zoning ordinance. Only county council has the final authority to enact amendments to the zoning ordinance (after planning commission review). A public hearing must be held prior to final action for a zoning ordinance amendment, and the act sets out explicit public notice and comment requirements.²⁴

²¹ S.C. Code Ann. § 6-29-710(A).

²² S.C. Code Ann. § 6-29-710(A).

²³ S.C. Code Ann. § 6-29-730.

²⁴ S.C. Code Ann. § 6-29-760.

Zoning Enforcement

A key part of zoning enforcement rests with the zoning administrator, who is commissioned to enforce the requirements of the zoning ordinance. The zoning administrator is responsible for ensuring that submitted plans are in compliance prior to the issuance of certificates of occupancy or building permits. Additionally, nonconformities and direct violations of the ordinance are under the purview of the zoning administrator. The zoning administrator has the authority to withhold building or zoning permits and to issue stop orders against any work undertaken without proper building, zoning or subdivision permits.²⁵

The Board of Zoning Appeals

Once established by county council, the board of zoning appeals becomes an integral part of the administrative mechanism designed to enforce the zoning ordinance. County council provides for the board's existence in the zoning ordinance text and appoints the membership of the board, which may have three to nine members.²⁶

A board of zoning appeals has three general responsibilities under the law: 1) they hear appeals from decisions and actions of the zoning administrator; 2) they have authority to grant variances from the strict application of the zoning ordinance; and 3) they may permit certain uses by special exception.²⁷ In discharging its duties, the board is required to adopt rules of procedure and follow prescribed public notice and meeting requirements.

In hearing appeals and other requests, the board of zoning appeals acts like a court of law. ☉

When it is alleged that an administrative official made an error in enforcing the zoning ordinance, the board of zoning appeals hears and decides appeals. In hearing appeals and other requests, the board acts like a court of law, rendering a decision based on the evidence heard and interpreting the provisions of the zoning ordinance. Decisions by the board are appealable to the state judicial system through the circuit court.²⁸

Additionally, the board may grant a variance from requirements of the ordinance "when strict application of the provisions of the ordinance would result in unnecessary hardship."²⁹ A variance may be granted in an individual case of unnecessary hardship, if the board finds:

- Extraordinary and exceptional conditions pertaining to a particular piece of property;
- Conditions that do not generally apply to other property in the vicinity;
- Because of these conditions, application of the ordinance would effectively prohibit or unreasonably restrict the utilization of the property; and
- Authorization of a variance would not be of substantial detriment to adjacent property or to the public good, and the character of the district would not be harmed by the granting of the variance.

The board may attach conditions when granting a variance. As stated earlier, the 1994 Planning Act makes it clear that increased profit accruing to property based on a zoning change may not be considered as grounds for granting a variance.³⁰

²⁵ S.C. Code Ann. § 6-29-950.

²⁶ S.C. Code Ann. § 6-29-780(A).

²⁷ S.C. Code Ann. § 6-29-800.

²⁸ S.C. Code Ann. § 6-29-800.

²⁹ S.C. Code Ann. § 6-29-800.

³⁰ S.C. Code Ann. § 6-29-800.

As a general rule, the board may not grant use variances. A "use variance" involves the establishment of a use not otherwise permitted in a zoning district, extends physically a nonconforming use of land, or changes the zoning district boundaries shown on the official zoning map. However, the 1994 Planning Act does allow a county council to authorize the board of zoning appeals to grant "use variances" under certain conditions as set by council.³¹

The Board of Architectural Review

Municipalities and counties that undertake efforts to preserve and protect valued historic districts or scenic corridors have traditionally utilized boards of architectural review. To further historic preservation efforts, boards of architectural review have been employed to govern the exterior appearance of buildings and structures within defined zoning districts. The boards derive their authority through the text of the zoning ordinance.

A board of architectural review may be created when the county council has adopted a "zoning ordinance which makes specific provisions for historic and architecturally valuable districts and neighborhoods or significant or natural scenic areas, or protects or provides, or both, for the unique, special, or desired character of a defined district, corridor, or development area or any combination of it..."³² Review and approval by the board of architectural review is required prior to the undertaking of various building activities within a defined district. The ordinance provisions establishing a board of architectural review must be designed to protect districts through restrictions that govern "the right to erect, demolish, remove in whole or in part, or alter the exterior appearance of all buildings or structures within the area..."³³ Additionally, the board hears appeals on the decisions of the zoning administrator concerning "matters under the purview" of the board of architectural review.³⁴

The general organization and procedures of the board of architectural review are established in similar fashion to the board of zoning appeals. County council may appoint up to 10 members to a board of architectural review and can compensate them for their service. For example, the process for taking appeals to and from the board of architectural review generally duplicates the procedures set up for the board of zoning appeals.³⁵

Land Development Regulations

Land Subdivision and Development

This area of state law enables local regulations concerning the conversion of raw land into subdivided lots for the construction of buildings and other structures. Often referred to as "subdivision regulations," land development regulations control site design, street layout, provisions for water and sewer service, and other matters relating to the conversion of the land for development. The basis for these types of regulations stems from the idea that the act of subdividing tracts of undeveloped property into separate parcels indicates that once vacant land will now be available for construction. By its nature, the sale, purchase and development of the new subdivision parcels will create an increased demand for public services and facilities.

When land is subdivided, subdivision regulations can require the approval of subdivision plats by the designated county agency as a prerequisite to the recording of a final plat. These requirements provide the county an opportunity to ensure that prior to the final subdivision of land, the necessary utilities, streets, drainage and other public improvements servicing the new parcels are provided by the developer.

³⁴ S.C. Code Ann. § 6-29-880.

³⁵ S.C. Code Ann. §§ 6-29-890, 6-29-940.

The 1994 Planning Act gives a broad definition of land development regulations to include the types of building activities that are potentially subject to regulation—such as “the changing of land characteristics through redevelopment, construction, subdivision into parcels, condominium complexes, apartment complexes, commercial parks, shopping centers, industrial parks, mobile home parks, and similar developments for sale, or lease...”³⁶ County council may adopt land development regulations when the community facilities, housing and priority investment elements of the comprehensive plan have been adopted. The planning commission has the responsibility to prepare and recommend the regulations to the county council.³⁷ Recent additions of note to the land development regulations in state law include definitions for “affordable housing,” “market-based incentives” and “traditional neighborhood design.”³⁸

Review Process for County Development

Land development regulations may specifically provide for staff review of development activity, including requirements for the submission of sketch plans, preliminary plans, and final plans for review and approval. Through a preliminary review process, the developer and the planning staff can assess which requirements will be necessary in order to obtain final approval. The review process typically utilizes sketch plans, followed by preliminary plats to ensure that the developer is providing the required public improvements in the development. The review process includes coordination from all county departments and outside agencies concerned with specific aspects of development plans—such as law enforcement, fire, utilities, public works, transportation, stormwater, and other potential service providers or responsible parties.

Developers can be required to make subdivision improvements, such as the proper construction of streets and the adequate provision of utilities and drainage prior to plan approval. Under the 1994 Planning Act, developers can be required to post a surety bond, certified check, letter of credit or other instrument readily convertible to cash, where site improvements are required prior to approval of a final development plan.³⁹ This can be utilized as a tool to ensure proper construction and completion of the needed public improvements. Upon final inspection and completion, the county may ultimately accept dedicated lands and public improvements shown on approved plats.

Jurisdiction Agreements

Counties and municipalities in South Carolina typically only exercise authority to plan for the areas within their recognized boundaries. For example, the extent of a county’s planning jurisdiction is the entire unincorporated area of the county, while a municipality’s planning jurisdiction is limited to the area within its corporate limits. However, planning enabling legislation has historically allowed the extension of planning jurisdictions beyond established boundaries. Two approved methods for extending the overall planning jurisdiction are joint city-county planning commissions and grants of extraterritorial jurisdiction.

The sale, purchase and development of new subdivision parcels creates an increased demand for public services and facilities.

³⁷ S.C. Code Ann. §§ 6-29-1120, 6-29-1130.

³⁸ S.C. Code Ann. § 6-29-1110.

³⁹ S.C. Code Ann. § 6-29-1180.

Joint City-County Planning Commissions

The establishment of a joint city-county planning commission is one method for increasing the scope of a local government's planning jurisdiction. Through a formal agreement between county and city officials, a single planning commission can be formed to oversee planning activities without regard for traditional jurisdictional boundaries.⁴⁰

Extraterritorial Jurisdiction

Counties can exercise planning jurisdiction within the boundaries of incorporated municipalities after approval of a city council request that the county planning commission be designated as the official planning commission for that city. Alternatively, municipalities may exercise extraterritorial planning jurisdiction in the unincorporated areas of the county adjacent to municipal boundaries upon receiving permission from county council.⁴¹ The extension of planning jurisdiction by a county or municipality must be done by ordinance.

Additional Planning Issues

Growth Management

Designing land use regulations to manage the location and pace of suburban growth is a concept that has been promoted in some parts of the country as a panacea for problems associated with rapid development. The call for better planning has stemmed in part from development patterns that fall under the descriptive phrase "sprawl." Sprawl is a term that has worked its way into planning terminology over the past decade and is used to describe high paced, unplanned development patterns that extend away from established communities. Two outcomes frequently associated with sprawling development are outstripped infrastructure (roads, schools, etc.) and high rates of raw land conversion.⁴²

At local and regional levels, growth management efforts are designed to provide for the coming suburban growth while attempting to mitigate or avoid anticipated negative impacts. Typically, growth management programs tie together land use/development regulations with capital improvement/infrastructure decisions. Some examples of growth management practices that have been utilized nationally are:

- Requiring that adequate public facility capacity be in place before approving new developments;
- Providing incentives for developments that preserve open space;
- Zoning that allows/supports mixed use developments (residential, commercial, office);
- Timing of growth/infrastructure through the use of urban growth boundaries; and
- Increased coordination of land use plans by adjoining jurisdictions.

In many South Carolina counties, the lack of command over some key infrastructure decisions (such as schools and water) can limit growth management possibilities; however, intergovernmental agreements and regional cooperation have potential for overcoming planning authority gaps.

Vested Rights

Court rulings over the past several decades have provided a source of law defining property rights in land use disputes between developers, private landowners and local governments.

⁴¹ S.C. Code Ann. § 6-29-330.

⁴² Robert H. Freilich. From Sprawl to Smart Growth (Chicago: American Bar Association, 1999), Ch. 2.

One form of property right that had long been recognized was formally adopted in 2004 by the General Assembly. Known as “vested rights,” the 2004 law codifies the rule recognizing that once a permit or development plan has been officially approved by a governmental entity, the successful applicant has the right to proceed with construction.⁴³ Prior “vested rights” (approval) cannot be subsequently taken away by a later action by the government. The new law allows for a defined period of time that landowners and developers can hold and use permits and plan approval.

Alternative Dispute Resolution

Appeal rights from zoning and land development decisions by counties have been expanded under state law to include a direct path to mediation. This form of mediation is sometimes referred to as alternative dispute resolution, which is a mechanism for bringing the parties and their attorneys together in an informal setting with a certified mediator, typically an experienced attorney. In mediation, the parties are allowed to discuss their respective claims and see if there is mutual agreement or a settlement that can be reached. If settlement is not possible, the lawsuit will move to circuit court for a hearing and determination.⁴⁴

Continuing Planning Education

Since adoption of the 1994 Planning Act, local planning-related activities have increased across the state. To improve the qualifications and training for local planning/zoning staff as well as board and commission members, the General Assembly has mandated continuing education requirements. The requirements include a minimum of six hours of orientation training for new staff and planning/zoning board members and three hours of continuing education annually as prescribed by state law.⁴⁵

Berkeley County

Comprehensive Plan

Planning the Future while Preserving the Past

- Protect and promote distinctive, diverse communities;
- Manage infrastructure systems effectively and expand them efficiently;
- Respect and enhance historical and natural resources and expand their public accessibility;
- Make recreational opportunities – both active and passive – available county-wide; and
- Draft a clear, fair plan to be implemented through simplified costs and streamlined processes.

This vision will be achieved through a planning process that ensures all development is consistent with the Comprehensive Plan and does not diminish the quality of life for future generations of Berkeley residents.

Goals and Policies

- G1.1 Berkeley County will support the provision of community services, essential for all population groups.
1. The County will promote land use regulations that provide appropriate locations for quality health care, day and elderly care, and other services.
 2. The County will encourage the establishment of social services by institutions or community groups.
 3. The County will encourage allocation and efficient management of educational facilities that provide opportunities for residents to enjoy the same, or better, standard of living.
 4. The County will ensure residents in new development are provided with adequate public safety services and facilities.
- G1.2 Berkeley County will support the development of affordable housing and diverse housing types.
1. The County will encourage the provision of diverse housing types within planned developments.
 2. The County will provide incentives for creative housing developments that provide affordable housing or workforce housing in close proximity to existing and future employment centers.
 3. The County will promote housing availability for low to moderate income households and special needs populations.
- G1.3 Berkeley County will plan and implement mitigation strategies to protect existing communities and neighborhoods from physical deterioration due to natural hazards and/or neglect.
1. The County will protect the quality of existing communities and neighborhoods through increased code enforcement and regulations.
 2. The County will support redevelopment or enhancement of existing communities and neighborhoods that have suffered from physical deterioration.
- G1.4 Berkeley County will promote the development of complete communities within the Principal Growth Area (PGA) as designated on the Future Land Use Map (FLUM).
1. The County will make decisions on new development based on their contribution to the community's character and sense of place.
 2. The County will support creation of walkable, safe and attractive neighborhoods with a mix of uses, where appropriate, throughout the Principal Growth Area in accord with Section 2: Land Use and Development Principles.

Guiding Principle 2

Berkeley County will manage development and expansion of infrastructure systems efficiently in order to effectively serve residents and employees within Berkeley County.

Summary of Issues

As growth and development pressures continue, Berkeley County must consider the cost of providing facilities and services for new developments, particularly as it relates to gaps in service provision. Inadequate public facilities, longer response times for emergency services, lack of local employment opportunities, potential impact on existing communities, and longer travel and commuting times for residents are all issues to consider when evaluating the feasibility of a new project or development.

One of the greatest concerns coming out of the visioning process for the adopted plan, and again during the five-year review workshops, was the lack of infrastructure “concurrency,” meaning that the capacity and availability of roads, sewer and water lines, schools, and other public facilities should be available to keep pace with demand for services that accompany new development in order to maintain the County’s quality of life.

Quality of life often requires economic prosperity; therefore, there is a need to promote economic well-being within the County and to provide diverse employment opportunities. By doing so, residents have employment options within the County rather than commuting to neighboring jurisdictions for employment purposes. This leads to decreased mobility and less traffic congestion on the roadways.

The creation of wealth is important not only for individuals and households, but also for the community as a whole, in terms of quality and range of facilities and services available, and for the maintenance of the built and natural environment.

Goals and Policies

G2.1 Berkeley County will guide population growth to areas where supporting infrastructure exists or can efficiently be expanded.

1. The County will make efficient use of existing infrastructure and public facilities in order to minimize the need for costly new/expanded facilities and services.
2. The County will plan infrastructure ahead of growth in identified growth areas, and direct intense land uses to areas where infrastructure and carrying capacity already exist.
3. The County has identified a Principal Growth Area on the Future Land Use Map where existing infrastructure exists and/or is planned and will not support the extension of infrastructure to areas that are outside of the Principal Growth Area (PGA) and areas specified for resource protection.
4. The County will establish a process to evaluate the adequacy of infrastructure and public facilities with rezoning applications within and outside of the PGA.
5. The County will evaluate the growth capacity and projected demand for developable land within the PGA every five years and amend if necessary in order to continue to focus development within areas that are served by efficient extension of existing utilities as consistent with the County’s Comprehensive Plan, Water and Sewer Master Plans, and other infrastructure or capital improvements plans.

G2.2 Berkeley County will encourage the provision of infrastructure as needed to support economic and workforce development initiatives.

BERKELEY COUNTY GOVERNMENT PLANNING COMMISSION
MEETING, FEBRUARY 28, 2017;

LAND USE AND ECONOMIC DEVELOPMENT COMMITTEE
MEETING, MARCH 13, 2017;

BERKELEY COUNTY COUNCIL MEETING, MARCH 27, 2017

TRANSCRIBED BY: EVE WILBANKS, RPR, and NOTARY PUBLIC

1 BERKELEY COUNTY GOVERNMENT PLANNING COMMISSION
2 MEETING, FEBRUARY 28, 2017:

3 CHAIRMAN: The next item, an ordinance
4 to modify the official zoning and development
5 standards map of Berkeley County, South
6 Carolina, in regard to Bonnell W. Meese for
7 1.29 acres on a lot indicated by TMS
8 223-09-02-046, located on Royle Road near
9 Farmington Road/I-26, from R-2 to R-3. This
10 is in Council District 4.

11 MR. TY ADLEY: Ty Adley with the 12 Berkeley County Planning Department. Um, as 13 you stated, this is the Meese property with 14 the applicant, Mr. Olds. The property is 15 currently roughly 1.29 acres. Um, there's a 16 couple mobile homes on the property, and the 17 intention of this property is to be combined
18 with an adjacent R-3 property to meet the 19 minimum R-3 standard for acreage.

20 Uh, adjacent zoning and land uses to the 21 north is the R-3 property, which is the one
22 that's subject to combination with this lot.
23 To the south is an R-2 lot with what appears
24 to be a commercial business on the property,
25 as well as a couple mobile homes.

1 To the east is a mobile home park with
2 multiple mobile homes on it. And to the west
3 there is a church and an OI district, or 4 office institutional.

5 Um, you can see in the middle of the 6 screen is a small rectangle, which is the 7 property in the question, the R-2 lot. And
8 just to the north of that is a lighter color,
9 which is the R-3 designation. You can see
10 here the entire area is designated as 11 low-density suburban for the future land use
12 map.

13 A few pictures surrounding the property.
14 The first one on the left is looking into the 15 property, and then the one in the lower
16 right-hand corner is looking to the north
17 along Royle Road.

18 BOARD MEMBER: Are these two pieces
19 that -- go back to that previous picture.
20 These two pictures, are they across the street
21 or across the road from each other?

22 MR. TY ADLEY: No. The one on the top
23 left is looking straight into the R-2 property
24 in question looking to be rezoned. The one in 25 the lower right-hand corner is looking down

1 Royle Road away from the interstate.

2 BOARD MEMBER: How close are these two
3 pictures in relationship to --

4 MR. TY ADLEY: I would -- I did not post
5 this sign, but I believe they turned 90
6 degrees and looked down the roadway and took 7 the picture.

8 (Inaudible audience member.)

9 MR. TY ADLEY: Does that answer your 10 question?

11 BOARD MEMBER: Yeah.

12 MR. TY ADLEY: Okay. Two additional
13 pictures, I believe this is the driveway that 14 enters the property, which is the one I was 15 seeing in the previous picture. And the 16 picture to the lower right-hand corner is 17 looking south towards the interstate.

18 Um, in terms of the comprehensive plan,
19 we believe it is in conformance with the 20 Future Land Use in terms of low-density
21 suburban and kind of offering a diverse amount
22 of housing choices for the area. And then in 23 terms of staff recommendation, we recommend 24 approval based on the conformance with the
25 comprehensive plan.

1 BOARD MEMBER: Okay. Is the applicant
2 here?

3 Yeah. Please state your name and
4 address for the record.

5 MR. TODD OLDS: Todd Olds,
6 43-(inaudible) Stoney Poynt Court in North
7 Charleston, South Carolina. Any questions,
8 it's basically straightforward, as Mr.
9 Addington (sic) has presented it. It's
10 currently a legal non-conforming use. I don't 11 own the property. The property is under 12 contract, contingent on the rezoning.

13 It is my intent to put a quality mobile
14 home park. I hear gestures from others about 15 mobile homes. I own three mobile home parks
16 throughout Berkeley County and Charleston
17 County, and I am not wanting to classify or 18 misclassify persons, but I believe you do have 19 class -- people that say you have a slumlord
20 and a landlord.

21 I am a quality landlord. I have a park
22 of 42 spaces on one of the worst crime-ridden
23 areas in the City of North Charleston on Stall
24 Road that has become the number one park on 25 Stall Road, generating 950 to $1,000 rents.

1 So it's not my intent to put any trash here.
2 I know there are numerous existing park homes
3 around this surrounding area. My standards
4 are much higher. All homes will have to be
5 vinyl-sided; all homes will have to meet a
6 certain year, uh, of the home.

7 The park will have security lighting,
8 which will be installed by Berkeley Electric
9 Co-Op, which we will pay for. So this is not 10 looking to be a -- just throw $5,000 boxes in 11 there and let -- I don't want to misstate it,
12 but I call it like I see it. It's not going 13 to be a thug park, if you will.

14 I've invested near a million dollars in 15 Stall Road in North Charleston, and I have
16 quality tenants, zero crime, zero crime.
17 We've ridded prostitutes, we've ridded drug
18 dealers, and we've ridded all the problems
19 within our park that I bought with 13 homes in 20 it with 42 vacant spaces -- 42 total spaces
21 and had 13 occupied homes in it, and now it's 22 filled all except three lots.

23 CHAIRMAN: Do we have any questions of 24 the applicant?

25 MARION TURNER: I've got a question.

1 MR. TODD OLDS: Yes, sir.

2 MARION TURNER: The existing homes that
3 was on the -- that were on the pictures that 4 were shown by the planning person, do they
5 meet those standards you're talking about?

6 MR. TODD OLDS: Mr. Turner, that's a
7 good question. They do not. And upon our 8 ownership, what we do with tenants that are 9 existing, we allow them a certain period of 10 time, of six months to a year usually, to 11 bring their standards into conformity.

12 We even work with them as far as
13 skirting due to financial hardships on people.
14 We realize we can't just go in there, and it's 15 not the right thing to do, to put a hardship
16 on someone and say, You've got to put skirting
17 and siding on within 30 days or 60 days. We 18 give them usually a year. If they can't meet
19 that requirement, then we usually work it out
20 with them. We will put the siding on the 21 home; we will skirt the home. And we will 22 allow them to add it to their rents, to pay it
23 back to us.

24 So we're not in any intent, way, shape
25 or form looking to displace anybody. We're

1 just wanting to get the property to be totally
2 conforming instead of a non- -- legal
3 nonconforming situation. And we love tenants.
4 We want to keep everybody we can as long as
5 they pay their rent and conform and comply
6 with the rules. Our motto is, you pay, you
7 stay; if you don't comply, you go bye-bye.

8 MR. MARION TURNER: I've got another
9 question. Since we're talking about the 10 mobile homes, I'm looking at this road
11 condition and this -- leading into this thing.
12 Is that going to be fixed as well?

13 MR. TODD OLDS: Absolutely. We will --
14 the ingress present -- ingress/egress that's 15 there right now, which is an easement, we will 16 enhance that even further, probably putting 17 pea gravel or pea 57 rock there throughout the 18 park. Each home will have its own individual
19 lot, as specified per the county requirements
20 and ordinances. I believe it has to be a
21 minimum of 4,000 square feet with the proper
22 setbacks. We will conform to all of that.

23 Each property, home, will have a
24 driveway. And, more than likely, we are going
25 to own all the homes except what's there now.

1 So it's our intent to put our homes in the
2 park and rent them and set each lot up.

3 BOARD MEMBER: Mr. Sineath?

4 MR. JAMES SINEATH: Yes. I think you've
5 already answered one question that I was going
6 to ask. But first, how many lots are going to 7 be in -- when you buy this, you start
8 operating it, it's yours, how many houses do
9 you think will be put in there? How many 10 houses do you have -- capable of being put in 11 there?

12 MR. TODD OLDS: Presently, Mr. Sineath,
13 there are three homes. If this becomes all
14 one parcel, there's three homes. Based on the 15 current ordinances and all we've looked at, we 16 see a maximum potential of 24, but we're
17 probably looking at around 18 to 22.

18 MR. JAMES SINEATH: But you would own
19 those homes that are being put in there. You
20 will not just rent space to somebody who wants
21 to bring their own home in there?

22 MR. TODD OLDS: We don't have a park now
23 -- the only -- all of our parks now, we own
24 the homes, with the exception of persons that 25 were in them when we purchased it. For

1 instance, if these three existing homes pay
2 their rent -- lot rent -- I don't go in and
3 displace them. They will have the right to
4 stay there and pay lot rent.

5 MR. JAMES SINEATH: I understand.

6 MR. TODD OLDS: So all the additional
7 homes, it is our intent to own, obviously, for 8 the business model that we have. And I don't
9 foresee that being a problem. We've put 33
10 homes in Stall Road in the last 22 months.

11 MR. JAMES SINEATH: But he asked one of 12 the questions that I was going to ask too. In 13 looking at this road, it looks like it's a mud
14 trap, dirt road going down in there. Do you
15 plan on making it a lot nicer?

16 MR. TODD OLDS: Absolutely, yes, sir.
17 We don't --

18 MR. JAMES SINEATH: You're not going to 19 pave it, but possibly putting rock like you
20 were talking about?

21 MR. TODD OLDS: Paving and concrete we 22 won't probably put in due to the expense and 23 the business model. But the sufficient and 24 more than adequate road buildup, elevation,
25 proper drainage, pea 57, most likely would be

1 what it is. We don't like ROC because -- you
2 know, pea 57 generates dust, but ROC is always
3 something white, you know. So we prefer the
4 pea 57. It gives it a little better drainage
5 and look; aesthetically, we like that better.

6 MR. JAMES SINEATH: Are you going to
7 have an on-site manager to -- you mentioned
8 it, so since you brought it up, I'm going to 9 follow through with it. You called it a
10 "thug" park. And I guess that's from the 11 North Charleston area. There are some bad
12 areas back where we're looking at right now.

13 So you intend, if you own this property,
14 to police it, I guess, for lack of a better
15 word, so that there's no illegal activity
16 going on in there; is that correct?

17 MR. TODD OLDS: Yes, sir. Absolutely.

18 MR. JAMES SINEATH: You're going to vet
19 people when they come in, I guess?

20 MR. TODD OLDS: We vet them; we screen
21 them; we have a very stringent lease policy.
22 We just -- you know, we do not discriminate.
23 We follow Fair Housing laws. But the point
24 is, you have to conform to the rules or you
25 don't stay in the park.

1 We have a plan already. The plan for
2 the park name is Royle Park Estates. We own
3 Palmetto Park Estates, Creekside Estates and
4 Bonneau Beach Estates. Bonneau Beach Estates
5 is one of our parks that we've had the least 6 amount of input in so it's for sale. We've 7 got an interest to sell; someone has an
8 interest to purchase it.

9 So we're sort of looking at
10 transitioning from that to this and being in 11 closer proximity. As to policing, I will 12 definitely -- I will work very diligently with 13 the sheriff's department. We will give them
14 total access and authority at all times to 15 enter the premises. So we want good, quality
16 parks, and we want to provide affordable
17 housing.

18 MR. JAMES SINEATH: Thank you.

19 MR. TODD OLDS: Thank you.

20 CHAIRMAN: Is there anyone that -- do we
21 have any more questions for the applicant?

22 BOARD MEMBER: No. You have some 23 opposition.

24 CHAIRMAN: Wait just a minute.

25 Sir, state your name.

1 MR. WADE ARNETT: Bear with me, if you
2 will. Wade Arnett. I live at 731 Royle Road,
3 adjacent to this property. I am not against
4 mobile homes. I've inspected mobile homes
5 for -- (inaudible) -- space after I retired as 6 coroner. I am concerned -- and I am not
7 against mobile homes at all. I live in one
8 next door. But pride in mobile homes means a
9 lot. And there's a lot of mobile homes in 10 this territory out there now -- I think
11 there's an overabundance of them.

12 I don't know -- and I was trying to 13 listen to you, and I'm sorry, I'm a little
14 hard of hearing. How many units did you say
15 you were going to have out there?

16 MR. TODD OLDS: We would have no more
17 than 22. I think it would only allow 24.

18 MR. WADE ARNETT: This place is not big
19 enough. And I think you gentlemen and ladies
20 are going to make this decision, but this is a
21 small area there. They're going to have to 22 build another road I think to go into that
23 park, unless you use the one my son-in-law
24 uses to go to the machine shop back there.

25 MR. TODD OLDS: If I may, Mr. Arnett.

1 MR. WADE ARNETT: Sure.

2 MR. TODD OLDS: We're not here to do
3 outside the scope of what is legally allowed
4 or what the ordinance permits. If we can only
5 get 16 and that's what it permits, that's what
6 we're looking for. You know, I don't have a
7 problem, and I understand and appreciate green
8 space accessibility, ingress, egress. But 9 apparently this property has already been
10 approved for the R-3 status with -- and has 11 the easement -- or the adjacent property has 12 an R-3 status.

13 So with respect to Mr. Arnett, and
14 there's no dispute of it, there are -- and I
15 qualified that in the beginning of my
16 conversation with you guys. There are
17 existing parks around here. But, Mr. Arnett,
18 I think you've known me for years from 19 Berkeley County. I'm -- I'm not wanting to 20 sit here and boast and I'm not looking for 21 pats on the back, but when we do something or 22 I do something, I do it right.

23 MR. WADE ARNETT: I've known you a long
24 time.

25 MR. TODD OLDS: I -- it's an investment,

1 and it's an investment for my future and for
2 my retirement. It's not something I'm looking
3 at, and I don't have it on the radar in any
4 near future plan to go in and take this
5 property, upfit it and sell it. That's not my
6 plan. I could have sold my park several times
7 over that I already own, but it's not my plan.
8 It's my source of income. I have children; I
9 have one fixin' to go to college.

10 So this is all me. And to you, Mr.
11 Sineath, I am actually the property manager.
12 I'm a licensed real estate agent in South
13 Carolina. I do all the property management.
14 I do all the leases. Mobile homes do have a
15 negative connotation or -- not -- not such a
16 good appeal to some people. But the pride
17 that Mr. Arnett made a comment about -- the 18 pride is taken from me, the owner. That's why
19 we want control. We don't want to allev- --
20 it's more of a problem having people renting
21 your lot and then trying to enforce them to 22 fix the roof, fix the window, or the blinds
23 are dishambled (sic) in the window. You know,
24 you've got three blinds that don't look right
25 and three -- or is dishambled because the kids

1 letting their children play in Royle Road.
2 But the park will be adequate enough. You've
3 got to figure, the present ordinances allow
4 and call for 4,000 square feet minimum for a
5 mobile home. Well, that's a 40-by-100-foot
6 lot.

7 So each person occupying a home will
8 have that amount of space. And with their
9 neighbor, if they're common good neighbors,
10 they would be sharing. So if there's anybody
11 in that road, I can't be responsible for that,
12 like nobody else can.

13 MR. WADE ARNETT: (Inaudible) -- get
14 them out.

15 MR. TODD OLDS: Right. But a good
16 point. And I just -- as to the access, the 17 size, you know, we don't like the parking to 18 be so restricted and limited to where people
19 are backing into one another or they're going
20 to hit our home. So we look at standard 18-,
21 20-foot-wide driveways to allow two cars. We
22 try to put a restriction on it and tell them
23 that we don't want any more than two to three 24 cars at the home. And if they have that, they 25 have to pull it in -- further into the yard

1 and not park on the street so we will not have
2 street obstruction.

3 MR. WADE ARNETT: Okay. Now -- right
4 now there's two mobile homes on that lot. Am
5 I correct on that?

6 I wish you could see this, ladies and
7 gentlemen, this place out there. It's not a
8 bad place, but it is not large enough for a
9 big mobile home park. And I can tell you, as 10 the former commissioner -- just got off of the 11 human affairs, if people come in there with 12 five or six children, I don't know how you're 13 going to restrict that.

14 MR. TODD OLDS: I'm sorry?

15 MR. WADE ARNETT: How are you going to 16 restrict how many children they have in there,
17 playing in there? They're going to be playing
18 out there, and they're going to be there. I
19 just don't believe this place is adequate and 20 suitable for more children in that road that 21 are going to be out there.

22 MR. TODD OLDS: I hear him loud and
23 clear. Again, I can't control that, and I
24 can't get into that. That would put me in a
25 situation of housing discrimination and things

1 of that nature. And I don't think the body
2 nor myself wants to go that route.

3 MR. WADE ARNETT: Well, I know you can't
4 control that unless -- I don't know how you're
5 going to say you're going to allow three
6 children or two children, whatever.

7 MR. TODD OLDS: There is a law called
8 the Keating rule that actually allows you to 9 -- if you have two rooms in a home, you can't 10 have seven or eight people in the home. But
11 you have to use reasonable judgment under Fair
12 Housing laws as to what, you know -- if you
13 have a family with a husband and wife and they 14 have three children and they want to rent a
15 two-room house, is it reasonable --
16 reasonableness comes into play whenever you
17 look at your trailer, look at the size of the 18 trailer; and if you have a 10-by-10 room, it's 19 not reasonable to have three to four children
20 sleeping in one room.

21 The Keating rule normally calls for two 22 persons per room. So there are ways and 23 mechanisms that we can control, and we do do
24 it now in our other parks, because we have 25 multiple people wanting to come in and rent

1 them.

2 MR. WADE ARNETT: I do want you to
3 consider this: If you live in a mobile home
4 or any unit, you're going to have one or two
5 cars. Where are they going to park? I want
6 you to think about that. I wish you could
7 drive out there and look at this location.
8 It's not bad. I live next door. We've got 9 probably lots of acreage next door, and
10 there's a big machine shop going in there.
11 These big trucks are coming and going at all
12 times. That is a private driveway.

13 But I wish you could see that. And this 14 is why I'm concerned about more kids going in 15 there. All right. If he's going to put up a 16 big fence, how are you going to keep those 17 kids from being in that road? As the former 18 coroner of this county, that's what I'm 19 concerned about. And I just do not think this 20 place is an adequate place or otherwise to 21 have any more mobile homes out there. And I
22 thank you very much.

23 CHAIRMAN: Thank you. Thank you.

24 State your name and --

25 MR. FRANCIS O. GIBSON: My name is

1 Francis O. Gibson. I live at 1067 Royle Road,
2 Ladson, South Carolina, right down the street
3 from this property. Most of the people that
4 know me call me Donald. I've got a letter,
5 and the reason I write the letter is I don't
6 want to get up here and stumble all over
7 myself.

8 This is to the Berkeley County Office of 9 the Planning and Zoning Commission from 10 Francis O. Gibson, residence 1076 Royle Road,
11 Ladson, South Carolina, subject rezoning
12 request TMS No. 233-09-02- 046. And you have 13 a copy of the letter.

14 You notice that since 2002 we've been
15 coming up here, and it has all the references
16 of the TMS's that we came up here for. The 17 subject rezoning request is seeking to change
18 the zoning from R-2, manufactured residential
19 status, to R-3, mobile home park.

20 This type of rezoning in Council
21 District 4 has been previously requested in
22 the Pine Vista area. The zoning change
23 request located on this TMS number is close
24 and adjacent to the previous property's
25 request presented to this Planning Commission.

1 The referenced TMS numbers and dates were all
2 denied by this committee.

3 In the past, we have provided signed
4 petitions by the homeowners in the Pine Vista
5 area stating the concerns of adding any
6 additional mobile home parks to an area that 7 is already overly saturated with the now-many
8 existing mobile home parks. And today a lot
9 of the people are here representing this fact.

10 The area in question now has drug
11 problems, increased traffic, too many children
12 but no playgrounds, theft and crime increase,
13 requiring much increase in additional fire and 14 police department coverage, and will add to 15 the already too many transient renters now
16 located in our area.

17 A correct denial precedent was made by 18 this Planning and Zoning Commission to not 19 allow any additional mobile home parks for 20 this small community in the Pine Vista area
21 located in Ladson. All denials were issued on 22 the above references. I respectfully ask that 23 this rezoning request follow those already-set
24 precedents and this request also be denied.

25 And, again, I thank you for your time

1 and opportunity at being heard, Francis
2 Gibson.

3 CHAIRMAN: Thank you, sir. I'll allow
4 one more in opposition, and then we're going
5 to call for a motion.

6 MS. SUSAN YOEH: Can I please ask the
7 gentleman a question? And I am in opposition,
8 but I just want to ask him a question.

9 CHAIRMAN: Okay. You'll be the last
10 spokesperson for the opposition.

11 Very good. Thank you, sir.

12 Thank you, ladies and gentleman.

13 UNKNOWN PERSON: I own property next
14 door to it, so I want to say something.

15 UNKNOWN PERSON: I have property right
16 across the street and so I'd like to say
17 something.

18 CHAIRMAN: Just limit the time to one or 19 two minutes, something like that.

20 MS. SUSAN YOEH: Hi, I'm Susan Yoeh. I
21 reside at 385 Frankie Lane in Ladson on Pine
22 Vista area. I just have a question for the 23 gentleman. He said he also owned property off
24 of Stall Road in North Charleston. I was 25 wondering if he would provide us with the name

1 of that property on Stall Road. What was the
2 name of the property that you said that you
3 owned on Stall Road?

4 MR. TODD OLDS: Palmetto Park Estates.

5 MS. SUSAN YOEH: And how long have you
6 owned that?

7 MR. TODD OLDS: Since September of 2014.

8 MS. SUSAN YOEH: Okay. So I work in
9 North Charleston. Is the trailer park you're
10 proposing now -- is that going to be anything
11 near what that one is over there?

12 MR. TODD OLDS: Well, when you're
13 referring to what that one is over there, what
14 are you referring to specifically?

15 MS. SUSAN YOEH: Okay. Well, I heard
16 the requirements you said you were going to 17 have for the potential here. I know that area
18 of Stall well. I know that particular trailer
19 park. I have to go that way all the time. If 20 it's going to be in comparison to that, sir --

21 MR. TODD OLDS: Well, I think you're
22 making statements that may be out of character
23 here. Because what is it you know about this 24 park? Because you have seven parks over
25 there.

1 MS. SUSAN YOEH: Appearance sake, sir.

2 MR. TODD OLDS: Oh, good.

3 MS. SUSAN YOEH: Yes, sir.

4 MR. TODD OLDS: Apparently we're talking
5 two different parks. But I'm not here to 6 debate that with them.

7 UNKNOWN PERSON: Yeah, we don't need to
8 get into a debate.

9 MS. SUSAN YOEH: That's all I wanted to 10 say. Thank you. I appreciate it.

11 CHAIRMAN: Thank you, ma'am.

12 And I'll allow you a minute and a half
13 and the gentleman --

14 JAMES JACKSON: I'm James Jackson. I
15 live at 769 Royle Road, right next door to the 16 property there. I used to lease that property
17 for 18 years to keep trailers from coming in 18 there. My house is about 20 foot from that
19 line of property there, and I don't want
20 lights or trailers or anything. I've even got 21 a swimming pool in my backyard that I don't
22 want nobody to mess with. If kids come across
23 the fence, they'd be in my pool, and there's a
24 liability problem right there.

25 And that's why I say, I've been in that

1 area 50 years. If I could have kept these
2 trailers when they first started in there,
3 which wasn't allowed back then, there wouldn't
4 be no more in there right now.

5 BOARD MEMBER: Thank you.

6 MR. JAMES JACKSON: Thank you.

7 MS. ANN JACKSON: My name is Ann
8 Jackson. I live at 679 Royle Road. Our fence
9 separates our yard from this trailer park. I
10 have a picture that shows my house that is 11 directly adjacent to this park. And we have 12 had problems with kids coming across our
13 fence, partying in our pontoon boat, doing
14 whatever they want in our yard. And I do not 15 want to see -- we have lived there for -- the 16 two of us have lived there for 50 years. I
17 lived there before that. I do not want to see
18 another trailer park, and I do not want to see 19 one right beside of me. And I would like to 20 see it denied.

21 CHAIRMAN: Thank you, ma'am.

22 MS. ANN JACKSON: Do you want to see the 23 pictures?

24 CHAIRMAN: Yeah, you can pass them --
25 pass them down.

1 Sir?

2 MR. RAYMOND HEADDEN: I'm Raymond
3 Headden. I live at 760 Royle Road, Ladson. I
4 live right across the street from where this
5 trailer park is being talked about, and I've
6 been living there since 1982. Could you go
7 back to the picture prior to this one? Yeah.
8 Okay. That's it right there. If you look on 9 the right-hand side at the house over there,
10 that's my house. And I've had my house
11 appraised. And because of so many mobile home
12 parks, if you want to call them parks, my 13 house will not appraise for what it's really 14 worth, and it's not going to improve my 15 situation whatsoever.

16 And I am really against another mobile
17 home park coming in there. And I have seen so
18 many things go on with the one right next door
19 to me, where I've had to go to many court
20 cases for animals that were abused, animals
21 left, um, unattended that come over to my
22 property. There is no restriction on how well
23 they keep these homes up.

24 And, you know, I hate to stereotype, but 25 it is what it is, and we've got problems with

1 brought home to that.

2 MR. RAYMOND HEADDEN: From the hospital

3 --

4 MRS. HEADDEN: From the Summerville
5 Hospital. And we have not had anything but
6 problems with the trailer parks that is there
7 at Royle Road and Frankie Lane and Sally
8 Avenue. And I really hope that you all will 9 consider the people that has been there for so
10 many years before these trailer parks even
11 come. And that was the worst thing that ever
12 happened to Pine Vista, to Royle Road now, is 13 all of these trailer parks.

14 And if you all had to live beside the 15 one that I live beside and across from the one
16 that this gentleman is talking about, you
17 wouldn't want to see another trailer pulled in 18 anywhere. Because we see Berkeley County --
19 it's on a daily thing. We smell meth being 20 cooked. My husband was a fireman for 21 30-something years.

22 MR. RAYMOND HEADDEN: I am trained in
23 clandestine drug labs, so I know what it
24 smells like. The smell of --

25 MRS. HEADDEN: So I'm asking you to

1 close?

2 CHAIRMAN: I'll give you a minute.

3 MR. TODD OLDS: Thank you, sir.

4 With all respect to the community and
5 their concerns, you know, I feel like I'm
6 being tainted here. I respect what they feel
7 about mobile homes and parks. I am a person
8 who bought one and who had revitalized it.
9 There is such a thing as affordable housing,
10 and we're here tonight before the body, and I
11 think the comprehensive plan permits it. I
12 think it's conducive. I think it's the most 13 appropriate thing to do to bring it all into 14 legal conformity. And I can assure this body
15 and this body of concerned citizens here
16 tonight that I would sit down willingly with 17 each one of you. And your property concerns,
18 your property values, whether you think it's a
19 sale or not, you would respect the fact that I
20 took the property over.

21 And one note to mention, I have the 22 property under contract. A portion of it is 23 already zoned R-3, so I can put 14 homes there
24 per the ordinance. If we're limited to that,
25 then that's what we'll go with. But I do

1 Carolina State constable, and I work with the
2 sheriff's office and I'm familiar with what
3 these folks are saying about that area. And
4 that's the only thing I know about that area,
5 is the bad things that I see. And I don't
6 know how that can be controlled. I don't know
7 that you can have any control over it. I
8 don't know that you all can have any control
9 over it. But if the children are creating 10 problems or if there are problems that are 11 created because the children are there, if the 12 children need something, why don't you all get
13 together as a community and try to build a
14 playground, try to get something in that area
15 that will keep these kids off the street, keep 16 them out of Royle Road?

17 I mean, I don't know what to tell you.
18 I don't know -- we can't do anything -- this 19 commission can't do anything about it. But 20 just my conscience tells me that I had to say
21 something about that. And if that's what you
22 all are really concerned about, then do
23 something about it. That's what I have to 24 say.

25 UNKNOWN PERSON: That's just one of the

1 things. It's the traffic, the drugs, and
2 there's no place to build. Everything is
3 built up. The trailers --

4 BOARD MEMBER: I understand.

5 UNKNOWN PERSON: Anybody can park on
6 that road. There's a school right down the 7 road there; they've got a playground. The 8 kids can go down there and they can play down
9 there.

10 (Inaudible conversations.)

11 BOARD MEMBER: Well, the only thing I
12 heard was that kids were playing; they come
13 into you all's yard and get into your swimming
14 pool and all that sort of thing. So, you 15 know, maybe there's something you can do to 16 control that. I don't know.

17 (Inaudible conversation.)

18 BOARD MEMBER: Well, that's true. And 19 nobody here has control over that except if 20 you have any parents in here.

21 CHAIRMAN: Do I hear a motion?

22 LYNN HOOVER: Mr. Chairman, I move to 23 deny.

24 CHAIRMAN: Do I hear a second?

25 BOARD MEMBER: Second --

1 CHAIRMAN: We've got a motion to deny.

2 All in favor of denial?

3 (Answers of "aye.")

4 Motion is denied. Sir?

5 MR. TODD OLDS: So, Mr. Chairman, it's
6 denied in spite of the ordinance calling for 7 its appropriate zoning?

8 CHAIRMAN: It's denied.

9 MR. TODD OLDS: Thank you, sir.

10 CHAIRMAN: But this is only a
11 recommendation to county council.

12 MR. TODD OLDS: Yes, sir. Thank you.

1 LAND USE AND ECONOMIC DEVELOPMENT

2 COMMITTEE MEETING, MARCH 13, 2017:

3 CHAIRMAN: Motion carries. Next is
4 consideration prior to first reading, and an
5 ordinance to modify the official zoning and
6 development standards map of Berkeley County,
7 South Carolina, in regard to Bonnel W. Meese
8 for 1.29 acres on a lot indicated with TMS
9 No --

10 UNKNOWN PERSON: Move for approval.

11 CHAIRMAN: -- 233-09-02-046 located on
12 Royle Road near Farmington Road/I-26 from R-2
13 to R-3 district in Council District No. 4.

14 MR. TOMMY NEWELL: Mr. Chairman --

15 CHAIRMAN: Councilman Newell?

16 MR. TOMMY NEWELL: I think myself being 17 the councilman for that district, I should 18 have the right to say approval or denial.

19 MR. JOSH WHITLEY: Where is that in the 20 council rules?

21 MR. STEVE DAVIS: It's newly adopted.

22 CHAIRMAN: It's kind of an understood
23 thing.

24 Councilman Davis --

25 MR. STEVE DAVIS: I'll withdraw it.

1 CHAIRMAN: Thank you, sir. If I can
2 have a motion in a second, we'll have a
3 discussion.

4 BOARD MEMBER: Motion for denial.

5 BOARD MEMBER: Second.

6 CHAIRMAN: All right. We have a motion
7 and a second.

8 Ms. Simmons?

9 MS. ALISON SIMMONS: Great. Thank you,
10 Mr. Chairman. The applicant is requesting to 11 rezone in order to conform and combine with an 12 adjacent 1.2 acre R-3 Zoned parcel. Upon
13 combination, the minimum lot size requirement
14 for R-3 zoning would be met.

15 The subject property is contained in the 16 Future Land Use Plan recommendation of 17 low-density suburban, which seeks to include
18 diverse housing choices and will act as a
19 transition from the constrained growth areas
20 to higher density residential and commercial
21 areas based on adjacent zoning and adjacent
22 uses zones in the comp plan recommendation,
23 staff recommended approval. However, the 24 Planning Commission recommended -- recommended
25 denial in a unanimous vote.

1 After reviewing the requested change and
2 hearing from many community stakeholders in
3 opposition to the request, the Planning
4 Commission found the request incompatible and
5 potentially detrimental in the context of the 6 community concern.

7 Members of the community present
8 verbalized concerns regarding traffic,
9 saturation of mobile home parks in the area
10 and diminution of property values and quality
11 of life. Also a petition from stakeholders
12 was included in your agenda packet.

13 CHAIRMAN: Thank you, ma'am.

14 Do we have any other discussion? We 15 have a motion for denial.

16 MR. JOSHUA WHITLEY: Mr. Chairman?

17 CHAIRMAN: Councilman Whitley.

18 MR. JOSHUA WHITLEY: Is the planning
19 commission's decision articulated within the 20 standards that would protect us from a legal 21 standpoint?

22 MS. ALISON SIMMONS: I do. I think so.
23 The reason is, is because, in my opinion, the 24 best gauge of compatibility is public input.
25 While the requested change is supported by the

1 comprehensive plan, the existing zoning is as
2 well.

3 MR. JOSHUA WHITLEY: Well, part of this
4 parcel already allows -- I guess both parcels
5 allow mobile homes. This would only change
6 one to be in conformance. One is currently
7 grandfathered in; is that correct?

8 MS. ALISON SIMMONS: Um, the adjacent
9 parcel is currently zoned R-3, so it
10 supports --

11 MR. JOSHUA WHITLEY: Mobile homes? It
12 supports the request?

13 MS. ALISON SIMMONS: Right. So the 14 adjacent parcel supports a mobile home park.

15 MR. STEVE DAVIS: Maintaining mobile
16 homes?

17 MS. ALISON SIMMONS: The adjacent parcel
18 is grandfathered.

19 MR. JOSHUA WHITLEY: So either way the 20 process against the mobile homes doesn't hold
21 water because it has mobile homes and it's
22 grandfathered in for mobile homes?

23 MS. ALISON SIMMONS: Right. There's
24 currently only two mobile homes on the subject
25 parcel.

1 MR. JOSHUA WHITLEY: So what would be
2 the impact if this was resumed?

3 MS. ALISON SIMMONS: Um, then they would
4 be able to provide additional homes in
5 accordance with the requirements of R-3
6 zoning.

7 MR. JOSHUA WHITLEY: So you're talking
8 about five, six --

9 MS. ALISON SIMMONS: Up to 27.

10 MR. JOSHUA WHITLEY: On that one piece?

11 MS. ALISON SIMMONS: On both parcels,
12 upon combination.

13 MR. JOSHUA WHITLEY: I get you. But on 14 the one piece it's already allowed, that's
15 certainly a part of the 27.

16 MS. ALISON SIMMONS: Right. Thirteen
17 mobile homes are allowed on that lot. If the 18 parcel is rezoned, 14 would be allowed on the 19 subject parcel.

20 MR. JOSHUA WHITLEY: So it could be --
21 the change would be from two to 14?

22 MS. ALISON SIMMONS: Right.

23 MR. KEVIN COX: Mr. Chairman?

24 CHAIRMAN: Councilman Cox?

25 MR. KEVIN COX: The grandfathered in

1 part, the reason for that is county council
2 has decided that it's not the appropriate
3 zonings for that area. So as mobile homes are 4 pulled out, they are no longer allowed to
5 bring additional mobile homes in, correct?

6 MS. ALISON SIMMONS: If a mobile home is 7 removed from the subject parcel for a period
8 longer than six months, it can't be brought
9 back.

10 MR. KEVIN COX: The same mobile home or 11 any mobile home?

12 MS. ALISON SIMMONS: Any mobile home.

13 MR. STEVE DAVIS: But can there be an 14 increase from two to more mobile homes under 15 the grandfather clause provision?

16 MS. ALISON SIMMONS: For the subject
17 parcel? No, sir.

18 MR. STEVE DAVIS: So it's always limited
19 to two or extension, complete removal?

20 MS. ALISON SIMMONS: That's correct.

21 MR. JOSHUA WHITLEY: But the difference
22 at the end of the day, approval you get 27
23 mobile homes; denied, you get 15?

24 MS. ALISON SIMMONS: Yes, that is 25 correct.

1 CHAIRMAN: Any other discussion?

2 Hearing -- do I have a motion and a
3 second to deny this request? All in favor of 4 the denial?

5 (Answers of "aye.")

6 CHAIRMAN: Opposed?

7 (Answers of "nay.")

8 CHAIRMAN: I have one nay?

9 UNKNOWN PERSON: No. Two nays.

10 CHAIRMAN: Two nays. Excuse me. The 11 motion carries for denial.

1 Road. Some compelling facts I wish to present
2 to you tonight: One is, if you base your
3 decision tonight on the majority of the people
4 who are opposed to this, I'll probably go home
5 a loser.

6 If you base it on the facts of the law,
7 the area, its character and what is in the
8 vicinity of Royle Road, then I should walk out
9 with approval.

10 Let me present to you the compelling
11 facts. One and most importantly, I think, is 12 the planning director of this county has made
13 the recommendation for approval. Two is that 14 the South Carolina -- or the Berkeley County
15 Land Use Plan and Comprehensive Plan totally 16 supports this requested rezoning.

17 This rezoning request is harmonious in
18 its entirety. The entire road -- Royle Road,
19 out of 66 parcels -- what you see before you
20 on the GIS map that I've pulled, out of 66
21 parcels that abut Royle Road, 42 of them have 22 a mobile home or either multiple mobile homes.

23 The property that I'm asking to be 24 rezoned presently has two mobile homes. The 25 adjacent property that I have beside it has

1 approval already for a total of 13 mobiles
2 homes.

3 The actual residents, as I've said,
4 support it. The request that I'm asking for
5 it to be approved does not negate in any way
6 or create a negative character to the 7 district, to the community or to the existing
8 development of this area.

9 You will hear consistently tonight about
10 drugs, about people in the street, about 11 traffic. My friends, that's subjective and 12 arbitrary. There is nothing factual that can 13 be presented to you to show or demonstrate
14 that any property values have been decreased
15 based on mobile homes. This is a mobile home
16 area; it's a mobile home community. It's an 17 affordable living area. We're only asking for 18 a rezoning based on those facts and based on 19 the facts of what your own website says in 20 bold print, that the future Land Use and 21 Comprehensive Plan is a, quote, strong -- your 22 website says "strong" guide for decisionmaking
23 rezoning requests.

24 Therefore, we're asking that you do this
25 based on the law, the comp plan, your planning

1 director's recommendation, not on anyone's
2 subjective reasons, not being substantial, not
3 being factual and not being supported.

4 The residents who are in opposition to
5 this, their opposition is somewhat like
6 wanting to cast disparate and discriminate
7 treatment to others, against mobile home
8 people. Let me tell you, we all know, drugs
9 occur in single-family homes, they occur in 10 single-family residences. Traffic is in 11 there, meth labs are in there. You cannot and 12 should not base your decision based on what
13 you will hear from the public outcry tonight.

14 I respectfully ask you, uphold the law,
15 uphold the comp plan, and uphold your planning
16 director's rezoning recommendation.

17 Lastly, planning commissions do not
18 always get it right. They solely base their 19 decision on subjective arbitrary reasoning.
20 Thank you for your time. I appreciate your 21 support.

22 BOARD MEMBER: Mr. Raymond Headden?

23 MR. RAYMOND HEADDEN: Good evening. My
24 name is Raymond Headden. I live at 760 Royle
25 Road, Ladson, 29456. I'm standing opposed to

1 the property TMS 233-09-02-046 being changed
2 from the present zone status of R-2 to R-3
3 because I noticed that he said -- Mr. Olds
4 said that he had an aerial view. Well, I've 5 got several ground level views I would like to 6 pass out.

7 In a couple of those you will see that
8 it is high traffic on this road at certain
9 times of the day. I also have additional 10 pictures and videos, but I think that this
11 will suffice.

12 There are 13 trailer parks presently on
13 Royle Road that I personally counted from I-26
14 overpass northeast to Highway 17-A. There are 15 trailer parks on Royle Road southwest of I-26
16 overpass; then Frankie Lane, which is the very
17 next road behind Royle Road, which I haven't 18 even got to that yet to find out how many
19 trailer parks that they have in there.

20 And, yes, all of this is within walking
21 distance. So it affects everyone that we're
22 talking about here. There have been 11
23 applications denied since as far back as April
24 of 2002, yet here we have another of the same
25 type application trying to be passed.

1 After completing a short time survey,
2 there has been a count of approximately 13
3 trailer parks along with parcels consisting of 4 two to four trailers parked on them. A total
5 count was done showing an amount of
6 approximately 316 trailers off of Royle Road
7 from 17-A to Highway 78.

8 The next thing that I'm concerned about 9 is where I live, which is directly in front of 10 this property that he's talking about. And,
11 yes, I can say that I have put my house up for 12 sale twice and was told by the real estate
13 agent that because of the trailers next door
14 and around in my area, that the value of my 15 real estate, I could not get what it would
16 really be worth because it's depreciated.

17 And crime in the area -- well, you
18 better believe I'm going to talk about the 19 crime in the area. And I'm sure that all of 20 you council members are aware of the crime
21 issue. And sometimes there is -- I have 22 awakened early in the morning and I have had 23 suspicious people sitting in my driveway.
24 I've witnessed a large amount of consistent --
25 or constant traffic coming and going, which is

1 a common red flag to predict high drug
2 trafficking. Sometimes there are cars, vans,
3 trucks and mopeds that frequent the same
4 trailers as many as 10 to 12 times within an
5 approximate three-hour period, unusual strange
6 vehicles up and down the driveways and dirt
7 roads as -- in search for a specific trailer.

8 The next thing on the agenda was 9 regulations. What regulations? The 10 appearance of the homes are falling apart,
11 skirting missing, pieces or all of it; old
12 vehicles left parked in the yards without 13 license plates on them. Everything just left
14 out in the open for all to see, no privacy
15 fencing requirements.

16 Most of all is the safety factor. This
17 is a two-lane road only from start to finish,
18 which means all traffic has no alternate means
19 of travel. I have witnessed, just within the 20 last year, a boy from one of the trailers on 21 the same tract of land that is in question --

22 CHAIRMAN: Mr. Headden, if you have --
23 your four minutes are expired. Please wrap it
24 up. Okay?

25 MR. RAYMOND HEADDEN: And he was hit.

1 BOARD MEMBER: How long have you been
2 living in this area here?

3 MR. RAYMOND HEADDEN: I've been
4 living -- I got married in '72. I lived there
5 for about four years. I moved into
6 Summerville for three years and moved back.
7 I've been there absolutely since 1982 until 8 the present time.

9 BOARD MEMBER: This group has been there
10 a good long time and seen a lot of changes in 11 that area. The next question is, my concern
12 is about traffic --

13 MR. RAYMOND HEADDEN: Yes, sir.

14 BOARD MEMBER: -- safety and children.
15 And are there a lot of young kids in that area
16 out there also?

17 MR. RAYMOND HEADDEN: Yes, sir.

18 BOARD MEMBER: So that's a big concern
19 right there.

20 MR. RAYMOND HEADDEN: What I was
21 speaking of, on the same tract of land that 22 we're talking about tonight --

23 BOARD MEMBER: Correct.

24 MR. RAYMOND HEADDEN: -- one of the kids
25 that was a resident from that particular place

1 was hit by a vehicle. I was outside the day
2 that it happened. And he was hit by a mirror.
3 I've had people go -- run into my yard and
4 tear up my azalea bushes and stuff, a two-lane
5 highway. And we've got traffic that -- from 6 the four-way stop to my house is probably 800
7 yards roughly, and it backs up every day. And
8 I've got a video standing on my front porch
9 where they're stopped in the road waiting to 10 get through.

11 BOARD MEMBER: Correct. Yes, sir.
12 Thank you.

13 MR. RAYMOND HEADDEN: We just have a
14 major problem. Thank you.

15 BOARD MEMBER: Thank you.

16 CHAIRMAN: Thank you, sir. James
17 Jackson?

18 BOARD MEMBER: Good to see you, James.

19 MR. JAMES JACKSON: Yeah, good
20 evening -- (inaudible).

21 Good evening, Council. I just want to 22 present -- my names is James E. Jackson. I
23 live at 769 Royle Road. I'm adjacent to the 24 property that's been in question here. I've 25 been there for 51 years. I even leased that

1 property one time from the gentleman that
2 owned it for 18 years to keep from trailers
3 coming in there. That property around
4 there -- as a gentleman come into some money
5 and bought a lot of land around there and
6 started all these trailer parks, if there's
7 something we could have done back 55 or 45
8 years ago, we could have done it then. But 9 there was no planning commissions or anything.

10 The people wanted to do what they wanted
11 to. Most of these parcels of land on this 12 road are around 3 acres in size. And we
13 bought these properties out there 50 years ago
14 that we wanted the country style living. But 15 the community around there in the southern
16 part of Berkeley County has grown
17 tremendously.

18 The Summerville area right there where
19 we live and everything is going wild.
20 Subdivisions down the road there from us is 21 going -- they've still got more houses to put
22 in down there. That's why I say the traffic
23 and everything around there, around Sangaree
24 school, you can't get by there in the 25 afternoons or in the mornings for people

1 dropping or picking up kids there. They even
2 park in the highway. You've got to sit there
3 and wait for them to get through before you
4 can get through that section down around the
5 school. So you all need to come around there
6 in the afternoons and see what kind of traffic
7 we've got on that road. And I thank you for 8 this.

9 CHAIRMAN: Thank you.

10 Ms. Francis Gibson -- Mr. Francis
11 Gibson. Okay. Thank you.

12 MR. FRANCIS GIBSON: Thank you. My name
13 is Francis Gibson. I live at 1067 Royle Road, 14 Ladson, South Carolina. What our
15 representatives failed to mention a while ago,
16 we have nine pages of people that have signed
17 petitions against this trailer park. You
18 know, I've been coming up here since 2002.
19 I've been living there since 1978. I have 20 seen that area turn from acreage to trailers.
21 We don't need any more trailers. You know,
22 all this traffic and, you know, the children
23 problems, I've been coming up here -- I've got 24 all the TMS's listed. I gave them to my 25 councilman. He's got them, and they've got

1 the dates listed. They started in 2002 when I
2 started coming up here. And all I did every 3 time was just listed another TMS. And every 4 time we've come up here it's been unanimous to 5 the planning board to turn this down.

6 And basically, the precedent has been
7 set all those times. And, you know, there's 8 one common thing that I can tell you guys
9 about. Every person that comes up here that 10 wants to put trailers in our area, they don't 11 live there. They live in North Charleston or 12 West of the Ashley or somewhere. You know,
13 they don't live up there where we live, where 14 we have to put up with the trailers and the 15 people.

16 So I just want you guys to keep in mind
17 that -- about them coming ever since 2002, and 18 there's 12 TMS's that you guys have shot down
19 about trailers, that we don't need any more in 20 the Pine Vista area. Thank you, sir.

21 CHAIRMAN: Thank you.

22 BOARD MEMBER: Thank you.

23 CHAIRMAN: Auvo Kempinen.

24 (The following is deleted from 25 transcription due to agreement of counsel.)

1 BOARD MEMBER: Yes, Mr. Chairman, the
2 committee on Land Use Development and Economic
3 Development met on March the 13th, 2017, and 4 earlier this evening, on recommendation of the 5 committee, I move to deny an ordinance to
6 modify the Official Zoning and Development
7 Standards Map of Berkeley County, South
8 Carolina, in regard to Bonnell W. Meese for 9 1.29 acres on a lot indicated with TMS No.
10 233-09-02-046, located on Royle Road near
11 Farmington Road/I-26; from R-2, manufactured
12 residential district to R-3, mobile home
13 district, in County Council District 4.

14 CHAIRMAN: I have a motion to deny. Is 15 there any discussion?

16 MR. STEVE DAVIS: Yeah, Mr. Chairman.

17 CHAIRMAN: Mr. Davis?

18 MR. STEVE DAVIS: Yes. I -- this is the 19 one -- (inaudible), right?

20 CHAIRMAN: That's correct.

21 MR. STEVE DAVIS: I just want these fine
22 citizens to know that I hear you. Um, some 35
23 years ago my wife and I, we moved back home
24 and thank God for a mobile home. We bought a
25 mobile home out of Columbia, and we had

1 someone move it to our community. And, um, we
2 were in a different socioeconomic level at
3 that time. And thanks be to God that we were
4 able to live in a mobile home at that time.

5 And, um, I know some fine and decent
6 folks -- and every one of you all here appear
7 to be fine and decent folks.

8 (Inaudible comment from audience.)

9 MR. STEVE DAVIS: Yeah, yeah. And I
10 just want you to know that eventually change
11 is going to come, I want you to know. I --
12 I'm always leery of when the Planning
13 Commission makes a decision and when staff
14 makes a decision. And -- and I've always been 15 guided by those principles, to be honest with 16 you.

17 Sir, if you've been coming here from 18 2002, then you've heard the spiel over and 19 over since 2002. Because, um, there's no
20 question that it fits within our Comprehensive
21 Zoning Plan that we passed. Um,
22 unfortunately, you fine citizens find
23 yourselves trapped in the dilemmas of it.

24 I try to be an individual that keeps my 25 word. You know, I told Mr. Olds that I would

1 support it because it fits the overall
2 Comprehensive Zoning Plan, and I just wanted
3 you all folks to understand that I've
4 consistently followed this pattern. Changes
5 are hard stuff. It's difficult. And you all
6 don't deserve all the things happening out
7 there. But at the same time, the 8 Comprehensive Zoning Plan was put in place for 9 a specific reason. And maybe that's the 10 lawyer part that comes in, the part that
11 people don't like about lawyers.

12 But for me, this afternoon, I cannot in 13 good conscience vote to defeat. But I'm just 14 one individual.

15 MR. JACK H. SCHURLKNIGHT: Mr. Chairman?

16 CHAIRMAN: Yes, sir, Mr. Schurlknight.

17 MR. JACK H. SCHURLKNIGHT: Yes, sir. I
18 have a lot of concerns about the effects that 19 it's going to have on the individuals that 20 live on Royle Road. You know, you've been 21 there a long time; you've seen a lot. And I'm 22 hearing that -- you know, you all have hosted
23 a lot of development on that road. And it
24 comes to a tipping point to where, you know,
25 you've got a carrying capacity on the road.

1 You've got to look at the safety.

2 And that's the direction that I'm coming
3 from totally. I understand that the Planning
4 Commission denied, the staff recommended, but 5 I think -- excuse me -- council has some 6 leeway in some of this stuff, and I'd like to 7 look at it on a case-by-case basis, as long as 8 we're legal with that and we have that legal 9 aid with it.

10 And I'll ask the attorney -- I don't
11 know if you've had a chance to look at this 12 situation or not, but if you could address the 13 legality of it and if council is within its 14 legal rights.

15 BERKELEY COUNTY ATTORNEY: Yeah, yeah.
16 I've done -- performed some research on the 17 topic, and I believe that council is justified
18 in a vote in either direction.

19 MR. JACK H. SCHURLKNIGHT: Good. Thank
20 you, sir. Um, with that in mind, again, I've 21 been down Royle Road many a times; I've been 22 down Royle Road for the last 40 years. And
23 I've seen a lot of stuff going on over there,
24 all the development in that area. And I feel 25 for you, I really do. And I know -- I'll be

1 remiss to sit here and try to tell you that it
2 doesn't devalue your property, because it
3 does.

4 And, again, I think you all have
5 suffered enough when it comes to development
6 and with you all's -- infringing on you all's
7 quality of life. And it just concerns me,
8 because when the dust has settled, you all are 9 going to be there. You know, the developer is 10 gone. You all will be there, and that causes
11 me great concern.

12 So as chairman of the land use
13 committee, I still totally agree with council
14 on our original recommendation of denial.
15 Thank you.

16 CHAIRMAN: I would like to add that, you
17 know, I don't hear anybody saying mobile homes
18 are a bad thing, because, you know, you live
19 there. Okay? However, I do hear your 20 concerns about traffic and safety of the 21 residents and children and -- you know -- and,
22 you know, obviously with overcrowding comes
23 other issues that require the intervention by 24 the police officers that sit back here, not 25 saying anything bad about anybody. But that's

1 what I've heard tonight. So with that I have
2 a --

3 MR. JOSHUA WHITLEY: Mr. Chairman, may
4 I?

5 CHAIRMAN: Yes, sir, Mr. Whitley.

6 MR. JOSHUA WHITLEY: I was, I think, in
7 the minority voting for approval at first
8 reading, and I would send it at least to 9 second or third reading, not committing to 10 voting for the eventual rezoning. My -- I
11 actually think, you know, I'm hesitant ever to 12 vote for rezoning for a mobile home park
13 unless it fits the character of the area. My 14 understanding of this rezoning is it would 15 actually change very little, maybe seven to 16 ten overall units.

17 So I'm going to vote consistent with how 18 I voted in committee, and I would send it to 19 second reading.

20 CHAIRMAN: All righty. We have a
21 motion. There has been discussion. All in 22 favor of the motion to deny say aye.

23 (Answers for "aye.")

24 CHAIRMAN: Those opposed?

25 (Answers for "nay.")

1 CHAIRMAN: Let the record reflect that
2 Mr. Whitley and Mr. Davis both voted in the
3 negative, and I don't think anyone else did.
4 All right.

5 BOARD MEMBER: Thank you.

6 CHAIRMAN: Thank you.

MR. COOKE: All right. So this is case
-- County of Berkeley case number 2017-CP-08-1088.
Todd Olds, Plaintiff, vs. Berkeley County and 21

MR. COOKE:: I'm Dawes Cookes,
C-O-O-K-E-S [sic.] You got my card there. And am I special circuit judge in this?

22

MR. GOLDSTEIN: Correct.

23

24

MR. COOKE:: Okay. So it's not an arbitration, it's a --

25

MR. GOLDSTEIN: You're a circuit judge.

1 MR. COOKE:: Okay. And who appointed
2 me?

3 MR. WEST: Well, it was -- Circuit
4 Court appointed you. They thought you had a
5 consent order naming you as the special referee and 6 you're appointed --

7 MR. COOKE:: Okay.

8 MR. WEST: -- special referee to enter
9 a final judgment.

10 MR. COOKE:: Right. So just a couple
11 of housekeeping things. Both sides have filed
12 briefs. I've got a petitioner's brief, I've got a
13 respondent's brief, I've got a petitioner's reply
14 brief, and I've got supplemental briefs from both 15 of you addressing the question that I asked. Which 16 is whether the -- the comprehensive plan has force
17 of law, and we'll talk about that as we go.

18 And you've been discussing the exhibits and 19 my understanding is that you'll come up with an
20 agreed set of exhibits and you'll -- you'll have a
21 copy made for each of us including myself and --

22 MR. GOLDSTEIN: That's correct -- from 23 the appellant.

24 MR. COOKE:: And there's a -- there's
25 a --

1 MR. GOLDSTEIN: Yes.

2 MR. COOKE:: -- and one of the exhibits
3 is a DVD which I already have a copy of. So
4 there's no need to give me another one, unless you
5 feel compelled to do that. Let me just make sure
6 this -- yes, looks like it.

7 MR. WEST: And just for the record,
8 Judge, the DVD had been certified by the clerk of 9 the Berkeley County Counsel to be verbatim of 10 excerpts from the video -- videos of the three
11 relevant meetings. One being the planning
12 commission, which was the first meeting; the second
13 meeting of the Berkeley County Land Use Committee;
14 and then the third meeting being that of the county
15 counsel. And that's what that DVD consists of and 16 nothing else.

17 MR. COOKE:: Okay. Good. All right.
18 Well, out of respect for everyone's time and 19 Tommy's voice, I will invite you to not feel
20 compelled to read everything that's in your briefs,
21 but I understand that you are each going to make a
22 brief argument or at least a summary, or anything
23 that you feel was not adequately covered in the 24 briefs, feel free to bring that up. So, Tommy...

25 MR. GOLDSTEIN: I only need just a few

1 minutes. Thank you, your Honor. With regard to
2 the DVDs let me -- you might find this helpful,
3 that the testimony in the DVDs is summarized in the 4 minutes prepared by Berkeley County. So while I
5 think both sides are hopeful that you will view the 6 DVDs, the salient testimony is already transcribed
7 in an abbreviated form in the minutes. So you
8 might find that to be a timesaver --

9 MR. COOKE:: Okay.

10 MR. GOLDSTEIN: -- when you evaluate
11 the evidence. This matter -- first of all, thank 12 you for agreeing to serve and we, you know -- I
13 think it's a compliment to you that working 14 together collaboratively we chose you, so we 15 both --

16 MR. COOKE:: We'll see if you still
17 agree by the time I'm done.

18 MR. GOLDSTEIN: No, we'll agree no
19 matter what the outcome is. But very briefly, this 20 case turns on really an analysis of what is or what
21 is not an arbitrary and capricious action by a
22 governmental body.

23 I'm not going to bore you with the details
24 of the Local Government Comprehensive Planning
25 Enabling Act of 1994, but I spend a lot of time

1 there and a -- and it sets forth the way in which
2 local governments go about creating zoning
3 classifications. And can the comprehensive plan in 4 this case identify this particular tract of land,
5 that's the subject of this dispute, as being
6 appropriately rezoned to R-3. And if you read the 7 staff comments -- the Berkeley County Planning
8 Department Staff comments, they explain in -- in 9 sufficient detail how they arrived at this 10 position.

11 One, it's consistent with the comprehensive
12 plan which was a -- years of taking undertaking
13 involving both members of the public and experts to 14 arrive at a comprehensive plan. And I'm going to 15 answer your question at the end; whether or not it
16 does or does not have the force of law. It does,
17 but I'll save that for the end. But anyway --

18 MR. COOKE:: I'm going to change that 19 question, by the way --

20 MR. GOLDSTEIN: Okay.

21 MR. COOKE:: -- rather than does it
22 have the force of law, I'd like to hear more about 23 whether its elements are mandatory because --

24 MR. GOLDSTEIN: Yes.

25 MR. COOKE:: -- I get that it has the

1 force of law --

2 MR. GOLDSTEIN: Right.

3 MR. COOKE:: -- in that it's required
4 --

5 MR. GOLDSTEIN: Right.

6 MR. COOKE:: -- to be implemented and
7 so forth, but the real question is, are its 8 requirements mandatory?

9 MR. GOLDSTEIN: Okay. Well, I'm going
10 to jump ahead to that then. That was the last
11 thing I was going to address.

12 MR. COOKE:: No, you can wait.

13 MR. GOLDSTEIN: No, let me jump ahead.

14 MR. COOKE:: Okay.

15 MR. GOLDSTEIN: Because that is the --
16 that peels back the layers of this onion because 17 the comprehensive plan in the future land use map
18 are the results of careful deliberative legislative 19 action. And it represents, by ordinance, the 20 statement of Berkeley County as to what this 21 property is appropriately used for. And in 22 arriving at its recommendations, it takes into
23 account everything of critical need for affordable
24 housing, the surrounding area, the proximity to 25 major arteries, and so forth.

1 Now, Mr. Olds here is a very smart
2 entrepreneur and he reviewed the future land use
3 map and he detected an opportunity. So he decided 4 to purchase the property, or at least take an
5 option on it to purchase the property subject to it
6 being rezoned. So when he made his application for 7 rezoning, he knew that his application was 8 consistent with the comprehensive plan. And of 9 course, in evaluating his application the planning
10 staff recommended -- and these are in the exhibits
11 and they're in our briefs -- recommended approval
12 of his request for the reasons that they 13 identified, which are consistent with the 14 comprehensive plan. That this -- this area's
15 highly developed. It's on a major artery. It
16 feeds -- Royal Road, feeds 78 and 26. I mean it's 17 just -- there's nothing rural about the area
18 anymore. It's changed. So Mr. Olds saw an 19 opportunity.

20 Now, the staff also, in their staff summary
21 -- they identified something else that's very, very
22 important. Which is that the surrounding areas,
23 even though they're zoned R-2, are all being used
24 as mobile home parks as legal nonconforming uses.
25 So Mr. Olds's proposed use was nothing more than to

1 use the property consistently with all of Royal
2 Road. And ironically the neighbors who showed up
3 in protest, that was one of the grounds of their
4 objection -- is that there are too many mobile home
5 parks on Royal Road.

6 Well, they don't realize that that statement
7 benefits Mr. Olds, not them, because the use of the 8 property is consistent with how the property is 9 being used; not only brings it in conformity with 10 the recommendations of the future land use map, but 11 also solves critical affordable housing needs, and 12 is consistent with how surrounding properties --
13 and his properties -- are bordered with a church on 14 one side and mobile home parks on the other side.
15 So there's nothing suburban or rural about the 16 property, but when you hear -- when you view the 17 videotapes or even just review the comments of the 18 complaining neighbors, the complaining neighbors
19 all identified subjective canards.

20 People in mobile homes are not worthy.
21 They're second-class citizens. They -- they didn't 22 come out and say that. They talked in code. And 23 whenever you're discriminating against people you
24 always talk in code. You don't come out and say
25 people in mobile homes are crap. You know, you

1 always say, well, they don't look after their
2 children, they don't put up skirting, they sell
3 drugs.

4 One guy testified, well, you know, I saw a
5 car go up and down the road looking for a
6 particular trailer. Well, I mean, it's just 7 ludicrous.

8 So what we're asking you to do -- what we
9 the appellants are asking you to do is to balance.
10 Balance on one side the difference that courts
11 traditionally afford to legislative decisions,
12 which is significant. On the other side is that 13 when legislative decisions act in direct
14 contravention to establish public policy and when
15 they act arbitrarily and when they act capriciously
16 the courts have a quote, duty, end quote, to 17 overturn that legislative decision. That's a
18 quote; it's in our brief -- that's a quote straight
19 out of Austin vs. Taramouth --

20 MS. ADKINS: Board of Zoning Appeals.

21 MR. GOLDSTEIN: -- Board of Zoning
22 Appeals.

23 So that's the entire case. You know, it's 24 been well briefed. It's been well briefed by the 25 respondents who have ably represented the local

1 government. But what we're asking you to do is to
2 balance the deliberative legislative analysis that
3 went into the adoption of the comprehensive plan
4 and the future land use map and the recommendations
5 of the planning staff versus the canards advocated
6 by the neighbors. Which -- which relayed on that
7 is the quintessential -- the quintessential
8 arbitrary and capricious actions. An action is 9 arbitrary and capricious when it's not based on 10 reason or on identifiable, logical analysis.

11 And there's three cases directly -- there's
12 actually more, I just hitched my wagon to three.
13 Bouie vs. City of Columbia, Helicopter vs. Land,
14 and Bear Enterprises vs. County North Augusta.
15 Because those cases were exactly like this case.
16 And there's others as well, but I just picked those 17 three where -- and no disrespect to the citizens of 18 Berkeley County, but when the mob shows up and when
19 they advocate, you know -- and this mob sensibility
20 has gotten much worse with social media. People
21 really get stirred up on social media and they come
22 there and they say these horrible things that once
23 you shine a light on them are really scrupulous and 24 not supported by reason or logic. That cannot 25 outweigh the studied legislative decision of the

1 Berkeley County government in adopting the
2 comprehensive plan.

3 So, you know, Mr. Olds owns the two lots
4 that are side-by-side. The lot that's the subject
5 of this is at R-2.

6 MR. COOKE:: Right.

7 MR. GOLDSTEIN: The one next door is
8 zoned R-3. So his application wants to make them
9 consistent because it's a common ownership.

10 MR. COOKE:: Right.

11 MR. GOLDSTEIN: Which would only allow
12 ten additional homes. Which is not going to have a
13 significant impact on Royal Road.

14 MR. OLDS: 12.

15 MR. GOLDSTEIN: 12. Sorry. 12. Yes.

16 MR. COOKE:: So -- and I think the idea
17 was that once it's combined it would be more than 18 two acres, which allows for that density.

19 MR. GOLDSTEIN: That's right. And then
20 finally -- and this will be my last comment. The 21 enabling act -- this is a quote. Do you remember
22 Dana Sinkler's case? Do you remember that case?

23 MR. COOKE:: Which one was it?

24 MR. GOLDSTEIN: Sinkler vs. Charleston
25 County. That --

1 MR. COOKE:: Yes.

2 MR. GOLDSTEIN: -- that Chief Justice
3 Toal wrote the opinion and sort of made all the
4 land use lawyers sit up and take notice. But a
5 quote from that case -- it's in our brief, but it
6 bears repeating. The enabling act, that's the 7 Comprehensive Enabling Act, permits the governing
8 body of a county, which in this case is Berkeley
9 County, to adopt zoning ordinances to help
10 implement a comprehensive plan.

11 So his application would implement the 12 comprehensive plan. And the only reason it was 13 turned down was because of the complaints.
14 Subjective on -- on -- without any evidence.
15 Subjective, unverifiable complaints of we don't
16 want those kind of people in our neighborhood.

17 MR. COOKE:: Right. So sounds like
18 you're not -- you're not taking the position that 19 the comprehensive plan by itself requires it to be 20 rezoned. And if they had shown up with traffic
21 studies and, you know, good solid reasons, it
22 wouldn't -- you -- you're agreeing that the county
23 would still have the discretion to not rezone this 24 property.

25 MR. GOLDSTEIN: I'm prepared to go 90

1 percent of the way with you, but not 100. I think
2 your point is well taken, but if the neighbors
3 would have shown up with evidentiary-based
4 complaints; i.e. traffic study or police calls or
5 something verifiable and objective, then I think
6 that gives the county something to hang a hat on.

7 The reason why I say I'm not willing to go
8 100 percent of the way there with you is because
9 they took all that into account when they passed
10 their ordinance adopting the comprehensive plan,
11 which has in it a future land use map, which 12 identifies this property as being appropriately
13 rezoned, R-3.

14 And so I'll answer your question -- one more
15 sentence. For example, if the planning staff had 16 -- had initiated this zoning change, I think the 17 outcome would be different. The only reason the 18 outcome was not different -- and when you see the 19 video you can hear and see it -- the chairman --
20 Chairman Schurlknight says, well -- he says, well,
21 I'm concerned about all this stuff going on out
22 there. Well, stuff isn't a evidentiary-based 23 rational to deny an otherwise valid application.
24 And so yes, I agree with you.

25 MR. COOKE:: And somebody testified

1 that they encountered 313 --

2 MR. GOLDSTEIN: Right.

3 MR. COOKE:: -- units. And so this
4 would have been 12 more.

5 MR. GOLDSTEIN: Yes, that's right.

6 MR. COOKE:: A 3 percent increase or 7 something like that.

8 MR. GOLDSTEIN: Right.

9 MR. COOKE:: Yes.

10 MR. GOLDSTEIN: It's nonmaterial.

11 MR. COOKE:: Yes.

12 MR. GOLDSTEIN: Immaterial.

13 MR. COOKE:: All right. I got it.

14 John.

15 MR. WEST: May it please the Court.

16 MR. COOKE:: Yes, it does.

17 MR. WEST: For the purpose of the 18 record, John West for Berkeley County and Berkeley
19 County Planning Commission.

20 I do think, Judge, that your review of the 21 video is not only going to be helpful, I would 22 suggest to you that it would be essential because
23 the minutes -- the summary minutes, while they do
24 generally capture the tone and the words that were 25 spoken at the three meetings, there's just no

1 substitute for hearing what people say, both the
2 members of the public, as well as the members of
3 the planning commission, initially the land use
4 committee, which is compromised entirely of members
5 of county counsel. And then ultimately in the 6 final meeting of the members of the county counsel
7 hearing the actual realtime words, I think gives a
8 significant perspective that the written word in 9 the summary of the -- of the proceedings could not 10 completely give. So I would encourage you strongly
11 to look at the video. It's -- it's 30 minutes, but 12 -- give or take. And it will be valid -- very,
13 very instructive of the actual events as opposed to 14 the events that are described by my dear friend,
15 Tommy. Who -- who being a good advocate that he 16 is, doesn't quite capture it in the same way as the 17 actual proceedings do. So number one, I would 18 encourage you to do that. It would be time well
19 spent if you would.

20 Just a couple of random points, not in any 21 particular order. And I do want to address the 22 issue of the comp plan and the mandate. I'm not so
23 sure that I see the distinction between your 24 original question of the force of law and the 25 mandate. That might be parsing it a little bit,

1 but I will address that in just a minute.

2 But, Judge, I think it's very important to
3 make a fundamental distinction here that somehow
4 on the other end of briefing, which I agree has 5 been through and ample, and I commend Council for 6 the excellent job that has been done in 7 representing his client in the briefs and in his 8 argument today, but there is a blurred line here in 9 the -- in the appellant's story that I think needs
10 to be clarified, and that is that all zoning
11 matters are not the same.

12 And what we've got here very importantly,
13 and I think it is the foundation of all analysis,
14 is that we have a zoning change request opposed to 15 a variance request.

16 And those -- those two paths forward were 17 both available to Mr. Olds, he could have, but he 18 opted not to -- he could have pursued a variance
19 from the county. And in a variance you are not
20 asking for the zoning to be changed. By definition
21 you're asking for the use to be permitted; the use
22 that he is pursuing which is to make a commercial
23 use of this particular parcel for a mobile home
24 park. He could have, but he opted not to seek a
25 variance.

1 And had he sought a variance, Judge, the
2 venue and the forum that that matter would have
3 been considered -- would have been before the Board
4 of Zoning Appeals and you'll see references in my
5 brief to the BZA.

6 Of course, in the BZA we're referring to the 7 Board of Zoning Appeals. And the significance of 8 that is that the Board of Zoning Appeals, which is 9 a quasi-judicial body of appointed -- not elected,
10 but appointed members. Mr. Olds could have, but he 11 again opted not to present his case to the Board of 12 Zoning Appeals.

13 The Board of Zoning Appeals would then have 14 had the opportunity to make findings of fact and 15 conclusions of law, which is required by county
16 ordinance and state law to do. There has to be a
17 record, there has to be a basis, there has to be 18 developed in a -- in an order of the Board of 19 Zoning Appeals.

20 In the same way that we all know as lawyers
21 that if we are going to have an order from any 22 court that will be defensible and will withstand
23 appellant scrutiny, you have to have findings of 24 fact and conclusions of law -- that's elementary.
25 We all know that.

1 Those of us that have had orders overturned
2 in the past -- and I have -- have found that the
3 development of the findings of fact and conclusions
4 of law is the basis for having stainable order.
5 And had Mr. Olds pursued a variance, he would have
6 had that outcome.

7 And significantly, Judge, that the appeal of 8 that order with findings of fact and conclusions of 9 law would then be to the circuit court. And there
10 would not be any other political -- quote quote
11 political process that would intervene between the 12 time of his application for a variance and the 13 ruling or order of the BZA and the ultimate 14 consideration on appeal, if necessary. There would 15 be no political involvement of the members of 16 county counsel.

17 I say that to simply just oppose that that 18 path that was not chosen against the path that was 19 chosen.

20 MR. COOKE:: What would be the standard
21 of review in circuit court? In that order?

22 MR. WEST: In that order.

23 MR. COOKE:: Yes.

24 MR. WEST: Any evidence.

25 MR. COOKE:: Okay.

1 MR. WEST: That is my understanding.

2 MR. COOKE:: How is that different from
3 arbitrary and capricious?

4 MR. WEST: Well, I'm not sure that
5 there is a difference, Judge.

6 MR. COOKE:: Okay.

7 MR. WEST: In some of the cases that we
8 cite in our brief, on the constitution elements of 9 the claims by the appellant, there are cases in 10 South Carolina that talk about any evidence -- any 11 evidence then --

12 MR. COOKE:: So your main point is that 13 it just -- it would have been a different venue,
14 different process.

15 MR. WEST: A different venue and, this
16 is where I was heading to that -- in addition to 17 just putting some context around it -- is all of 18 the cases cited by the appellant are BZA cases.
19 There's no rezoning cases in his -- in his primary
20 brief that are zoning change request cases.

21 And that's important because I think what 22 we've got is we've got a lot of discussion about 23 arbitrary and capricious and the failures on the 24 part of counsel. Which are directed to orders of 25 the BZA, which fail to have adequate findings of

1 fact and conclusions of law, which are not involved
2 in this appeal. That's the point.

3 MR. COOKE:: But both -- I think both
4 sides talk about the Bear Enterprises case. That's 5 a zoning change case.

6 MR. WEST: It is, but that's the case I
7 cite.

8 MR. COOKE:: Yes.

9 MR. WEST: And I cite that in reference
10 to a point that I'm going to make in just a little 11 bit. But I do think it's important and may be 12 important only in my mind, but I make a point that 13 we could have seen an outcome that was in fact
14 based on findings of facts and conclusions of law
15 if the appellant had pursued a variance.

16 Now, in the zoning request application,
17 there is no law in South Carolina that addresses
18 the issue of the requirements of a legislative body
19 as it relates to its conclusions and 20 decision-making. And that's an important -- I'm 21 jumping off point to where I want to go with the 22 series of cases that I have cited in our brief that 23 goes to this question of the presumption of 24 validity of the decisions of county counsel.

25 Bear in mind there's no requirement, and you

1 will not see it or hear it in the video because it
2 does not exist. It is not there. We'll concede
3 it's not there in terms of finding of fact and 4 conclusions of law in a county counsel. And there
5 is no law anywhere that says that there must be. A
6 legislative function is a different function
7 entirely than the quasi-judicial function. And 8 that's why I started off with framing the 9 discussion in those terms.

10 Think about it, Judge, in terms of the real
11 world; the normal course of events. And by the way
12 just as a parenthetical here, when you -- when you
13 listen and view this video, you're going to see
14 every other meeting of a public body that's ever
15 been held anywhere. It's just the nature of the -- 16 of the public process. I've had the great 17 privilege over the last almost 40 years of 18 representing public bodies. It's the same meeting
19 over and over again. People come, they're worked
20 up, they're exercised, they have a high-button
21 issue. It's important to them. Most of the time,
22 it is the not-in-my-backyard crowd that shows up to 23 these meetings and I, you know, I've been through 24 hundreds of them. I don't even know how many of 25 these not-in-my-backyard meetings I've been to.

1 They all are the same. You've got people that come
2 in -- they're all worked up, they say things and,
3 you know, sometimes they are outrageous. Sometimes
4 they are not politically correct. Sometimes they
5 are offensive, but that's the public exercising
6 under our system of government the right to be
7 heard. And we wouldn't want it any other way,
8 would we? We wouldn't want a system that 9 discouraged people from coming and speaking their
10 mind even if it's outrageous. But that does not --
11 that does not impute in any way to the decision
12 makers -- the mere fact that somebody comes in here
13 and says something that is off the wall. The -- I
14 mean -- I don't want to get off on too much
15 history. I've had people that had to be escorted 16 out of the room because they got that outrageous,
17 okay? It just happens. But it doesn't equal 18 arbitrary and capricious unless, and this is the 19 big unless here; I would concede the point that 20 arbitrary and capricious can happen, but it's only
21 when the legislative members of the governing body,
22 in this case county counsel, embraces and adopts
23 and articulates and joins in the same words that -- 24 and the same attitude that the members of the 25 public are expressing in their public comments.

1 And, Judge, this gets back -- circles back
2 to the video. Not once in any of the three
3 meetings has -- will you find any appointed or 4 elected official saying anything about these --
5 admittedly offensive attitudes of some of the 6 members of the public. Not once. So the record is 7 devoid of anything that would suggest that any 8 member of the elected county counsel agrees with 9 what they are saying.

10 Now, it's also important to make this point
11 as far as the legislative process; there is no
12 requirement that any member of county counsel or 13 even the planning commission has to explain their 14 vote. Think about that, Judge. If we were 15 reaching a point where the standard of review on 16 the question of whether or not the legislative 17 action is presumed to be valid or not -- that in 18 order for it to not be presumed valid, you have to 19 video everybody explaining their vote. Well, 20 that's unworkable and it is not required. And 21 can --

22 MR. COOKE:: There was that one case
23 where the Supreme Court actually chastised the 24 people for deposing the members of counsel.

25 MR. WEST: Well, that's the Bear case.

1 MR. COOKE:: Oh, okay.

2 MR. WEST: That is the Bear case. And
3 in fact, in that case, and this is on a footnote in 4 my primary brief which cites the Bear case, the
5 Supreme Court said that the remedy is at the voting
6 polls and not having a court supplant the decisions
7 of a legislative body. And there's a long line of 8 cases we cited in our brief. I'm not going to go
9 back through that again affirming the well-settled
10 lawyers in South Carolina that there is a
11 presumption of validity. And the courts will not 12 affere -- interfere with a local zoning decision.

13 And that's what we have here, a local zoning
14 decision at the request of the applicant to rezone
15 and not to seek a variance and whether what they're 16 asking -- what the appellant is asking you to do is 17 substitute your judgment for the judgment of the 18 elected officials. And that according to a long
19 line of cases, would be improper. And we would 20 submit to you, Judge, respectfully, that you cannot 21 and should not do that.

22 Now, I do want to touch on -- and I'm going
23 to be wrapping up as well --

24 MR. COOKE:: Take your time.

25 MR. WEST: I do want to touch on a

1 couple of points beyond those that I've made. One
2 I would cite on page four of your initial brief,
3 the section that deals with the powers of the 4 county. Now, the county can only act through its 5 elected officials, okay? The county is not an 6 entity of itself absent the elected officials. And 7 so in South Carolina code 4-9-25, and this is on
8 page four of the brief, I'm not going to read it,
9 but it's very important to understand that the 10 general assembly has determined that the -- and I'm 11 going to quote now from the statute: The powers of 12 a county must be liberally construed in favor of 13 the county.

14 Now, when you read that declaration of law
15 by the general assembly in combination with the 16 case law, which speaks to the issue of the 17 presumption of validity, then what that says in 18 combination -- in addition to what the case law
19 says standing alone, is that the courts will not 20 interfere with the legislative decisions of, in 21 this case, the county counsel. Those powers of the 22 county must be liberally construed.

23 Now, I want to shift a little bit, Judge, to 24 another section of our brief and that is on page
25 five of the brief, which enumerates the purposes

1 and authorities of the Berkeley County zoning
2 ordinance. Now this is important because it ties
3 into this issue of the interplay between the comp
4 plan and the decision-making that we're talking
5 about here. And I would ask you to pay special
6 attention to -- on page five of our primary brief
7 which recites verbatim the purposes and authority
8 of the zoning ordinance, because the zoning
9 ordinance and the comp plan all are interconnected.
10 And one of the purposes of the zoning ordinance,
11 which by the way mirrors the enabling statute that 12 talks about local governments having the authority
13 to adopt zoning ordinances -- these statutes and 14 ordinances mirror one another. They're not
15 verbatim, but they're close -- but there is a long
16 list of purposes and authorities that are laid out
17 in the Berkeley County zoning ordinance, one of 18 which is the implementation of the goals and 19 polices outlined in the Berkeley County
20 comprehensive plan. We're not running from that,
21 Judge.

22 We're not suggesting that that is not a
23 consideration by the governing body in making
24 zoning decisions -- it is. It is a consideration,
25 but it is not dispositive.

1 And here's why it's important to view it as
2 one of the tools in the toolbox of decision-making
3 because there are one, two, three, four, five, six
4 other purposes that are articulated in 6-29-710 and
5 the zoning ordinance itself, which speak to things
6 like providing adequate light, air, and open space
7 to prevent overcrowding.

8 Another example of a purpose and authority
9 under the zoning ordinance: To facilitate the 10 creation of convenient attractive in a harmonious
11 community. To protect and preserve -- and it goes 12 on and on.

13 And I won't -- won't read from the brief,
14 but I would encourage you to look at that because
15 Council talks about balancing and we would agree
16 that it's all about balancing. But we would agree
17 -- or we would submit that the balancing doesn't 18 end with simply item A under the ordinance which is 19 the implementation of the goals and polices of the 20 comprehensive plan, but goes into a number of other
21 considerations.

22 And I would submit to you that when you go
23 back and you look at -- you listen to the video,
24 the comments of the members of county counsel,
25 speak to issues that are contained in the zoning

1 ordinance; in fact, a prominent part of the
2 discussion.

3 Council wants to talk about discrimination
4 and the, you know, saying unflattering things about
5 people in mobile homes. There was some of that
6 discussion, but there was a lot of discussion about
7 traffic. There was a lot of discussion about 8 safety, both of which are themes that are embedded
9 in the zoning ordinance.

10 Now, I'm going to switch over to the comp
11 plan. In our supplemental brief we have attempted
12 to address the question of the court as it relates
13 to whether or not -- I think another way to say it
14 is whether or not the counsel is bound by the comp
15 plan and nothing else -- that it stops right there.
16 And I would submit to you, Judge, we laid it out, I
17 think, pretty thoroughly in the supplemental brief
18 which is a recitation of the preamble to the comp
19 plan itself. And if you look at the -- our 20 supplemental brief and specifically exhibit A to 21 the supplemental brief, you'll see excerpts from 22 the preamble. Well, the preamble talks about a
23 variety of things.

24 In the introduction it talks about the 25 comprehensive plan being a document that is used in

1 guiding -- uses the word guiding -- the growth and
2 development of Berkeley County for the next 15 to 20
3 years.

4 And I would just, again as a parenthetical,
5 I would agree that this was the product of a bunch
6 of efforts. If you look at the whole document
7 you'll see that this didn't just get generated
8 overnight. This was a big piece of work. A lot of 9 effort went into it.

10 And so when you look at the whole document
11 though, you see a living document, Judge. You
12 don't see a static calcified document that says you
13 must follow this no matter what.

14 Which is -- of course is the appellant's
15 position. You got to do it, you've got no choice.
16 But if that were true, and it's not, then why would 17 the very people that spent so much time in putting 18 this document together use words like guiding 19 growth; use words like a blueprint for the county's
20 future. That doesn't sound like a mandate to me.
21 I don't want to try to get inside the heads of the 22 drafters. So I'll just take the plain words of the 23 drafters' blueprint -- guiding.

24 Then it goes on to say under the purposes of 25 the plan, that it is a snapshot. But what is a

1 snapshot? It is a -- it is a determination of a
2 present situation as of the adoption of the plan.
3 But of course by definition a snapshot means that
4 it's evolving, it's changing and it is subject to 5 further review.

6 It goes on in the purpose part of the plan
7 to talk about setting forth goals for -- goals for 8 future land use development. And then it goes on 9 to say, and again I don't want to read the brief,
10 but just to highlight the keywords here. This plan
11 will guide decision makers when making decisions,
12 policies, and laws regarding future development of 13 land, provision of essential community facilities,
14 et cetera, et cetera.

15 Then it goes on, still under the purpose of 16 the plan, it talks again about goals. It talks
17 about policies. It talks about a mechanism -- a
18 mechanism for which future land use and development
19 decisions can be made.

20 But who are the decisions going to be made
21 by? Well, the decisions are going to be made by 22 county counsel; that body and the only body with 23 the legislative authority to make those changes.
24 Unless, and this is the big unless -- unless there
25 was a variance request, which there was not.

1 Now, we go on to the vision part of the
2 preamble. Again it's an exhibit. I'll let you
3 return to it and look at it and make sure I've 4 captured it correctly. It talks about, in terms of 5 the vision of the plan; the basic ideas are
6 principles. And then again later on in the vision
7 portion it talks about five guiding principles.

8 So this preamble, Judge, up to the point
9 that I'm going to stop, is covered up with language
10 that is purpose-driven. It is aspirational and it
11 talks in terms of a guide, but it is not a mandate
12 and there is nothing anywhere in the law to suggest
13 that it is a mandate.

14 In fact, in the plan implementation part of 15 the comprehensive plan, and this is in chapter
16 three a little later in the document, it talks
17 about the comprehensive plan is part of an ongoing
18 process. This is right out of the preamble -- I
19 mean right out of the plan. It's part of an 20 ongoing process. The policies in this plan are 21 intended to be building blocks. And it goes on 22 from there. I will let you make specific reference
23 to exhibit A and to that portion of the comp plan.

24 And then, Judge, finally, on this question
25 of the mandate of the comp plan, I would ask the

1 Court as I have cited in my brief to look at South
2 Carolina code 6-7-10. It talks about the
3 declaration of purpose as it relates to these very 4 issues. And the declaration of purpose speaks in
5 terms of encouraging the local governments to plan
6 for future development, to prepare, adopt, and from 7 time to time revise a comprehensive plan. And what
8 does State law say? To guide future local 9 development -- to guide. So again the word in 10 state law is to guide. If you look at the 11 Comprehensive Planning Enabling Act itself, and its 12 plain words, you will also find in 6-29-510
13 reference to guiding the development and
14 redevelopment of areas within its jurisdiction.
15 The same is true in a later section, 6-29-710,
16 which talks about guiding development and promoting
17 health -- public health, safety morals, convenient,
18 et cetera, et cetera. And I'll ask the Court to 19 take -- pay particular attention to that later
20 provision of that particular title.

21 Judge, so sort of in wrapping up here, I'm 22 going on longer than I intended to, which is not 23 unusual.

24 The -- I think the big takeaway here is that 25 the presumption of the validity of a legislative

1 decision is clear in the law. And the mere fact
2 that there were members of the public who came
3 forward and said some things -- now, let me stop
4 myself right there, not everything they said was 5 offensive, just some of the things they said were 6 offensive.

7 You know, some of them had some very
8 legitimate objective facts. Like on the -- like on 9 the traffic. You know traffic's not subjective.
10 If you see 300 cars and you say you see 300 cars,
11 well, somebody may disagree with you, but that's an 12 objective fact the person is testifying to.

13 Now, when you get into some of these other
14 comments, you know, maybe those were -- were --
15 were offensive, and we would concede that somebody
16 might find those offensive.

17 Now, I want to close by going to the record
18 -- and the record is very, very important. And I
19 want to cite a reference in the record to our 20 former supervisor and lawyer friend of many of us,
21 William Peabrook, who is no longer the supervisor,
22 but was at the time of the hearing. And he sort of 23 summarized, at the county counsel meeting -- I
24 think it sort of captures the sentiment -- his 25 sentiment for sure and the sentiment that was

1 expressed by some of the other member of county
2 counsel.

3 And he said -- and this is on page four of
4 our brief and in the video. I don't hear anyone
5 saying mobile homes are a bad thing because you
6 live there. However, I do hear concerns about
7 traffic and safety of the residences and children.

8 Now, that is not arbitrary. That is not
9 capricious. That is not unreasonable for a
10 publically elected official to say. In fact, I
11 think that sort of captures the whole sentiment of 12 county counsel. With the exception -- and I really 13 am going to close here -- with the exception of two
14 dissenting members of county counsel.

15 Now, this is important, Judge, because it
16 goes to the question of whether the decision was 17 fairly debatable. Fairly debatable is a term
18 that's used in a number of these cases. Some cited
19 by me and some cited by Council. Fairly debatable.
20 This matter was fairly debated.

21 We had two members of counsel interestingly
22 pointed out in Council's brief -- both lawyers.
23 Josh Whitney and Steve Davis, sitting members of 24 county counsel. They -- you'll hear what they have 25 to say when you listen to the video. They opposed

1 the motion to deny the request for rezoning. They
2 were, in other words, in favor of the rezoning
3 application.

4 So we had two members of counsel who had
5 every opportunity to make their case to their
6 fellow members of county counsel and they did.
7 They made their best case. Both of them said it
8 differently. You can imagine Josh Whitney and 9 Steve Davis saying it differently, but they came
10 essentially to the same point.

11 And they articulated that, and it's on the 12 record, but they did not persuade their other 13 members of counsel who voted in large majority to 14 deny the request, on the issue of safety and 15 traffic, predominantly.

16 But again they didn't have to say it. They 17 didn't have to say it -- why they voted against it.
18 And the mere fact that they didn't say it didn't 19 make it arbitrary, but they're not required to give 20 a reason.

21 But my point here is when you listen to --
22 particularly to county counsel, that last excerpt,
23 you'll see that there was ample discussion.
24 Everybody had -- everybody on counsel had a chance
25 to say what they needed to say and wanted to say.

1 Some didn't say anything, but at the end of the day
2 exercising their authority and duty to make a
3 determination on the zoning application, they
4 decided not to do it.

5 But that doesn't mean that it's suspect. It
6 doesn't mean that under these facts and under the 7 law that it was arbitrary or capricious or in any
8 other way suspect. And we would ask the Court
9 after reviewing the briefs and the record to make
10 such a determination. Thank you.

11 MR. COOKE:: So let me -- I'll give you
12 another chance, but let me summarize.

13 First of, Tommy's got some other theories.
14 He's got substantive due process, procedural due
15 process, Willowbrook, equal protection. Does all 16 that boil down to arbitrary and capricious in the 17 context of this case?

18 MR. GOLDSTEIN: They do. But I think
19 we have agreed, and Council can correct me if I'm 20 wrong, is that the purpose of today's hearing or 21 decision is to decide whether the county counsel
22 did or did not err in refusing to grant the 23 rezoning request. Because if the decision is 24 reversed and goes back to counsel to make specific 25 findings then those other issues are not right for

1 judicial determination.

2 MR. COOKE:: Okay.

3 MR. GOLDSTEIN: So I don't know that
4 we're prepared to go forward on our other claims.
5 And we had talked earlier about getting an order,
6 which of course you can sign because you have full
7 preliminary powers as a Circuit Court Judge to 8 bifurcate those issues, because those other issues
9 may become not ripe if the decision is that county
10 counsel needs to make findings of fact to support
11 its decision to deny rezoning.

12 MR. COOKE:: Okay.

13 MR. GOLDSTEIN: So I'm not sure we're
14 there yet.

15 MR. COOKE:: Right. But if I don't 16 find that, am I supposed to rule out all the 17 questions --

18 MR. GOLDSTEIN: I think we have to come
19 back --

20 MR. COOKE:: -- or do I do that later?

21 MR. GOLDSTEIN: -- and make my case.

22 MR. COOKE:: But I'm just dealing with 23 your first argument now then?

24 MR. GOLDSTEIN: Right. I think we -- I
25 think we had agreed the decision today was an

1 appeal up or down. Is that a fair statement?

2 MR. WEST: Yes. The issue is now to
3 say -- the issue that Tommy described -- did the --
4 did the county counsel err in not granting the 5 rezoning request.

6 MR. COOKE:: Okay.

7 MR. WEST: And I frame that issue a
8 little bit differently than Tommy, but it
9 ultimately gets to the same question. And I framed
10 it in terms of, you know, the validity of the 11 presumption.

12 MR. COOKE:: Yes.

13 MR. WEST: Eventually the presumption,
14 but I agree we do not need today and in the near 15 term to get to all of those others. I do think,
16 Judge, they all revolve around arbitrary and
17 capricious. But...

18 MR. COOKE:: Well, in different facts
19 it could be a different standard, you know, the 20 town of Willowbrook says you can have a class of 21 one. So then you're really comparing disparate
22 treatment, but in this case the disparate treatment
23 is part of your argument on arbitrary and 24 capricious and so --

25 MR. WEST: Right.

1 MR. COOKE:: -- so I get that. So let
2 me -- let me kind of focus a little bit on, you
3 know -- I think we all agree that the courts have a
4 very differential attitude towards legislative
5 action or inaction. Arbitrary and capricious is 6 the standard that we're dealing with here.

7 So let's look at that for a minute. And 8 here's kind of what I'm thinking about or concerned
9 about from your perspective; that essentially the 10 reason for denying this request was that it would
11 have public safety and traffic concerns.

12 And you know, let's leave aside anything
13 projured about the kind of people that live there,
14 but obviously every time you increase density
15 you're going to have higher traffic and more safety
16 concerns.

17 But that's the rub for me. And that is --
18 that's always going to be the case, I mean that 19 would always be a reason to deny any kind of 20 increase in density. You're going to always 21 increase incrementally the burden on police, fire,
22 schools, traffic.

23 In this case, as I commented earlier, I mean
24 it looks like to grant this would add 3.8 percent
25 to the number of mobile homes in that area.

1 Incrementally the traffic would probably be even a
2 tinier percentage because there are thousands of 3 cars that drive by there every day and you'd be
4 adding 12 cars to that load.

5 So and then you say yeah, but, you know,
6 every little bit counts. So they were entitled to
7 conclude that that was too much. But yet then you
8 faced -- your comprehensive plan, which took that 9 into -- presumably took all that into account. We 10 understand that by rezoning this you're going to 11 increase incrementally burdens on the public and so
12 forth.

13 So why -- why isn't that arbitrary and 14 capricious? I mean it seems like a tautology to 15 say it's never arbitrary and capricious to deny a
16 zoning request that increases density.

17 But in this case the -- the part that I want
18 to hear you deal with is -- and in this case it
19 would be -- it would have been consistent with the 20 comprehensive plan to go ahead and make that choice
21 here. So why isn't this arbitrary and capricious?

22 MR. WEST: Well, I would turn that
23 question around on you, Judge. And why is it?

24 MR. COOKE:: Well, if it lacks a
25 rational basis. I guess -- I guess that's a

1 rhetorical question. The argument would be -- I'll
2 let Tommy make the argument himself. But the
3 argument I think would be that you've already got a
4 plan that accounts for some increase in density
5 here. And all the ills that that brings with it,
6 and it's a relatively small increase. And so why
7 isn't it arbitrary to say we're not going to accept
8 this increase that we've already baked into the 9 comprehensive plan?

10 MR. WEST: Well, I don't know what was 11 in the minds of every member of counsel. You don't 12 know, I don't know, nobody knows other than as 13 expressed in the record by some of the members of 14 counsel.

15 Could I get back to the -- to the law that 16 presumes the validity of a legislative action. And 17 that's where we started today, Judge, is that we 18 don't have to build a record. We don't have to 19 have findings of fact and conclusions of law.

20 MR. COOKE:: I get that.

21 MR. WEST: We don't.

22 MR. COOKE:: Right.

23 MR. WEST: And so what your question
24 begs is that the -- is the expectation on the part
25 of every member of counsel to articulate why they

1 do not feel bound by the comprehensive plan. And I
2 just think that's a bridge to far. And I don't
3 believe the law requires that and I don't believe
4 in the absence of that expression that that equals
5 arbitrary and capricious --

6 MR. COOKE:: Right.

7 MR. WEST: -- which is sort of implied
8 in your question.

9 MR. COOKE:: Well, no. I'll spot you
10 that. I'm not really asking you subjectively what
11 was their reason. And every time you have a 12 judicial attack or a legal attack on a legislative
13 action the rule's pretty much the same, we don't go
14 into what was actually in the legislator's minds.
15 The lawyers have a luxury of making up whatever
16 reason they think --

17 MR. WEST: Yes.

18 MR. COOKE:: -- will prevail. And so
19 that's what I'm inviting you to do. Tell me in the 20 fullness of time using your best imagination, why
21 is it -- why isn't it -- why is it not arbitrary
22 and capricious to not allow a variance that has 23 been -- or I mean a change of zoning that has been 24 recommended after all this deliberate thought --
25 when the reason for denying it is what everybody

1 would know anyway, which is it's going to increase
2 density and the count --

3 MR. WEST: There may be. To answer
4 your questions directly, there may be other
5 considerations. There may be all kinds of 6 considerations. If you remember going back to the 7 purposes of the zoning ordinance, there are a
8 variety of purposes.

9 You can have a member of county counsel who
10 sat there and in the privacy of his own thinking
11 concluded that it was not just traffic, not just 12 safety. It was all kinds of other reasons in his 13 or her mind, but again that doesn't -- the silence
14 of that particular member does not equal arbitrary
15 and capricious.

16 It could be any of a variety of reasons, and 17 that's why, Judge, that the Supreme Court has 18 repeatedly said that they're not going to meddle in 19 the decisions of the local governing body because 20 that's a slippery slope that the courts recognize
21 as just impossible to administer.

22 Now, let me answer it a different way. In 23 order for it to be arbitrary and capricious there
24 has to be something affirmative. There has to be 25 -- for example, if the members of county counsel

1 voted the way they did and you have a member of
2 county counsel saying I agree with you, those
3 people over there -- you know, that's a bunch of 4 bad folks that bring crime -- that do this.

5 If a member of county counsel had said that,
6 or that became the sentiment of the counsel as a
7 body that these are bad people, et cetera, et
8 cetera, then to answer your question, that would be
9 arbitrary and capricious.

10 But the mere silence -- or in the case of 11 Jack Schurlknight and the case of William Peabrook
12 it was articulated traffic and safety, but that's 13 not spirulative of why.

14 MR. COOKE:: Could be -- could be.

15 MR. WEST: So if there was something
16 affirmative and obvious that was the sentiment of a
17 counsel member or the body that was -- was wrong,
18 Then it's arbitrary and capricious. Otherwise the 19 presumption of validity has to stand for the 20 reasons that I've already articulated. And that's 21 our position in a nutshell.

22 MR. COOKE:: I got it. Tommy.

23 MR. GOLDSTEIN: Thank you. I'll try to 24 be brief. It was arbitrary and capricious, and the 25 record demonstrates, that they stated -- and when

1 you read the minutes and when you see the video
2 tape -- they articulate their reasons. They say,
3 I'm not voting for this because of these neighbors
4 and they live there and what they're going through.

5 That's what they say. They articulated just
6 like verdid Council just told you they are required
7 to do -- not necessarily required to do, but they
8 did. They stated it, it's on the record, so
9 there's no dispute about it. You can see it with 10 your own eyes and hear it with your own ears.

11 And then the decision was affirmative and it
12 was obvious. And the two lawyers on the board, Mr.
13 Davis and Mr. Whitney -- they articulated the 14 reasons why we're here today. They said, so wait a
15 minute, our comprehensive plan and our future land
16 use map has designated this property as being
17 appropriate for this use through our two-year
18 deliberative process.

19 So when Mr. West talks to you about you're 20 required to give the county deference to their 21 legislative decisions, I agree with him. And it's 22 articulated through their comprehensive plan and
23 through the comments of the planning staff who made
24 recommendations to counsel, and the only thing that 25 tipped the scale was the -- were comments of the

1 neighbors which were canards. And sure they said
2 traffic and safety, but there was no evidence.
3 There's no evidentiary-based rationale behind it;
4 that's just what they said.

5 Well, you know, we're dealing with that
6 issue right now two blocks from here -- one block
7 from here. College of Charleston has 56 students
8 out with the mumps now because of anti-vaxxers --
9 don't want to vaccinate their children anymore
10 because they read on the internet that vaccines
11 cause autism.

12 So that's the same type of subjective,
13 unsupported, unevidentiary-based assertions that
14 permeates this record.

15 So I agree with Council. You should
16 listen to the -- I hope you do listen to the video
17 tape and read the summary.

18 Now, I disagree with veridid Council on 19 whether or not they're required to make findings of 20 fact because it's very interesting. The 21 comprehensive code -- the -- 1994 Comprehensive 22 Land Use Act specifically requires a council to 23 make findings of fact and conclusions of law and 24 publish them 30 days in advance before they approve
25 any zoning change that is not in conformity with

1 the comprehensive plan. And that's in section
2 6-29-540.

3 MR. COOKE:: Yes. I'm having trouble
4 understanding the grammar of that one because it
5 sounded like you said they were published for the 6 reasons why they are going to proceed that way.

7 MR. GOLDSTEIN: That's right.

8 MR. COOKE:: But --

9 MR. GOLDSTEIN: Yes.

10 MR. COOKE:: -- in this case they are
11 not proceeding that way.

12 MR. GOLDSTEIN: That's right.

13 MR. COOKE:: It's a question of whether
14 you're going to proceed that way.

15 MR. GOLDSTEIN: That's right.

16 MR. COOKE:: So I don't quite 17 understand how that --

18 MR. GOLDSTEIN: That's right.

19 MR. COOKE:: -- statute reads.

20 MR. GOLDSTEIN: What it does is it
21 places the burden on counsel to explain when it's 22 going to take action at variance with its 23 deliberative legislative decision, which is through
24 the comprehensive plan.

25 And I forgot my other point. Well, I'll go

1 to another one -- oh, I know what -- I know what it
2 was. Let's look at the definition of arbitrary and
3 capricious. Now these are definitions we can all
4 agree on -- when a decision is founded on prejudice
5 or preference rather than on reason or fact.

6 Now that gets us back to your comment about
7 where's the evidence that this is going to impact
8 on traffic or safety. There isn't any, other than 9 the statements of the neighbors. This type of 10 decision is often termed arbitrary and capricious.
11 Capricious, contrary to the evidence or established
12 rules of law.

13 Well, the established rule of law is the 14 comprehensive plan. And there is no evidence
15 because as you point out, whenever you increase
16 density there's always an increase in traffic, but 17 it's immaterial.

18 Now, in talking about your deference to 19 Council in this particular case, the legislative
20 deference. You know, I call that the potted plant
21 argument. Is that, you know, circuit courts,
22 because that's where we are now. We're in Circuit
23 Court, just in a different room.

24 Circuit courts are not potted plants. They 25 do have the power and the obligation to right a

1 wrong, to do justice when a decision below is based
2 on nothing more than prejudice and canards, which
3 is what happened in this case.

4 Oh, and I know -- you know, opposing counsel
5 takes exception to the three cases I cited. Bouie,
6 Helicopter, and Wyndham as being zoning cases --
7 board of zoning appeal cases -- variance cases and 8 not -- well, here's a zoning case that they cite
9 and that every government lawyer always cites in 10 every case.

11 MR. COOKE:: That's for a circuit case?

12 MR. GOLDSTEIN: Yes. Sylvia, because
13 if you remember what Sylvia did and how we get back
14 to Mr. West's question about why didn't y'all go
15 get a variance -- why didn't you apply for a
16 variance?

17 Well, if we applied for a variance, we would 18 be waiving -- we have a legal position that we're
19 taking here today, which I was not willing to do.
20 And that was a legal strategy; right or wrong.

21 MR. COOKE:: But why is it -- why is
22 that true? Why couldn't you do that first and then 23 failing in that come back and --

24 MR. GOLDSTEIN: Because you have to
25 show hardship to get a variance. It's a different

1 standard. The standard that we're proceeding under
2 today is conformity with the deliberative
3 legislative decision of Berkeley County as
4 articulated through its comprehensive plan.

5 MR. COOKE:: I got you.

6 MR. GOLDSTEIN: Now, in Sylvia --
7 Sylvia is very interesting.

8 MR. COOKE:: Sylvia the Circuit Court
9 actually reversed --

10 MR. GOLDSTEIN: That's right.

11 MR. COOKE:: -- the board.

12 MR. GOLDSTEIN: That's exactly right.
13 So -- and that's what they said for Sylvia -- they
14 said you don't need to come here because your state
15 court already took care of it, because that's what 16 they do.

17 MR. COOKE:: Right.

18 MR. GOLDSTEIN: All right. So that
19 takes care of something. Now, I don't want to keep 20 us any longer than we need to so let me just go
21 back through here and -- oh, Mr. West says the 22 comprehensive plan has no force of laws, it's just
23 a mere blueprint. Well -- and I worked my way
24 through college building houses and I can assure
25 you, you can't build a house without a blueprint.

1 A blueprint is something more than a suggestion and
2 if you think that's not the case, try building a
3 house without a blueprint.

4 MR. COOKE:: I think I've seen some
5 houses that look like they were built without a
6 blueprint.

7 MR. GOLDSTEIN: So he also says that,
8 you know, counsel articulated -- and I wrote down
9 and I made -- and I hope I'm not misquoting him,
10 but the record will reflect if I am. But what I
11 wrote down is legitimate objective facts. Well, I
12 agree. There were members of counsel that did
13 identify legitimate objective facts, but it wasn't
14 supported by any evidence.

15 And that gets us back to your comment about 16 traffic and safety. Sure, traffic and safety are 17 legitimate concerns, but there has to be some 18 evidence. That's the Wyndham case. Wyndham North
19 Augusta. Exactly what the court of appeals said
20 there.

21 In the evidence of traffic and safety is not
22 what the neighbors say. I agree the neighbors have 23 a legitimate concern with traffic and safety, they 24 do. But they have to have some evidence backing up
25 their assertions. They can't just say, oh, 12 more

1 homes on this busy road. That's the cam- -- that's
2 the straw that broke the camel's back. They have
3 to have some evidence.

4 So this case is as Mr. West told you, this
5 is a not-in-my-backyard case. Oh, the purpose of 6 the comprehensive plan is adopted by Berkeley County
7 counsel by ordinance. The purpose is in section
8 1-2 which states that the purpose of the 9 comprehensive plan is to guide zoning decisions.
10 That's what -- that's what section 1.2 says.

11 And I guess I'll end at the beginning. Mr.
12 West pointed out that neighbors are concerned and 13 they do have the right to be heard; they do. I'm 14 all in favor of public participation and that's why
15 we have Freedom of Information Act, so people can 16 understand what their government is doing and have 17 notice of when meetings are going to take place so
18 that they can appear and be heard.

19 And when Mr. Olds applied for rezoning, you
20 know, they go out and post signs so that the 21 neighbors will know. And I support that, but as 22 Justice Wallard pointed out in the Ion case, zoning
23 cases are the most important cases because -- what 24 he said in Ion is they quote, touch us where we 25 live; they do.

1 And so I get the passion of the neighbors.
2 I get it. And they have a right to be heard, but
3 that doesn't mean their subjective concerns
4 unsupported by any evidence is sufficient to tip
5 the scales -- to tip the scales away from adherence
6 to the deliberative legislative decision of Berkeley
7 County. Which is articulated through its
8 comprehensive plan and its future land use map.
9 Which is why planning staff recommended approval.
10 So...

11 MR. COOKE:: Well, that's going to be
12 my dilemma. Is I understand negativism, we're all
13 probably guilty of that to some extent. People
14 don't show up at the zoning meeting to advocate
15 change by large -- most of the population won't.
16 So we have to filter that to some extent. But I'm 17 going to have to sort of figure out -- I'll listen
18 -- I want to listen to these recordings and see.

19 MR. GOLDSTEIN: Yes.

20 MR. COOKE:: Because at some point you
21 have to differentiate between what's -- what's --

22 MR. GOLDSTEIN: Arbitrary.

23 MR. COOKE:: Well, what's the canard --
24 what's a bad canard versus what's good old American
25 negativism.

1 MR. GOLDSTEIN: Yes.

2 MR. COOKE:: Because I think some of
3 that is natural and, you know, the argument could
4 be that's probably why you had elected counsel,
5 because you had to listen to neighbors and if they
6 don't articulate it perfectly they have to take
7 that into consideration, but I think those are 8 certainly good points. And I am concerned about 9 the fact that this did involve the use that was 10 consistent with the comprehensive plan. What about 11 that statute that says they're supposed to make 12 findings of fact if they're going to deviate from 13 the --

14 MR. WEST: That's the screened reading.
15 But if you go back to the statute it doesn't say --
16 but with all due respect to counsel, it doesn't say
17 what he said. I'd invite you to look at the 18 statute.

19 MR. COOKE:: Well, I read the way -- I
20 didn't really understand it even as it was -- I
21 have to admit, I didn't go back and read the 22 statute. I read the excerpt from it that was in 23 the brief but -- and I doesn't -- it doesn't -- it
24 seems to talk about if the governing body is going
25 to do something that is --

1 MR. WEST: That's right. That's what
2 it says.

3 MR. COOKE:: Yes.

4 MR. WEST: Because if it were
5 otherwise, Judge, the process would just bog down.
6 It just would stop if the burden was on the leg --
7 on the county counsel as Council has described. It
8 just doesn't happen. I mean that's not the way it
9 works.

10 MR. COOKE:: Okay. All right. Well,
11 you guys have given me some pretty good food for 12 thought. Anything else that I --

13 MR. WEST: Final point. I do not view
14 you as a potted plant, just for the record. You
15 are not a potted plant.

16 MR. COOKE:: I like being a potted
17 plant.

18 MR. WEST: All good questions. We
19 appreciate you --

20 MR. COOKE:: Is somebody going to put
21 together these exhibits for me?

22 MR. WEST: Yes.

23 MR. GOLDSTEIN: Right. And I would
24 just point out that the reason I have that excerpt
25 from the 6-29-540 -- the reason it's included in

1 the brief is it shows the power of the
2 comprehensive plan and what is required in order to
3 deviate from the comprehensive plan.

4 MR. COOKE:: Right.

5 MR. WEST: Judge, one other thing since
6 we're talking about documents. Yesterday afternoon
7 I sent the handbook for county officials.

8 MR. COOKE:: I've got that, yes.

9 MR. WEST: And I would encourage you as
10 you are processing all of that -- it's a good
11 summary of the planning process in chapter 13 of 12 that document and I would encourage you to look at 13 that.

14 MR. COOKE:: I did. I read that, yes.
15 It's helpful. All right. LeaAnn, anything?

16 MS. ADKINS: No, thank you.

17 MR. COOKE:: All right. Thanks very 18 much.
