RE: Gregory T. Christian v. Anna Healy, Appellate Case No. 2018-001600; Response to June 8 letter from Clerk's Office

Dear Ms. Allen:

In response to the letter from your office received June 12 advising the court may or may not take action in the case this fall, please be advised that I will be traveling domestically beginning mid July, with no fixed return date. Part of the trip will be spent looking for property in Florida, which state I am originally from and where I am not listed in a police report as a suspected petty thief. Additionally, I am currently awaiting receipt of a new passport, and plan to travel internationally within the next year, tentatively to South America and Kenya.

The lower court judge having apparently neglected to read the complaint, and appellant having awaited action from the appellate court for over two years so far, candor compels the admittedly lay observation that the South Carolina court system does not appear sufficiently ethical to responsibly hear the case, and thus a just resolution of the matter does not seem a credible outcome. Indeed, I had by this point supposed that leaving the state and submitting a refund request for filing fees was as close to resolution as I was likely to come. Is there some procedural mechanism by which I may continue my apparently unrealistic pursuit of justice in this matter without my future plans being further disrupted, as has been the case for the past five years?

Very truly yours,
