REPLY ARGUMENT

APPELLANT'S MOTION TO DISMISS AT THE TRIAL COURT DID NOT CHALLENGE THE SUFFICIENCY OF THE INDICTMENT; INSTEAD, HE CHALLENGED THE JURISDICTION OF THE COURT TO ACCEPT HIS PLEA TO THE "VERBAL INDICTMENT".

In its initial brief, the complete legal foundation of the Respondent's argument is that the trial court did not have jurisdiction to vacate Appellant's/Harrison's guilty plea conviction based on an insufficient indictment. Respondent's Brief, pp. 8-9. The foregoing would be a great argument and well supported by the law that Respondent cites if the Respondent was properly characterizing the Appellant's argument. However, this argument is without merit and must fail because Harrison did not allege an insufficient indictment in his Motion to Vacate his Sentence and Conviction before the trial court, nor does Harrison assert such legal theory on appeal before this Court. Instead, Harrison's asserted at the trial court and now asserts before this Court that the trial court did not have jurisdiction to accept his plea, because the State amended the indictment in such a way that it changed the nature of the offense and that such amendment was not allowed because there was not a waiver or presentment. Clair v. State, 324 S.C. 144 (1996) (affirming grant of post-conviction relief where defendant was indicted for trafficking in cocaine weighing more than 100 grams and less than 200 grams). Under the holding in Clair, an amendment to a drug indictment that changes the nature of the offence involves subject matter jurisdiction, not sufficiency of the indictment. Id.

On September 02, 2014, Harrison agreed to plead no contest to trafficking in cocaine, 28 to 100 grams. Of importance, no new indictment was prepared by the assistant solicitor. Instead, the assistant solicitor verbally stated in the record Harrison was pleading to trafficking in cocaine, 28 to 100 grams. See, Record on Appeal, p. 17, Lines 2-25 (hereinafter abbreviated as "RA", followed by the page number). From the record, it appears that the sentencing court did not use an indictment. The Court completed a Sentencing Sentence, and the trial judge checked the space "lesser included offense", which intended to communicate that Harrison was pleading to a lesser-included offense. RA, p. 45. Harrison did not sign the Sentencing Sheet. There is nothing even to remotely suggest that Harrison waived presentment of the "verbal indictment" to the Grand Jury. There is no colloquy in the Sentencing Transcript to suggest that Harrison waived presentment of the new charge to the Grand Jury. The solicitor's "verbal amendment" of the indictment before the court substantially changed the nature of the offense to which Harrison was charged. Harrison did not plead to the Amended Indictment. Instead, he was sentenced to 12.5 years for pleading no contest to the assistant solicitor's "verbal indictment", even though the nature of the offense was changed.

In sum, under the Clair, supra, line of cases, the trial court did not have subject matter jurisdiction to accept Harrison's plea because the reduced charge was not a lesser included offense, and Harrison did not waive presentment of the reduced charge. Therefore, Harrison's conviction and sentence are void as a matter of law.

CONCLUSION

Based upon the reasoning and citation of authority provided in the Appellant's Initial Brief and this brief, and any arguments of counsel invited by this Court, Harrison requests this Court to issue an order vacating his sentence and conviction, and for an order granting him any other relief that is just and proper.
