Secondly, any penalty imposed should take into account as a mitigating circumstances any other penalty that may have been imposed or which may be imposed for the conduct involved, including a criminal or civil or other punitive damages award arising out of the same conduct.

Next, you should consider whether the award of and the amount of the punitive damage award may deprive the defendant of any profits derived from the improper conduct and whether the ill-gotten profits should be properly awarded to the plaintiff.

And finally, Ladies and Gentlemen, an award of punitive damages must be limited to punishment and thus may not affect economic bankruptcy. To this end, the defendant's ability to pay any punitive damages award should be considered. However, economic bankruptcy factor is not an absolute bar to an award of punitive damages.

That leaves me to conclude the substantive law. Let's take a quick break and I'm going to give you some thoughts about your deliberation. Please take a -- we are on the downside of this. Okay? (Pause.)

All right. Let's finish up. We're about to break. Let me just say this: you're lucky. I had one that was three and a half hours once, and that was terrible.

All right. Ladies and Gentlemen, before you're in deliberations, first, let me point out to you that you don't -- you weren't selected by either side of this case to be partisans or advocates for one side or the other. In fact, when you went through the qualification process, you represented that you could be fair and impartial to both sides and apply the law and find the facts from the testimony and evidence. When you begin your deliberations, I'm going to ask and also charge that you use your experiences in life, your good common sense and your experiences to come to a conclusion and a verdict.

Deliberation is defined as this: it is a careful consideration of weighing up with a view to a decision. These are these parties only view -- only day in court. They don't get a second bite at the apple. This case is very important to both the plaintiff and to the defendants in this matter.

Now, regardless to what any of you may think about our judicial system, I will submit to you that the genius of the system is that it allows 12 men and women such as yourselves, who come from different walks of life, who have different experiences, who have different backgrounds to listen to the testimony, to listen to the evidence, to go back and walk through and discuss the evidence and then ultimately reach a conclusion in this case.

Now, remember you are the sole -- you are the judges of the facts. When you go through and begin your deliberations, I'm going to ask and also instruct that you listen to everybody's points and their points of view, let your fellow jurors describe to you why they feel the way they do about a particular issue or point; they will do the same back to you. Don't be in a hurry because this is their only day in court.

Now, Mr. Foreman, if, at any time, the jury has a question, write it down and send it back to me. Never let us know where the jury stands numerically on any of the causes of action. That's solely up to y'all.

Now, Ladies and Gentlemen, in order for your verdict to stand, it has to be unanimous. But with that being said, you have to make your decision on your own. Don't be afraid to change your opinion if the deliberations with your fellow jurors convince you that the weight of the evidence should make you change your opinion.

On the other hand, don't change a firmly held belief about a fact in this case solely to appease your fellow jurors. Now, once you reach your verdict and it's unanimous as to all eight causes of action, you will sign it; you will forward it; you will knock on the door. And we will receive it here in the courtroom. Okay, sir?

Now, as to the verdict form itself, it's fairly self-explanatory. I have to put the options and the causes of actions in some order so that the options that you have and the various cause of actions. The order in which they appear is of no meaning. Okay, sir?

But the first one that you -- you can consider them in any order you want to. But first on your verdict form is as to the plaintiff's breach of loyalty claim. As I told you, in that claim, you will have to find some amount that the defendant has to return to the plaintiff. And if you consider actual damages, you may consider punitive damages.

So what you'll do, once you reach your actual damages amount, you will write both the word out, like you do a check, and you will put the number down. Okay, sir? So we'll have no doubt of what you had in your mind. If the jury unanimously feels that a punitive damage award is appropriate, then you will write that amount and do it the same way. Okay, sir? If you leave it blank, that means the jury does not give punitive damages for that cause of action.

The next would be as to breach of fiduciary duty. Again, in this case, the plaintiff admits that he admits his fiduciary duty. But that doesn't mean that there's automatically an award for him. You have to decide whether or not the defendant's breach proximately caused any damages to the plaintiff, and if so, in what amount. If you award actual damages, and only if you award actual damages for this cause of action, then you can consider whether or not punitive damage is appropriate. If you do, you'll fill them out as I've told you to. If not, or if you don't think the plaintiff suffered any actual damages, your third option will be find for the defendant. Okay?

The next would be the breach of contract. And it would be for the plaintiff in the amount of actual damages. There's no punitive damages in that cause of action. Or if you don't feel like the plaintiff has been damaged for breach of contract or there was a breach of contract, then you'll find for the defendant. You will check the option that you choose. Okay, sir?

For violation of the Unfair Trade Practices Act, your consideration will be for actual damages or for the defendant. If, however, you find that the defendant did violation the South Carolina Unfair Trade Practices Act and the plaintiff has been damaged as a result of that, you'll fill out the amount like I've told you. Then the jury will go and answer the following question, but only if you make an actual damages award. Your question is was the defendant's conduct in violation the South Carolina Trade -- excuse me, the Trade Secrets Act, committed in a willful, wanton or reckless disregard of the plaintiff's rights, you will check yes or no. Okay, sir? Excuse me, that was for trade secrets.

Next is tortious interference with a contract. These tell you which defendant or defendants the claims are against. Your option would be for actual damages. If you award actual damages for punitive damages and also an option for the defendant. Third would be the breach of contract accompanied by fraudulent act against Mr. Trask. The actual damages -- if you award actual damages, you may award punitive damages. And then, if not, if you don't think that actual or punitive damages is appropriate, you would check for the defendant. Defamation claim, actual damages are for the defendant.

Finally, under unfair trade practices, if you find that there's actual damages, you'll do as I told you all along. Do the writing. Then you'll answer this question, and it's written down for you, it says: Were the defendant's unfair trade practices committed willfully? You will check yes or no.

Once you have all of your causes of action decided, you will sign it, forward it, then knock on the door and we will receive it here in the courtroom.

Now, Ladies and Gentlemen and Mr. Foreman, each one of these causes of actions are independent of the other. You may not and shall not concern yourself of whether or not there's any type of double recovery if you determine that an award is appropriate. That will be dealt by me at the end of this case. So you will look at each cause of action. You will debate it. You will come up to a decision. You will fill in as the jury unanimously decides, unaffected by your decision on any other causes of action in this case.

With that being said, I'm going to ask you to go back to your jury room. I need to talk to these lawyers and find out whether I need to correct something I said or didn't say. Then, if not, we'll send word for you to begin your deliberations.

(Jury exits at approximately 2:25 p.m.)

THE COURT: Any additions or exceptions from the plaintiff?

MR. ENGLISH: No, Your Honor.

THE COURT: From the defense?

MR. SMITH: No, Your Honor.

THE COURT: All right. Guys, if you would, leave your numbers with my clerk if y'all go anywhere so she can get to you. Don't go too far away. Again, thank you for your preparation and performance in this case.

Do we have a stapler down there?

THE CLERK: Sir?

THE COURT: Stapler?

THE CLERK: Stapler?

THE COURT: Yeah.

THE CLERK: Yeah.

THE COURT: If y'all would just confirm the exhibits. And Mr. Bailiff, if you would just take those exhibits in there and tell them to begin their deliberation once you bring the alternates back out.

THE BAILIFF: And you want the alternates where?

THE COURT: You could just bring them back in here. Is their lunch in there?

THE BAILIFF: Well, I think it's out there in the hallway.

THE COURT: Let's let them -- just take them some -- is there another room where they can eat their lunch?

THE BAILIFF: They can go back --

THE CLERK: They can eat with us.

THE COURT: Okay.

THE BAILIFF: We can eat in the same room.

THE COURT: All right. Great.

(The Court goes off the record at approximately 2:27 p.m.)

(Deliberation of the jury begins at approximately 2:45 p.m.)

(The Court goes on the record at approximately 4:01 p.m.)

THE COURT: The jury wants to be charged again on tortious interference. Okay. So... Could you bring the jury in please?

MR. ENGLISH: Before we bring them in -- this is obviously subject to what you think of Mr. Smith, but...

THE COURT: Think about what please?

MR. ENGLISH: What you think about this, but we probably should have had a charge explaining the eyes of the law on Clear Touch and Mr. Trask are separate individuals.

THE COURT: Do what?

MR. ENGLISH: In the eyes of the law, Clear Touch and Mr. Trask are separate individuals. That may be -- I'm guessing that maybe the hang up on this.

THE COURT: Well, I'll find out.

(Jury enters at approximately 4:02 p.m.)

THE COURT: All right, Mr. Foreman, Ladies and Gentlemen, my understanding from the jury is you want me to charge you on the law of tortious interference again. This will be that -- and is there any other questions you have other than just for the charge? That's it?

UNIDENTIFIED FEMALE JUROR #1: We just don't really understand what it's for. We just need more definition of the charge.

UNIDENTIFIED FEMALE JUROR #2: Yeah, but just on that one.

UNIDENTIFIED FEMALE JUROR #1: Yeah.

THE COURT: Just on that one?

UNIDENTIFIED FEMALE JUROR #2: Uh-huh.

UNIDENTIFIED FEMALE JUROR #2: Uh-huh.

THE COURT: Okay. Well, let me give it to you. I'll try to do it slowly so you can get it. It is a little confusing between the first and third and second person. This is against Clear Touch only. And Ladies and Gentlemen, Clear Touch and the plaintiff -- excuse me Clear Touch and Mr. Trask are separate, but freestanding individuals.

One who intentionally and improperly interferes with the performance of a contract between another and a third person by inducing or otherwise causing the third person not to perform the contract is subject to liability to the other for the pecuniary loss resulting to the other from the failure of the third person to perform the contract.

The theory of this doctrine is that the parties to a contract have a property right in the contract which a third person has no right to deprive them of or to injure them in than he would have to injure their property. Such an injury without sufficient justification, amounts to a tort for which the injured party may seek damages.

To establish an action for intentional interference with an existing contractual relationship, sometimes referred to as tortious interference with an existing contractual relationship, the plaintiff must prove five elements: first, the existence of the contract; second, the wrongdoer's knowledge of the contract; third, the intentional procurement of the contract's breach; fourth, the absence of justification; and fifth, resulting damages.

The rule presupposed the existence of a valid contract. That is, there must be a valid contract and -- a valid and enforceable contract for a cause of action for tortious interference with an existing contractual relationship to exist. The particular agreement must be in force and effect at the time of the breach that defendant has caused. If, for any reason, it is entirely void, there is no liability for causing its breach.

Knowledge of the existence of a contract is a condition of liability for interference with it. Therefore, a defendant cannot be liable for interfering with a contract of which the defendant was unaware. There is no liability where the party charged with procuring a breach of contract has acted in ignorance of the existence of the contract. It is not necessary to prove actual knowledge. It is enough to show that the defendant had knowledge of facts which, if followed by reasonable inquiry, would have led to complete disclosure of the contractual relations and the rights of the parties.

For a cause of action to arise, a breach must be intentionally procured. The plaintiff must prove that the outsider intentionally induced the third person not to perform his contract with the plaintiff. The essential element is the intent to because -- excuse me, the essential element is the intent to cause the result. If the defendant does not have this intent, his conduct is not subject him to liability.

The tort of intentional interference with contractual relationship requires that the third party's interference in fact procures the breach of the -- procured -- do that one more time -- the fact of intentional interference with contractual relationship requires that the third parties interference in fact procured the breach complained of. The alleged act of interference must influence, induce or coerce one of the parties to the contract to abandon the relationship or breach the contract.

The plaintiff must show that but for the interference, the contractual relationship would have continued. Regardless of the defendant's behavior, there must actually be a breach of the underlying contract before there can be an interference with an existing contractual relationship. The absence of justification may be inferred.

Interference with a contract is justified when it is motivated by a legitimate business purpose. The exercise in good faith of a legal right by a party to a contract affords no basis for an action by the second party for intentional interference with a contract -- with a contract, even though the consequence of the legal right by the first party is to cause a third party not to perform another contract with the second party. The fact that one is a competitor of another for the business of a third person does not prevent his causing an existing contract with the other from being an improper interference if the contract is not terminable at-will.

An essential element of the tort of interference with the contractual relationship is that damages resulted from the breach. In an action for interference with a contract, the plaintiff may recover such damages sustained by him as part of the natural and proximate consequence of the interference.

The measure of damages includes unforeseen expenses, damage to reputation, damage for loss of employees, damage for loss of customers, damage for loss of goodwill. Where the damages alleged are lost profits, the plaintiff must prove that it is reasonably certain that profits would've been realized but for the tort and that such profits can be ascertained and measured from the evidence produced with reasonable certainty. Aggravated unjustified interference -- interference with contractual rights in reckless disregard of the contracting parties, justifies the award of punitive damages.

Now, Mr. Foreman, does that answer the jury's question you think? Does that answer your question? Okay. If you would, would you go back to your jury room. Don't resume yet until we send word back. It will be shortly. Okay.

(Jury exits at approximately 4:10 p.m.)

THE COURT: Any additions or exceptions from the plaintiff?

MR. ENGLISH: No, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Any from the defense?

MR. SMITH: None.

THE COURT: All right, guys. We're back at ease.

Will you tell them to begin their -- resume their deliberations?

THE BAILIFF: Yes, sir.

(The Court goes off the record at approximately 4:11 p.m.)

(The Court goes on the record at approximately 5:09 p.m.)

THE COURT: We have a verdict. If we would, regardless of whatever the verdict is, act accordingly. All right.

Would you bring the jury in?

(Jury enters at approximately 5:10 p.m.)

THE COURT: Mr. Foreman, I am advised that the jury has reached a verdict; is that correct?

THE FOREPERSON: Yes.

THE COURT: As to each cause of action?

THE FOREPERSON: Yes.

THE COURT: Would you pass that verdict form forward, please, sir?

(Verdict form is handed to the Court.)

THE COURT: Would you publish the verdict for me, please, ma'am?

(Each juror responds.)

THE CLERK: Thank you.

THE COURT: Let the record reflect that all responded in the positive.

All right. Ladies and Gentlemen, I want to thank you for your service this week. The Court is never concerned with your verdict, but it is concerned that you are engaged throughout this trial. I watched you, even through that lengthy, dull charge of mine. You stayed engaged. You listened to everybody. You listened to the charge. And you performed your civic duty. For that, we thank you.

The good thing is you can't be required to be brought back here for three years in state court. I have no authority in federal court or magistrate's court. But we do appreciate your service. I really mean it when I say, without folks like yourselves, we don't have a system; we don't have a rule of law; and you don't have a way to resolve your differences when you are in civil court or criminal court on a civilized basis. You can look on the TV every night and see people who don't have this system. As imperfect as it is, it's the best that we have.

For that being said, thank you for your service. Before you go, I would like to step in and just say something to you and then I will excuse you. I will be very brief, if you don't mind. Thank you.

(Jury exits at approximately 5:16 p.m.)

THE COURT: 10 days?

MR. SMITH: Yes, Your Honor.

THE COURT: All right. Posttrial motions to include election of remedy issues. Just for everybody's edification, for the time being, I'm going to put on the Form 4 the total actual, total punitive, and put pending further orders, because it's got to be registered somehow. Okay. So my clerk just asked me that. I'm really quite frankly wasn't sure. But that's what I'm going to do.

It certainly -- there are certainly some election issues going on in this case, I feel like. If you need to make your posttrial motions, if you would -- when you file them, just copy them to my clerk and myself and we'll schedule them. Thank you, everyone, again.

(Proceedings are concluded at approximately 5:18 p.m.)

(Whereupon, court convened with all parties present, when the following proceedings were had:)

THE COURT: Good afternoon. Let me thank everyone for coming to Anderson. I appreciate you-all traveling. Let me make sure I'm clear on what's before me.

Have you-all given the court reporter the caption?

MR. ENGLISH: Yes, Your Honor.

THE COURT: All right. Great. The plaintiff has a motion for equitable relief, attorney's fees, and damages under some equitable theory.

The plaintiff [sic] filed a motion for election of remedies, new trial absolute, motion for relief from judgment under Rule 60, motion for new trial under 59. Motion for new trial nisi remittitur, JNOV, and 13th juror, motion to stay execution of judgment and deny equitable relief. Is that correct?

MR. SMITH: Defendant's filed those. Yes, Your Honor.

THE COURT: I don't particularly have any feeling one way or the other. I probably -- let's look at your motions quick first.

You're seeking restitution. You also brought a contractual claim which the jury granted you damages for. And the cases seem to be clear, you can't get both. So tell me why you can.

MR. ENGLISH: All right, Your Honor. Under the Frank and Associates versus Russell case, which I would like to hand up.

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. ENGLISH: The Court in this case made clear that breach of contract claims and quantum meruit are alternative rather than inconsistent remedies.

THE COURT: Say that again.

MR. ENGLISH: I'm reading from Page 3, the column on the right, at the top.

THE COURT: Have you seen Williams Carpet Contractors versus Skelly, which is a 2012 Court of Appeals case? That is 400 SC 320; 734 S.E. 2d, 177, 2012; and basically in that case it says that the task the plaintiff's are seeking compensation for under quantum meruit theory, quantum meruit restitution basically in the same genre; and they're encompassed within the terms of an express contract, which has not been abandoned. You may not recover under quantum meruit. So it seems to me that's what you're trying to do.

MR. ENGLISH: I would agree that we cannot recover the same damages for both. But I think the Court could have it's own view under the theory of unjust enrichment as to what is the amount that would make the plaintiff -- that the defendant should have to give up, a different view than the jury. And so the plaintiff could elect that over one, or maybe, you know, some of the other.

THE COURT: Well, you know, the defense brings up a good point. You have adequate remedy of law because the jury gave you a very good remedy, quite frankly. So I just don't see you being entitled to any equitable relief in this case. I'll be honest with you.

MR. ENGLISH: What I would say to that argument is that the elements for unjust enrichment are different than the elements for the causes of action submitted to the jury. And that's why think I think the Court could come up with a different --

THE COURT: I hear you. I'm going to deny your prayer for equitable relief.

As to attorney's fees, I have not broken them down. I'm going to hold that issue in abeyance in the hearing; and if you want to cross examine him about his fees, you have a right to. I'm just saying you claim too much and file frivolous motions, et cetera, et cetera; but, you know, had a pretty good result from the jury, as you well know.

MR. SMITH: Yes, Your Honor. I appreciate holding it in abeyance. We were going to ask for more time depending on what the Court wanted to do with the attorney's fees because, as we pointed out, the initial submission by the plaintiff was 80 percent incomplete.

THE COURT: Sir?

MR. SMITH: I said I appreciate you holding in abeyance. We were going to ask for more time, depending on what the Court wanted to do with the attorneys fees. Because, as we pointed out, the initial submission by the plaintiff was 80 percent incomplete. So, I haven't had an opportunity -- Mr. English filed something yesterday, which I believe has the full breakdown. And that was yesterday. We haven't had an opportunity to look at it. So I think it makes sense to --

THE COURT: I tell you what. I'll continue that. I'll give you a chance -- I was in a murder trial last night until after 6:00.

MR. SMITH: I saw you on the news this morning, Your Honor.

THE COURT: That's a little scary. Anyway, I haven't looked it up either. So let's continue that. If you want to have -- just put you on notice -- if you want to cross examine Mr. English, you have a right to I believe -- I've rarely seen anybody do that; and turnabout is fair play in life. But if you do, you know, that's --

MR. SMITH: Well, I appreciate that. Also one more thing if you don't mind, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Sure.

MR. SMITH: I don't know if you want to take it up or not, because it was a motion for attorney's fees and costs. And we have it on our submissions that we don't think they're entitled to costs at all, based on the contract language is not -- it didn't allow the costs.

THE COURT: I'll tell you what, do this.

MR. SMITH: Sure.

THE COURT: Look at what he submitted, send me a letter. If you want a hearing, we'll give you a hearing. Let's just continue. You have a problem with that, Mr. English?

MR. ENGLISH: No, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Let's do it that way. If you want to have a hearing, we'll have one. If not, you can just send me any kind of format you want, it doesn't have to be particularly pretty, and then that we'll continue. And I know certain costs are recoverable, certain costs aren't recoverable. So just address that for me if you would.

MR. SMITH: No problem. It may be a copy based on our memo taking that argument. No problem doing that,

Your Honor.

THE COURT: Sorry?

MR. ENGLISH: Plaintiff had one more request for relief.

THE COURT: Let me -- I'm glad you said that. Under the trade secrets --

MR. ENGLISH: Yes, Your Honor.

THE COURT: The Court is supposed to set punitive damages. But I just looked under 39-8-40, the limitation is double the amount which I would probably award. I'll be glad to hear you. I think double the amount of those actuals would be appropriate under this case.

MR. SMITH: Sure. Did you not hear me on that point? You are right, about the statute. It is not treble. That's unfair trade practices.

THE COURT: I think it's at 39-8-40 --

MR. SMITH: Yes, Your Honor.

THE COURT: -- it says that I can't do it more than double the amount of actuals.

MR. SMITH: Right. It's in the Court's discretion if you find willful appropriation.

THE COURT: Well, the jury -- that's the reason I wanted to do that special verdict form. The jury found willful, wanton and --

MR. SMITH: Reckless.

THE COURT: Let me see, willful conduct on the part of Mr. Trask. And I guess that -- was that Clear Touch as well on that?

MR. ENGLISH: Yes, Your Honor.

MR. SMITH: Yes.

THE COURT: That was?

MR. SMITH: Trade secrets acts against both parties.

THE COURT: I thought so.

MR. SMITH: That puts it in the Court's discretion. It's not a shall.

THE COURT: Okay. Yeah, I do understand that.

MR. SMITH: We think the -- you know, we put it in our briefs, and will say it briefly now, the actuals are substantial, punitives are substantial. We didn't actually -- in our briefs we say that it's either punitives under the cause of actions alleged and awarded by the jury or the exemplary damages under the trade secrets act because we cite law within the -- in our filings it says it's also punitive damages. So you can't recover punitive damages twice, just like you can't recover actuals twice. So if punitive damages are awarded under the -- so educate me, Josh, if you would. But you're saying that only a single award of punitive damages under any theory, regardless of election issues, as opposed to getting a separate award of attorney's fees. Is that what you're trying to say?

THE COURT: Hang on. And I don't know the answer

MR. SMITH: No. I don't think I'm saying that, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. SMITH: What I'm saying is, as with actual damages, the same concept with election of remedies applies to punitive damages. So depending on what we do and what the Court does with the election of remedies, the wording exemplary damages may be foreclosed by the election.

THE COURT: All right. Let me tell you -- let's do this right quick. Of your motions, 13th juror doctrine is denied. I've read it. I think there's sufficient facts in evidence in which relief can be granted. So that would not be an appropriate remedy. JNOV, taking the matters in the light most favorable to the plaintiff, I deny that as well.

To me, quite frankly, the big issue we need to argue today is election of remedies. Under the facts of the case, I didn't think -- it is a big verdict, no question -- but they weren't so excessive as to seem to be a result of caprice or passion or any type of corruption or improper motive. These were bad facts in this case, probably some of the worst I have seen, ever. So I think it is within the realm of the jury and within the realm of actual damages put up by the plaintiff.

I know you dispute my damages, allowing those damages going in; but since they were there, that's what the jury had. I don't think that -- I would not grant a new trial based upon absolute. So that's denied. Same with relief from judgment.

MR. SMITH: Sorry, Your Honor, I have a little trouble hearing you.

THE COURT: I am so sorry. This courtroom has terrible acoustics. I will deny your 13th juror motion.

MR. SMITH: I heard that one.

THE COURT: Deny your JNOV, deny your new trial absolute, deny your motion for relief from judgment. That would leave us with your motion to stay execution, election of remedies, and nisi remittitur.

MR. SMITH: Yes. And then just to point out -- I appreciate the Court's ruling on that -- I kind of anticipated something of that likeness today. Just on the new trial absolute, though, I would point out that that's not --

THE COURT: Sure.

MR. SMITH: The main crux of that is certainly not the amount of the verdict. It's the amount of testimony and what we went through. We laid it out there.

THE COURT: Well, the standard -- let me ask you this -- the standard for a new trial absolute, and I'm going to -- well, based on what you're -- so you're saying that the sneak attack for this computer, right?

MR. SMITH: Yes, sir.

THE COURT: Any other grounds other than that? And I've read your brief, and I can't -- thinking about it, I can't remember, quite frankly.

MR. SMITH: It's okay. It's the collective way in which it was done. I would ask the Court, I understand that we have submitted a lot. If you read through there, it's going to lay it out better than the way I'm going to just off the off the top of my head.

THE COURT: Sure.

MR. SMITH: Even looking at my notes here. It's all the actions leading up to that mistrust. And we felt like that needed to be put in front of the Court. See what happened, have it in your discretion to decide whether or not that you think that rises to the level. And I put a footnote in there. And I want to make it clear --

THE COURT: Right.

MR. SMITH: -- to the court and opposing counsel, Your Honor. But the rules use the term "fraud" and "extrinsic fraud," and "intrinsic fraud." That's why those words are in there.

THE COURT: I hear. And, I don't -- you know, let me tell you what. The idea that -- let me go back and clarify something in my mind. Your motion for new trial is based on the fact that allegedly they sprung on you the last minute this computer check by McKnight or whoever it was.

MR. SMITH: Yes, Your Honor. And the way it came out and was done, element we laid out leading up to it was troublesome. And we got it in front of the jury and --

THE COURT: You know there was so much before the jury, the misconduct in this case. You have wife poses as somebody, mother poses as somebody. Mother's maiden name being used as managing officer. Monies be shipped out to Nevada and shipped back to Anderson, or wherever it was, Greenville; you had this gentleman working for a corporation, the undisclosed corporation doing business with his own corporation. I mean, it's so much stuff. The emails were basically de-minimus to me. I thought that they didn't have much impact at all. But it certainly doesn't raise to the level of granting a new trial based upon all this plethora of other bad acts, so to speak.

MR. SMITH: And I understand that, Your Honor. And I think our point was because of all that it actually is impactful and because of the effect of it in that those things were out there. But then there were evidentiary gaps which we think were substantial that got explained away by saying, well, yeah, the implication, very much unlike live testimony in front of the jury, was, hey, jury, he destroyed it. But there's no evidence of that. Because they wanted spoliation charge, and the Court rightfully denied that saying they hadn't proven anything were destroyed. So I understand the Court's take on that in light of the other evidence that was put out there. But that's why I think it's different and impactful and that's why we made the motion we did.

THE COURT: I hear you. But I'm going to deny that motion.

MR. SMITH: Okay. Thank you.

THE COURT: So that leaves us -- let's go to the election of remedies. Because that's probably going to knock out a lot.

MR. SMITH: Sure.

THE COURT: Let me see.

MR. SMITH: You mind if I approach?

THE COURT: No, sir. You can do whatever you like.

MR. SMITH: Illustrates the same stuff here.

MR. ENGLISH: I have a hand-up too.

THE COURT: Okay. So the total in this case --

MR. ENGLISH: Is on our chart there, Judge.

THE COURT: I've got it. We broke it down too. Clear Touch is 929,000, 945 and 995, against Mr. Trask $7,047,023.80. Now, let me stop for one second. Mr. English, quite frankly, when I see three different awards of the exact same amount, you're not going to be able to recover all those.

MR. ENGLISH: And we concede the 424,945 awards are the Leon County school's profits, and we agree we can't recover that number multiple times.

THE COURT: So just to see if we can get to the chase on that, I'm looking at breach of contract being 424,945, trade secrets being 424,945, I thought it was -- is that the only two times?

MR. ENGLISH: And the tortuous interference.

THE COURT: Yeah. I thought it was three times. Okay. So, it seems to me, under these three, you need to make an election. Do you agree or disagree?

MR. ENGLISH: I agree with you. That's on this chart we just handed up, we added up and we made the way we think the judgments ought to be entered.

THE COURT: So basically you would elect trade secrets in lieu of breach of contract and tortuous interference. Is that what you're telling me?

MR. ENGLISH: Assuming Your Honor doubles the exemplary -- awards exemplary damages of the 849,890, yes.

THE COURT: Well, I'll tell you -- and, Josh, I'm inclined to do that, quite frankly. I know you don't want to hear that, but I am. In fact, that's what I'm going to order right now. Under the trade secrets I'm going to double it pursuant to 39-8-40.

So, that brings us back to you, Josh. And that is, based on what he turned in as to Mr. Trask, basically dropping out the breach of contract and the tortuous interference claims, which would leave breach of loyalty, breach of fiduciary duty, trade secrets, breach of contract accompanied by fraudulent act.

But, let me ask -- stop right there right quick. Attorney's fees, under which of these causes of action are you getting attorney's fees?

MR. ENGLISH: I think we get attorney's fees for trade secrets and breach of contract, and breach of contract accompanied by a fraudulent act.

THE COURT: Trade secrets? What code section is that under the trade secrets act?

MR. ENGLISH: Which section?

THE COURT: Yes, sir.

MR. ENGLISH: I also handed up our motion and we cited in there. I'll get you that cite.

THE COURT: Okay. You guys, you know, in candor I haven't read every single thing because it's a bunch of --

MR. SMITH: It's either 39-8-80 or 39-8-90 -- or 40, from my memory.

THE COURT: Do you agree the attorney fees is under there? Is that the only cause of action against Trask for which you're entitled to fees.

MR. ENGLISH: Trade secrets and contract.

THE COURT: Well, you have elected out of contract. If you elect out of contract, you can't get attorney's fees under it. Right?

MR. ENGLISH: That is true. And so I guess the election, elect whatever results in the highest judgment.

THE COURT: Well, it's not funny to Mr. Trask up here, but I understand what you're saying.

MR. ENGLISH: So it's hard to make the election without knowing what you're going to award on attorney's fees and costs.

THE COURT: Here's my thought, Mr. English, quite frankly, if you are only getting it for one cause of action, you shouldn't be entitled to an award of all your attorney's fees and costs in this case. I don't think that's appropriate. I think cases say that too, don't they? I may be wrong on that, but I think that's -- you got to pare it down to reasonably incurred as a result of that. I know you can't do it all the way.

MR. ENGLISH: I think if you don't prevail on certain causes of action -- I think the Court has the discretion to cut it back based on others; but I will also say breach of contract accompanied by a fraudulent act I think would also support an award of attorney's fees, because the contract included an attorney's fees provision.

THE COURT: What's your take on that?

MR. SMITH: My take on that, it's in the brief. We think the way the contract language is written. It's written poorly and it doesn't include what happened. It includes -- it gives attorney's fees.

THE COURT: Read the language to me.

MR. SMITH: Sure. Let me find the right page,

Judge, then I can explain this better.

THE COURT: Sure.

MR. SMITH: And the contract is in -- here we go. In the notebook we handed up to you --

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. SMITH: -- one of the exhibits. It's Exhibit F. tab F, 1-F, if you want to look at that. The attorney's fees provision I believe on Page 2 under the general provisions section. Let me know when you're there. It's the language at the top.

THE COURT: All right, sir.

MR. SMITH: Okay. My point is this, the way this reads and I'm not going to read the whole -- I am going to read most of it to explain my position here.

THE COURT: Yes, sir.

MR. SMITH: It says, "The parties, therefore, agree that the company shall be entitled, in addition to any other remedies or damages available to it under the South Carolina trade secrets act or other statutory or common law to obtain injunctive relief without bond in order to restrain the violation of such covenants by employee. In the event the company prevails in whole or in part in any such action, employee shall be liable to the company for its costs, expenses, including computation of reasonable attorney's fees and expert witness fees."

And "any such action," the way that reads, that's not referring to an action for breach of contract. Normally -- I think it's referring to obtaining injunctive relief, the previous sentence.

THE COURT: The problem with your analysis, though, you're overlooking where it says "Under the trade secrets act or other statutory or common law." In other words, they opened it wide open. If they win, they prevail, they get their fees and expert fees. And that's what you're coming in agreeing to?

MR. SMITH: I would respectfully disagree with the Court's analysis. Because preceding that portion you just read, it's "In addition to any other remedies or damages available to it under South Carolina trade secrets act, statutory or common law" -- common law -- "to obtain injunctive relief."

And that's what that "any such" means.

THE COURT: Let me read it again right quick.

MR. SMITH: Sure.

THE COURT: So your argument is that they're only entitled to attorney's fees and costs if they're granted injunction?

MR. SMITH: Yes.

THE COURT: Okay. Is that what you're saying?

MR. SMITH: Yes, sir.

THE COURT: See, that would be an interpretation of it.

Mr. English?

MR. ENGLISH: I don't think that that's a reasonable interpretation at all because the sentence says, "In the event the company prevails in whole or in part in any such action." Such action refers to an action for all of those things, the breach of contract or any other remedies or damages available. And if -- to read it Mr. Smith's way, that "in whole or in part" would be superfluous. In other words, he's saying it only applies to injunction. Well, you either get an injunction or you don't. And so to adopt that interpretation you would have to strike that in whole or in part out and limit such action to an injunction. And I don't think that's a fair reading.

MR. SMITH: That's an ambiguity created by the drafter, Encore, and it should be construed against them.

THE COURT: Well, that's the statutory construction, I mean, contractual construction that you make. Any ambiguity is construed against your client.

MR. ENGLISH: Only if it --

THE COURT: If it's ambiguous, then it's against your client because he drafted it.

MR. ENGLISH: Yeah. But I don't think its ambiguous because it includes everything, and if the company -- any such action, if the company prevails in whole or in part. And I'll say the complaint in this action did seek an injunction. It's just when we got into discovery we found out it had all been done. And so --

THE COURT: Well, I mean, obviously that wasn't before the Court or the jury. Of course, it couldn't have been the jury but --

MR. ENGLISH: I also note that Plaintiff's Exhibit 6, the severance agreement which incorporated this contract, had a separate breach of contract/attorney's-fees provision. And that's section 16. So that I think would also --

THE COURT: That would be your breach of contract claim, I guess accompanied by a fraudulent act.

MR. SMITH: And that severance agreement I don't believe is --

THE COURT: I thought, and I'm trying to remember, but I thought at trial you were specifically limited to one contract only that you were seeking relief under.

MR. ENGLISH: We were not seeking damages under that severance agreement. But it was entered in evidence.

THE COURT: You can't get relief under it if you're not seeking anything under it, can you?

MR. ENGLISH: We weren't seeking damages from the jury on that contract. But in terms of a Court award of attorney's fees, I think it would provide independent support.

THE COURT: I disagree with that. So the question is whether or not that provision is narrowly drafted as Josh says or as you -- I don't -- I'll keep that under advisement. Okay? I just need to look at that. Because when I read it the second time, I could see where he would say that. I'm sure that was not the intent of the drafters to do it that way. But, going back then, would you agree with me, that breach of loyalty and breach of fiduciary duty are two separate and distinct claims with two different remedies?

If you don't, then I disagree with you, because the breach of loyalty has discourse monies paid, but the breach of fiduciary duty is a different set of damages and were presented as such during the trial.

MR. ENGLISH: I think it's -- I'll agree with you it's a different set of damages. And you see it's pled like this. I mean, we do these kind of cases and it is pled in the alternative because there is that different set of damages under -- and I think it's the same action as this.

THE COURT: Sir?

MR. ENGLISH: I think it's the same action that led to the liability finding here for both. They awarded different damages, but it's both, for not disclosing. Mr. Trask for not disclosing his interest in Clear Touch when he was an employee of Encore.

THE COURT: Refresh me on the election rules. If you have common elements or common damages, isn't it both? But if you have different elements but common damages you have to elect or if you have different elements and different damages, you don't have to elect even though it's based on the same conduct? I'm trying to -- go ahead.

MR. SMITH: Sure. We put the law and everything in our filings. The purpose of it is to prevent double recovery.

THE COURT: Oh, I'm sure. Sure.

MR. SMITH: So, I mean, if you have the same facts that can lead to liability under alternative elements, you can plead in the alternate; but if it's the same damages at the end of the day on the same action, then you have to elect.

THE COURT: I went back and looked at my trial notes. And even in his opening statement Mr. English said, "We're seeking four categories of damages: One being salary, bonuses, and benefits; two, inflated cost of panels; three, Leon County School profits or lost profits; and four, business opportunities." Those are four separate and distinct categories of damages. And they presented that way at trial if I recall.

MR. SMITH: Well, they relied on -- if you look on tab 1-B in front of you, it has that --

THE COURT: All right, 1-B?

MR. SMITH: 1-B. And this was Plaintiff's Exhibit 10-H at trial. This is the damages they submitted.

THE COURT: Right.

MR. SMITH: So we have three categories in here.

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. SMITH: Three tables for the different parts of each. And this is how it was submitted through Mr. Meilinger's testimony as their expert witness who did the damages calculation. That's a big point in our election of remedies argument.

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. SMITH: I know, again, a lot of the Court -- a huge point that we make as far as an election in this case, which is rather unique I think, the way the plaintiff chose to present these damages and the way their expert testified at trial, the way they worked was if you award damages in Table 2, then you don't get Table 1. Because Table 1 is the pay to those men, to Mr. Trask, Higginbotham, and Gallant, that generated the profits from the sales to Encore and Leon County.

THE COURT: Say that again, please.

MR. SMITH: Sure. Mr. Meilinger at trial, and again we lay this out in the motion filed with the Court, we think they are prevented from getting the damages from Table 1. These are the compensation paid to Mr. Trask, Gallant, and Higginbotham.

THE COURT: Trask showed wages, et cetera.

MR. SMITH: Yes, Your Honor. Because Mr. Meilinger said, okay, well, if you award the damages in Table 2, which are direct damages from products sold from Clear Touch to Encore and these other sales in Table 2, you can't award Table 1 because Table 1 was the pay for those people that generated those sales. So if you get those sales, you're benefited. Now, the plaintiff disagrees with their own expert's testimony; but the transcript will resolve that issue.

THE COURT: Have you ordered a transcript?

MR. SMITH: And I'm happy to -- we haven't ordered it yet because it will be substantial. Obviously, we're dealing with a lot here. But we'll have to order it and get that portion to submit it to the Court. It will clear that issue right up.

THE COURT: Yeah. If he said that, Mr. English, then --

MR. ENGLISH: No.

THE COURT: He didn't say that?

MR. ENGLISH: No, Your Honor. What happened, and you may remember, we had a different exhibit, it was 10-A where we were trying to recover all the wages of Mr. Trask, Mr. Higginbotham, and --

THE COURT: 400 and some for Mr. Trask, 29 something thousand for Higginbotham?

MR. ENGLISH: It originally totaled 712,000. And Your Honor wouldn't let us claim all of that. So we had to come up with this new exhibit. And so in his deposition when he was talking about the one the Court excluded, he talked about in his own view if you awarded all the wages of all the employees who generated the sales, then they would be alternatives. But what the jury was presented was something much smaller. So Mr. Meilinger wasn't talking about that. And then what the jury actually did, they didn't award all of Table 1. They just awarded a portion, Mr. Trask wages. And so it was appropriate for the jury and they could choose to award both. And the law is clear, even if our expert testified the way he said, the jury doesn't have to accept that. They can do whatever the evidence supports and we say it does.

THE COURT: Well, yeah. I mean, I don't disagree with that. However, if the evidence you presented was mutually exclusive by your own testimony, then you can't come back later and get both.

MR. ENGLISH: We don't think it was. And, again, because the jury didn't award us all of the wages we were seeking.

MR. SMITH: We're happy to order that transcript portion, Mr. Meilinger testified and --

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. SMITH: -- clear it up, submit it to the Court, provide a copy to plaintiff's counsel.

THE COURT: All right. So going back to my first question to you, Josh, and that is this: You disagree with me that breach of loyalty and breach of fiduciary duty are not -- they can't -- you think they cannot collect on both of those?

MR. SMITH: I don't, Your Honor.

THE COURT: I deny your motion on those. I think they can. Quite frankly, the breakdown that I saw, that I'm looking at -- basically the way I was looking at it,

I thought the double recovery was coming in under the actual damages that were duplicated three times. And I thought the election had to come there. Let me, out of fairness to everybody, let me read all your stuff. Okay? But I -- if that's -- I'll tell you right now, that's kind of the way I'm going with it, because I think that's appropriate.

MR. SMITH: Sure. And I tell you, sitting in -- when they read the verdict, of course I think everyone's light went off on those three. That's obvious.

THE COURT: Say that again.

MR. SMITH: I think everyone -- I'm sorry. I'm speaking too fast. Everyone's alarm went off on that one when they read the verdict. That's obvious. I agree with the Court. It's a bit unique in this situation. And, again, I'd appreciate, very much encourage you to take the time you need because it's a very, very big deal to my client.

THE COURT: Oh, I understand. It is a big deal.

MR. SMITH: Because we're talking about bankruptcy-type money here.

THE COURT: Yes, sir.

MR. SMITH: We lay out -- I gave you the more simplistic breakdown of damages. There's a -- I think in the pocket of that binder I handed up to you.

THE COURT: Side pocket?

MR. SMITH: Yes, sir. I think it's in the front with some law and whatnot. If it's not for some reason, I'll hand you this copy, Let Mr. English and Ms. Barker have a copy. It's just a one-pager, like this. It's loose. Here you go.

THE COURT: Give me one. I don't see it in here.

MR. SMITH: I have it. I have an extra copy right here. It's the same thing. Mr. English has it right in front of him.

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. SMITH: What we lay out in our filing is what the jury did here, once you get down to the breach of contract with fraud, they added everything. If you add up these numbers, take out -- once you take out -- I think we all agree they got to pick one. The 424 -- they got to pick one. So here you have the 424, you add all these up, 375 plus the 675, take one of the 424's because you have to take one. That issue, that 1.4 and change for breach of contract and fraud, it's our contention that that's all the damages at most they can get. Again, they added that up. I mean, down to 40 cents.

THE COURT: Well, let me ask you this -- let me ask Mr. English. What was the amount of actual damages that you put before the jury on your breach of contract or breach of contract accompanied by fraud?

MR. ENGLISH: We asked for the $5.5 million business opportunity.

THE COURT: That's what I was thinking. It's more than what was awarded?

MR. ENGLISH: A lot more. Yes.

THE COURT: You know --

MR. SMITH: And our point -- and it's laid out in there. You can see where each category of these damages come from. If you'll look at the Plaintiff's 10-H in conjunction with the summary, it's very obvious. They -- due to loyalty, they did an apportionment on the wages, which is completely appropriate to do that, take a percentage. It's more than -- it's all Mr. Trask, and then a portion of Higginbothan's and Gallant's.

Breach of fiduciary duty, and I have this broken down in that breakdown in front of you, that's from Table 2 of damages on 10-H, and that's all the product sold from Clear Touch to Encore. That's the first three parts of Table 2.

THE COURT: Say that again please, sir.

MR. SMITH: Sure. I'm looking at breach of fiduciary duty vs. Trask. They awarded 675,361.

THE COURT: Right.

MR. SMITH: That is from Table 2 on 10-H. Table 2 has 5 components within it -- or five different line items, I wouldn't say components -- it's five different line items. The first three are all about damages and products sold to Encore from Clear Touch. If you add those three together, that's the exact number you get, 675,361.

THE COURT: So what is inappropriate about that?

MR. SMITH: It's not. You look at all this about where they come from. And the way that -- it all goes back to the way that Mr. Meilinger testified. And then it shows they added all those up to get the 1.47. So it's the same damages repeated in that breach of contract with fraud. It's all of the actuals they found in previous causes of action dropped down. So it's double recovery. Because they have already awarded those damages under the other causes of action. Then they add them all up, drop it down, breach of contract with fraud. That's our point.

THE COURT: Well, so basically you just saying they doubled the fiduciary -- is that what it is?

MR. SMITH: Yes, Your Honor. If you were to award -- and again this is not -- I think everybody understands we all agree they got to pay one of the 424's.

THE COURT: They got to do what?

MR. SMITH: Pick one of the 424. We all agree on that.

THE COURT: Okay. Yeah, everybody agrees with that.

MR. SMITH: So if you take all the actual damages they awarded under the first five causes of action, they add up to 1.4 they awarded under the sixth cause of action, the breach of contract with fraud. So to award all of those previous damages plus the breach of contract with fraud is duplicative recovery.

THE COURT: Well, you know, I hear what you're saying, and you may be right. I don't think that's the analysis though. I mean, to me the analysis is, firstly, we don't know what the jury did. It may just be coincidental. It may not be. But I thought the analysis was you look at your elements and you look at your damages, that's your recovery. And the award -- the damages they put up for the breach of contract was the 5.5, right?

MR. SMITH: That was one of the -- you know, this case -- this is tough and it's a hard discussion because the breach of contract could come in under -- definitely under Table 2 damages too. It just depends on what we're talking about. Yes, they relied on the business opportunity provision in that contract for Table 3. Right? Based on the way these damages are awarded, you break down like I just tried to do, to say where all these actuals come from. The jury did not award damages from Table 3. So the breach of contract --

THE COURT: You and I and Mr. English, nor anybody in this courtroom knows what they really did. I mean, we know what the amounts they did, but we don't have a clue. We don't have to look at how they arrived at those figures. We can surmise. I still say, and I think that the analysis -- instead of us trying to get into the mind of the jury, is looking at, like we've always done, at the elements and the damages that were presented, and whether they were for the same thing or not.

MR. SMITH: I guess I'm struggling because breach of contract has different parts. It had the breach of business opportunity clause, it had the breach of the non-solicitation or non-compete provisions.

THE COURT: Right.

MR. SMITH: It had the breach of the confidentiality provisions. And the way it was presented to the jury, none of that was ever specifically tied to damage elements that were presented except for business opportunity from Table 3. So that's why it's a difficult discussion.

THE COURT: I recall, and you know granted this has been what, six weeks or so now? When mr. English went through in his closing argument, he went through each cause of action and spelled it out to the jury in your closing argument, did you not?

MR. ENGLISH: Yes, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Separately?

MR. ENGLISH: And I asked for 5.5 million.

THE COURT: Let me ask you this. Breach of loyalty clearly was the return of the monies. Breach of fiduciary duty, whatever those -- I can't remember what your elements of damages for that was and what amount you were claiming.

MR. ENGLISH: Well, the breach of fiduciary duties includes -- the fiduciary duties include the duty to disclose. And so we --

THE COURT: No, no, no, no. That's not what I'm asking you.

MR. ENGLISH: Okay.

THE COURT: The damages that you put up -- am I not right? And you tell me if I'm wrong. If you put up the same damages, although there may be totally different causes of action, you can't get relief for every single cause of action if you use the same damages over and over and over again. It's the same damages.

MR. ENGLISH: Right. If the jury had given us $5.5 million for each cause of action, we would have to elect. We'd only get that once.

THE COURT: Right. So the question I'm asking, and I do remember the discouragement of monies paid or benefits under the loyalty. What were your damages that you put before the jury for breach of fiduciary duty?

MR. ENGLISH: I think those are the profits that Encore lost by not being able to purchase directly from the suppliers.

THE COURT: So that is Table 2?

MR. ENGLISH: I think it comes from Table 2.

THE COURT: $1.1 million, plus 306?

MR. ENGLISH: Right.

THE COURT: Then when you went to the jury, on breach of contract, what were your damages you were seeking?

MR. ENGLISH: Well, they awarded the 424,945, which that was the number that we asked for the Leon County School that --

THE COURT: I mean, excuse me, breach of contract accompanied by fraud.

MR. ENGLISH: We were asking for the 5.5 million for the business, under the business opportunity clause.

That's what we asked for.

THE COURT: Okay. And those are the elements you went -- what I'm trying to say is, when you were asking for different elements of damages before the jury --

MR. ENGLISH: Yes, sir.

THE COURT: -- for each of these?

MR. ENGLISH: Yes, sir.

THE COURT: Now, going back over trade secrets, what are they?

MR. ENGLISH: The trade secrets --

THE COURT: What are your elements of damages in those?

MR. ENGLISH: The Leon County School profits. The same as the breach of contract. And that's why -- or that's what the jury awarded.

THE COURT: That's not Table 10-H?

MR. ENGLISH: That is -- well, it's a part of Table 2.

THE COURT: Oh, yeah. The 309 and 115?

MR. ENGLISH: Yes. Those are the Leon County School profits.

THE COURT: And that comes up to 424?

MR. ENGLISH: Yes, sir.

THE COURT: It does?

MR. SMITH: Yes, Your Honor. That's where the 424.

THE COURT: Josh, part of your argument relies upon what you're saying; that is this, you're saying that the jury added up under Table 2 items one, two, and three to come up with 675,361? Then they added up four and five to come up with a different -- those are different elements of damages, different causes of action, right?

MR. SMITH: Talking about lost profits on Leon County?

THE COURT: Yes, sir.

MR. SMITH: Well, they're saying --

THE COURT: See, you know, I thought I heard you say they're getting the same damages over and over and over. But it's not. You know, I can't speculate what the jury did. They came up with partial full for sure. But when they were presented to the jury, they were under different elements of damages that they put up for the jury, said, this is what we're asking for under this one. This is what we're asking for on this cause of action. And they were the same amount of money. Then trying to put actions in different hats on the same amount of money. Am I being just totally vague?

MR. SMITH: I'm not quite following you. I think

I know why you're struggling, why it's hard. There's a lot of facts and a ton of causes of action, very morphos theories of liability.

THE COURT: In other words, they put up actual damages of a hundred thousand dollars total then try to get that amount awarded under five different causes of action?

MR. SMITH: Sure.

THE COURT: We have breach of loyalty, monies paid, benefits clear. Breach of fiduciary duty, and that came under items one, two, and three under Table 2.

MR. SMITH: Yes.

THE COURT: All right. Then trade secrets comes under four and five, under Table 2.

MR. SMITH: Let me take a step back on that, Your Honor. Because the trade -- four and five -- five would have had to be the trade secrets because that's after the non-compete expires, that timeframe. Now, four could have been under the breach of contract because there's that non-compete provision. And during that timeframe they have on that Leon County sales, that's the duration of the non-compete. So that's also a breach of contract. And to simplify a little bit, take a little wider view out here, what we're saying, if you take the 1-1 from the total there from Table 2. Take the 1-1 from Table 2, the bottom line number.

THE COURT: Yes, sir.

MR. SMITH: And you add the first duty of loyalty verdict, $375,733.40, that's where the verdict for cause of action number six comes from. That's the math. That's what's clear.

THE COURT: Now, say that again, please.

MR. SMITH: Sure.

THE COURT: 375,733 multiplied by --

MR. SMITH: Not multiplied. We're adding the $375,733.40 in cause of action number one --

THE COURT: Right.

MR. SMITH: You add that to the one million, one hundred, 306, the total of Table 2, that gets you to the 1,476,039.40 and -- and, that's cause of action number six. And all the numbers, all the other numbers there -- it's all coming from Table 2.

THE COURT: Well, again, that's just -- may be right, may not be right. I don't know. But I still, in fairness to everybody, I'm going to look at it. But I don't think that's the analysis. I think the analysis what were the damages put before the jury, what are the elements of damages. And are they duplicative or are they not duplicative. And my thing, quite frankly, is that -- let me ask you another way.

MR. SMITH: Sure.

THE COURT: Forget what you think the jury did for just a second. I know what you're saying. But do you not agree with me, as presented by the plaintiff in this case, the damages for breach of loyalty, damages for breach of fiduciary duty, trade secrets, and breach of contract were all separate and distinct damages put up before the jury?

MR. SMITH: I don't, Your Honor. I think we have different theories of liability.

THE COURT: Show me of all those where there is a duplication of any of these.

MR. SMITH: Sure.

THE COURT: As presented by the plaintiff, not what you think the jury did.

MR. SMITH: I got you. We can go back to the lost profits on sales made to Leon County for April 26, 2014, to April 25, 2015, as far as I got from Table 2.

THE COURT: Right.

MR. SMITH: That can come from either trade secrets misappropriations. The theory was because Mr. Trask knew they were going to upgrade, he misappropriated that. Or it can come from breach of contract because there was non-solicitation or non-compete provision within it that was enforceable, but it prevented that sale.

Then, the three, the first three items -- still looking at Table 2 -- the direct damages on sales made, those can come from breach of contract or business opportunity and then didn't disclose it to them. Made profits because he had his own company. It can come from a breach of duty of loyalty because he's an employee. He is not disclosing his interest and supplier. It didn't come from breach of fiduciary duty, because I think those are one in the same, breach of duty, loyalty, and fiduciary duty.

THE COURT: I disagree with you on that. But if I'm wrong, I'm wrong. But I just disagree with you.

MR. SMITH: Different damages, that's fine. Then, you know, breach of contract with fraud, the difference in elements there, is just a fraudulent act. But the liability, I think the damages, the actual damages from that should be the same as breach of contract. Because it's the damages that are proximately caused by the breach of the contract. As with -- so that's troublesome too for us because breach of contract they award 424,945. But then they go to breach of contract for fraud and go 1.4.

THE COURT: I'm looking up something right quick.

MR. SMITH: Sure.

THE COURT: And I hear your argument but the way it presented by the plaintiff at trial where -- I have yet, as broken down by Mr. English in his breakdown, I have not seen any duplication of the damages at all. Okay? And I'm -- on his -- look at his, you have his breakdown, right?

MR. SMITH: Right. Yes, sir.

THE COURT: So, well, one second -- one second. What are the actual damages recovered under breach of contract accompanied by fraud? Is it the contractual damages?

MR. SMITH: The breach of contract is 424,945. And then the breach of contract with fraud was the one million 476.

THE COURT: No, no, no, no. Under -- just generically, any time you have a breach of contract accompanied by fraud, is it your contractual damages plus punitive damages, that capability? Or is it some other actual damages?

MR. SMITH: I don't think there's any difference than actual damages. That's where we're going there.

MR. ENGLISH: Right. I think it's the damages that would put the party in the same position it would have been if the contract had been performed.

THE COURT: So then, even on your breakdown, Mr.

English, if you look at trade secrets, you put same as breach of contract?

MR. ENGLISH: Yes.

THE COURT: So you should not be allowed to get your same damages for trade secrets that you got in the breach of contract accompanied by fraud. Can you?

MR. ENGLISH: And I don't think we are.

THE COURT: Yeah, you are. You have it broken down right here.

MR. ENGLISH: Well, no, sir. The jury awarded -- this is just a summary of what the jury awarded. And the number for violation of trade secrets was the same number they awarded for breach of contract. But the jury awarded the $1.4 million for breach of contract accompanied by a fraudulent act, which they could do because we were asking for the 5.5 million for violation of the business opportunity.

THE COURT: Right.

MR. ENGLISH: And let me say that the test is not what we assume the jury did or how they added it up, is there any evidence at all or inferences from the evidence to support that verdict? And the answer is yes, the jury could have awarded 5.5.

THE COURT: I got you. And I think you're probably right on that too.

All right. Josh, I'm going to read through everything. Let me make sure we got everything covered. Let me just tell you my thoughts right now. Okay?

The breakdown except for attorney's fees is appropriate election? Okay. And that is what Mr. English gave me today. That would be breach of -- that plaintiff is entitled to recover breach of loyalty, breach of fiduciary duty, trade secrets, breach of contract accompanied by fraud, each separately. I don't think there's a limitation on punitive damages on one award. I think each one stands on it's own, actual and punitive. I'm not ruling that. Just that's what I'm thinking. Okay?

But, in addition, Mr. English, I don't think -- if you're only going under two causes of action where you get attorney's fees, I know it's hard to break it out. But I don't think you get your full plethora of fees either. But, by your own agreement, you do have the expert fees included into it, which normally you may not even be able to recover.

MR. SMITH: Sure. And on that little note on cost, that goes back to our discussion earlier on the contract. And if you agree with our position on the contract --

THE COURT: They don't get it. Yeah.

MR. SMITH: They don't get costs at all, because the trade secrets act is not provided.

THE COURT: Right. Right. And your argument is simply if they've got an injunction they get fees; if they don't -- any other cause of action, they don't get it.

MR. SMITH: Sure. And there's one other item that we didn't get to.

THE COURT: Sure. You need to make a good record.

MR. SMITH: Yes, sir. The stay of the execution of judgment --

THE COURT: Well, let me ask you this. Because I have got your motion front of me, I was going to get to that and the remittitur. Okay?

MR. SMITH: Yes.

THE COURT: I'm going to deny your motion for remittitur. I don't think it was excessive. And I think the standard is if I find it merely excessive. I know Mr. Trask feels like it's excessive, but based on the testimony and evidence presented in the case, I do not find it was excessive. So I deny your motion for remittitur.

Now, normally -- and we have two issues here, I think. And on your stay from execution, one you got post-judgment interest running, and I think the rules say that you got to post money to keep that from happening.

MR. SMITH: Yes, Your Honor. I want to hand up -- it's in your binder, it's cited in our brief too, the applicable South Carolina statute.

THE COURT: Okay. I got it. I got it.

MR. SMITH: Is 18-9-130. And I have highlighted the portion that matters. The plaintiff submitted a bunch of stuff, federal cases and whatnot. It's not applicable. This statute is right on point. It limits the bond. It puts the Court's discretion on whether or not to have a bond issued. And then under our circumstances, because we got a corporate entity with less than 50 employees, and an individual. The way it reads is the amount of bond or other surety may not exceed the amount of judgment, or -- going down to B -- $1 million, whichever is less, for all their entities. There's another entity because it doesn't fit the criteria of Sub (a) there.

THE COURT: Let me look at that real quick.

MR. SMITH: Sure.

THE COURT: All right. Mr. English, it appears under that statute that he puts up a million dollars in my discretion, which I think, quite frankly, is inadequate in this case -- I wasn't aware of that provision. That's what it seems to read to me.

MR. ENGLISH: Well, keep in mind we're seeking two judgments or against two. We got an individual and a corporate entity.

THE COURT: Right. So it would be a million a piece.

MR. ENGLISH: Well, no, it's $25 million for --

THE COURT: He doesn't have 50 or more employees, does he?

MR. ENGLISH: Or -- well, I don't think there's evidence on that.

THE COURT: Let me ask you, Mr. English, and you read the sentence. "The amount of bond or other surety may not exceed the amount of the judgment or"?

MR. ENGLISH: Right.

THE COURT: Then it has "$25 million, whichever is less for a business entity that employ's 50 or more people and has gross remedies exceeding 5 million." Well, Clear Touch has revenues exceeding that, but it doesn't have that many employees if I'm not mistaken; is that right?

MR. ENGLISH: That is right.

THE COURT: Is that right?

MR. SMITH: Right.

MR. ENGLISH: I would submit an affidavit to that effect so surety --

MR. SMITH: And we have asked that the Court deny --

THE COURT: Execution.

MR. ENGLISH: And part of the reason is there was overwhelming evidence of fraud and cover up.

THE COURT: I agree with you, there was.

MR. ENGLISH: So we just don't think there ought to be a stay at all. Because we don't have any assurance that the defendants are going to pay us.

THE COURT: All right. That's true.

MR. SMITH: I will say that due to the bankruptcy track --

THE COURT: I know.

MR. SMITH: And to getting paid, we're going to need to do business again. That's, I think, a very, very important point.

THE COURT: Well, I mean, it is. If Mr. Trask or Clear Touch or both declare bankruptcy, then nobody is going to win in this situation.

MR. ENGLISH: Right. That's why we think it's very important a substantial bond surety as well. And that's just the reality of the circumstances.

THE COURT: Yeah. I -- the way I read that statute, Mr. English, is that it's amount of the judgment or whichever is less. So basically 25 million, it can be category A or 1 million category B. So is it saying the amount of judgment, whatever is less. Is that the way you read it?

MR. SMITH: Absolutely. That's very clear.

THE COURT: Is that not a bad reading of that?

MR. ENGLISH: Well, it's kind of ambiguous to me. And I will say, again, you got two judgments of two individuals so.

THE COURT: Would be 2 million.

MR. ENGLISH: One million and one million.

THE COURT: Right.

MR. ENGLISH: I don't know if the less is a judgment or 25 million or one.

THE COURT: That may stay execution, but it would not stop the running of your post-judgment interest.

MR. SMITH: Wouldn't the posting of bond stop that?

THE COURT: Isn't there a Court rule that has to do with cost? I'm pretty sure -- I mean, the post-judgment interest?

MR. SMITH: I don't know, Your Honor. I'm happy to look into that and submit it to the Court.

THE COURT: Hang on for a second. Look at Rule 67.

MR. SMITH: Say that again?

THE COURT: In an action which the relief sought is a judgment for a sum of money or....

All right. It appears that you got to post the amount of the judgment in the Court in order to avoid the running of post-judgment interest. I think that's right. I'll let you brief it; but I'm telling you I think that's right. And I think it's separate and apart from the staying of execution.

MR. SMITH: What was the last?

THE COURT: If you look under the case notes to Rule 67, it seems to say that. Okay? So then you kind of got of a catch 22 situation again. Your client is going to try to pursue execution of this judgment pending appeal?

MR. ENGLISH: Well, unless we can work something out with the defendants, yes. I mean, that would be our only option. And, you know, we weren't given any financial information for the year end 2016 or this year. So we would have been in the dark about it financially. We definitely would want the opportunity to explore that for 7 1/2 million dollar judgment against the individual and a $2 million judgment against the corporation, we don't think a million dollars would be adequate, especially --

THE COURT: I don't necessarily disagree with you. But the legislature has spoken under this statute. And I think it's clear the intent and the wording of the statute is it's the lesser of judgment or category A, category B.

MR. ENGLISH: But Your Honor still has the discretion to deny a stay and let us explore what assets they have.

THE COURT: I do have that. Has there been any talks between you-all about -- I assume there's not been any talks at all?

MR. ENGLISH: I mean --

THE COURT: Quite frankly, the way I understood this case, when I walked out of there I said, "The plaintiff is not going to be happy unless he's out of business." I told that to my law clerk. And I think you said that in fact.

MR. ENGLISH: That's not true, Your Honor. We'd be happy --

THE COURT: That's not true? Okay. I'm wrong. Sometimes I think I'm right, most times I'm not.

MR. ENGLISH: There will be talks, you know. Because I -- it depends on what the Court does, I think that's going to dictate a lot of what we talk about.

THE COURT: Have you looked at -- Ms. Barker, have you looked at Rule 67?

MS. BARKER: I'm looking that up now, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Look at it right quick. See if you-all agree that's the rule that you have to put the judgment in.

MR. ENGLISH: That's my recollection of it.

THE COURT: Yeah. I have had that before as a lawyer.

MR. SMITH: And I guess I'm lucky not to have had it too much, Your Honor.

THE COURT: I was one scrambling myself. So I understand.

MR. SMITH: I knew about the bond issue, honestly, because I --

THE COURT: No, you're right about the bond. You're right about the bond.

MR. SMITH: I addressed that before I actually pulled out all this. Sixty-seven I don't have in front of me. I don't read it quite like the Court but I need to research it more to make a representation on our position, whether it affects post-judgment interest.

THE COURT: I think that is right though. Okay. So -- let me think about the execution.

Quite frankly, I don't think -- this case, I don't have a problem stopping them from going after Mr. Trask or the corporation while this is pending because I know it's going up and there's an issue of the amount of damages I let in. And I think that's the issue that they're probably going to look at, myself.

And, quite frankly, I was of the opinion I wasn't going to let it in. And then I heard that Clear Touch grossed over $22 million in one year. You know, that's not appropriate for them to go out there taking their business and making that kind of money. So I let it come in, rightfully or wrongfully. But I don't think it's adequate to put $2 million up in the face of what I anticipate being roughly a seven- or eight-million dollar award by the time I get through with it.

And I'm not ruling that, Josh. Please understand. But I do think these are separate, free-standing causes of action. But, you know, again, the -- you know, the trade secrets, that's not additional amounts. That's just the same amount. Right? I mean, you're not trying to say you get -- okay. In the face of that, I just don't think $2 million is enough. Okay?

So I'm going to hold execution under advisement, attorney's fees under advisement, election of the remedies under advisement. I told you my thoughts. That's probably where I'm going; but I'm going to look at your information and read it thoroughly. I promise you I will. I not will not rule unless I -- and I'm in chambers next week, so I will dedicate time to go over this stuff. Okay?

MR. SMITH: I appreciate that, Your Honor.

THE COURT: So to make sure we're clear on the record, I'm denying plaintiff's motion for equitable remedy. Attorneys fees. On the award of attorney fees, the amount of which needs to be determined, he's only got two causes of action he gets fees under, if any, based on your interpretation of the contract. I think that's probably not a correct interpretation either. But all being said and done, you don't get everything because you only got two causes of action that you had fees under. You're going to have to pare it down. That will take care of your relief or partially take care of the relief you sought.

Election of the remedies, I told you. New trial is denied. Relief from motion -- motion for relief from judgment under Rule 60, is denied. Remittitur is denied. JNOV is denied, and so is 13th juror. So election, execution, attorney fees under advisement, right? Everybody agree with that?

Make sure you got notes on that. I'll forget it by next week, I swear. Anyway -- all right.

Josh, do you feel like you have made a sufficient amount of record? I think you need to make your brief a part of the court record.

MR. SMITH: Yes, Your Honor. It's already been filed.

THE COURT: It has? Okay. To the extent I kept interrupting you, you got it laid out pretty well in your brief. I haven't read it all. Did you submit your notebook as an exhibit?

MR. SMITH: Absolutely.

THE COURT: Mr. English, did you do the same thing?

MR. ENGLISH: Yes. We gave it to the court reporter.

THE COURT: Okay. Great. At least you got that as part of the record. Anything further from the plaintiff before we break?

MR. ENGLISH: No, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Anything further from the defense?

MR. SMITH: No, Your Honor. Thank you.

THE COURT: If any resolution occurs, you-all let me know so I don't read all this stuff. I don't anticipate that's going to happen. But, anyway. All right. Thank you. Appreciate you-all being here. Thank you-all for coming to Anderson.

THE COURT REPORTER: Your Honor, how do I get these exhibits submitted to the Court?

THE COURT: Ma'am?

THE COURT REPORTER: How do I get these exhibits submitted to the Court?

THE COURT: This is over in Greenville. Let me ask, would -- don't we need to get those over to Greenville?

THE COURT REPORTER: We do.

THE COURT: And if so, do you -- I mean, you guys try cases against each other. One or the other -- Mrs. Barker is the most honest person in here.

MR. SMITH: I'll agree with you on that.

THE COURT: You want to let them take the file over to Greenville so they're part of the record in this case?

MR. SMITH: Sure.

THE COURT: You have a problem doing that?

MR. ENGLISH: No. No problem.

THE COURT: She's got a good point. Otherwise, they'll be parked over in here in Anderson County and they'll be lost forever.

THE CLERK: I can always mail them to them.

THE COURT: They can take them. Any problem doing that?

MR. SMITH: No, Your Honor.

THE COURT: I have done it before. It's not a big deal.

THE COURT REPORTER: The only problem for me is I can't give them to them. They have to go to a clerk.

THE COURT: Do what? You can if I say you've got to give them to them. I'll do you an order.

THE COURT REPORTER: You don't even have to do that.

THE COURT: Let's do an order. I'm going to do a Form 4 saying the exhibits are taken by plaintiff's counsel to be deposited at the Greenville County courthouse over the objection of the court reporter.

MR. ENGLISH: I'll make sure that this --

THE COURT: Yeah. Check to make sure.

MR. ENGLISH: This is in the pocket.

MR. SMITH: And I guess these will just go with the trial judge, I assume.

THE COURT: Yeah, maybe it will be post-trial filings. Yeah. But let's make sure, let's put them on the record so when this gets reviewed, somebody is not looking at it in a vacuum and not understanding what we're saying. So outline -- did you mark the exhibits?

THE COURT REPORTER: I haven't yet, but I will.

THE COURT: All right. Let's do that, number them and identify them for the record.

THE COURT REPORTER: They're all one. They're in a grouping. That's one exhibit and that's one exhibit.

THE COURT: Okay. Defense has -- just put in the record what your exhibit number one is, a group exhibit consisting of what?

MR. ENGLISH: Yeah, sure.

MR. SMITH: Happy to do that.

THE COURT: I'm going to let plaintiff do first and let defense go second.

MR. SMITH: Plaintiff --

THE COURT: Hang on. Hang on. Plaintiff goes first.

MR. ENGLISH: Plaintiff's Exhibit 1 is a summary of the requested judgments in favor of Encore Technology Group.

THE COURT: That's your election?

MR. ENGLISH: Yes. Against the Defendant Keone Trask and against defendant Clear Touch with attachments including the jury verdict and the plaintiff's post-trial motions.

THE COURT: And we're going to mark that as Plaintiff's Exhibit No. 1 to post-trial motions?

MR. ENGLISH: Yes.

THE COURT: Okay. Now, Josh, go ahead and do yours, please, sir.

MR. SMITH: Sure. Defendants 1 is defendant's post-trial motions with all the attached exhibits and deposition excerpts. Attached is applicable case law with several cases in it, the original affidavit of Mr. English submitted with the exhibits to that; defendant's response to the plaintiff's post-trial motions; and also plaintiff's responsive filings to one of ours.

There's also the case of Fay v. Total Logistics, LLC, 419 SC 622. There is South Carolina Code 18-9-130. And then a one-page document entitled verdict breakdown, breaking down the verdict all in the pocket of this notebook.

THE COURT: All right. And for the record plaintiff's counsel is going to take Plaintiff's Exhibit No. 1 and Defense Exhibit No. 1 and submit them to the Court in Greenville County with agreement by the defense counsel, correct?

MR. SMITH: Yes, Your Honor. I took out and showed Mr. English. I took this out. This is our internal notes breakdown, our argument. I gave the notebook that Mr. Hudson has. This is our work product that came out of there.

THE COURT: Gotcha.

MR. SMITH: Mr. English saw it and agreed that it

THE COURT: Okay. Great.

(WHEREUPON, Plaintiff's Exhibit No. 1 is marked for identification and received in evidence.)

(WHEREUPON, Defendant's Exhibit No. 1 is marked for identification and received in evidence.)

THE COURT: All right. Anything further from the plaintiff before we close?

MR. ENGLISH: Just for clarification, when should we take those exhibits? After the court reporter is done with the transcript?

THE COURT: I would go ahead and file them today or next week. I mean, I don't think today -- it's already 4:00 -- oh, 2. I am so blind. Just need to do it post haste. I'd take them with you today, that way it's done. And if there is any question, I can talk with -- who would it be, Linda? Or Mr. Pickensimer?

MR. SMITH: Yeah, Mr. Wickensimer or Linda.

THE COURT: Wickensimer. Okay. All right. Thank you guys. Anything from the defense before we break?

MR. SMITH: We're good, Your Honor.

THE COURT: All right. Thank you guys.

(WHEREUPON, court convened with all parties present and the following proceedings were had commencing at 9:05 a.m.)

THE COURT: This first case, Anderson County versus Craft.

THE CLERK: This is Encore.

THE COURT: Encore. All right.

Gentlemen, I'm sorry, and ladies. We have several motions. Tell me about them.

Who wants to stand up and do the honors? Josh?

MR. SMITH: I think we have four outstanding, three from the defendant on our side here. I'm Josh Smith for the defendants, by the way.

We've got our motion to reconsider and then two separate motions to quash, and then Encore has a motion for appointment of receiver.

I think that's all that's before the court. I'm sure Mr. English will tell me if I'm wrong on that.

THE COURT: Let's do your reconsider first.

MR. SMITH: Sure. And I will try to be as time conscious as I can on this. There is a lot to deal with here.

THE COURT: I know. Go ahead.

MR. SMITH: And I don't know how much time the court has based on your jury obligations today.

THE COURT: Just keep going, and we'll stop you or reign you in if we have to. How about that?

MR. SMITH: Sounds good.

Again, I'll try not to replow some of the same ground we have gone over because there are some arguments that we have, obviously, put before the court before on these issues. Anyway, we're going to break it up in sections here, and I believe you have the motion before you.

I'm actually going to start a little out of order because I think there's some low-hanging fruit here that I think really needs to be addressed here first and foremost, so I'm going to kind of go to the back.

THE COURT: What page am I going to?

MR. SMITH: Sure. That's what I was going to try to find for you.

I'll start with the fees, and that is subsection 7, which let me find the page in the motion for Your Honor.

That's starting on page 26.

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. SMITH: And this should be fairly simple, I believe. The total fees that Encore sought and put before the court -- I'm just going to make the number even -- 345,000 and change. 345,601.

And we had a post-trial motion hearing before the court in mid November. And let me hand everybody little snippets of the transcript we're talking about for different things.

Do you mind if I approach?

THE COURT: No, sir.

MR. SMITH: And during that hearing, we talked about the fees, obviously, and the costs that Encore sought. And if you look in here, on page 18 of the transcript I just handed to you -- and everybody's is highlighted with the same exact highlights, obviously.

On page 18 and on page 55, there is a recognition that fees were only obtainable under some of the causes of action alleged in this case, and, therefore, they need to be pared down proportionately. And everyone recognized that. The court recognized that during the hearing.

Again, it's on page 18 here and on page 55 where the court says, "It is my thought if you're only getting it" -- talking about attorneys' fees -- "for one cause of action, you shouldn't be entitled to an award of all your attorneys' fees and costs in this case." I don't think it's appropriate. I think the cases say that, too. You've got to pare it down to reasonably incurred as a result of that.

And then we kind of did a wrap-up on page 55, which is good because that was a long hearing, of the rulings that were made to put up several post-judgment -- excuse me, post-trial motions.

And on page 55, in summarizing, you say, "An award of attorneys' fees, an amount of which needs to be determined. He has only got two causes of action to get under, if any. With all that being said, you don't get everything because you only got two causes of action that you can get fees under. You're going to have to pare it down."

But the order submitted to the court, adopted by the court, gave all the fees. So we think that's low-hanging fruit. That absolutely needs to be pared down proportionately to the causes of action.

THE COURT: Let me stop you right there.

Mr. English, are you going to argue this?

MR. ENGLISH: Yes, Your Honor.

THE COURT: All right, sir.

MR. ENGLISH: Your Honor, and I would point out in the court's -- the court's order addressed this on pages 8 through 10 of the final order and judgment. And the court noted that the Uhlig case that the defendants cite points out the first step in the analysis is to determine, are the plaintiffs entitled to attorneys' fees under any scheme, number one. And they were under multiple causes of action. And then, number two, what is a reasonable amount of attorneys' fees.

And the court cited in its order from the Hensley U.S. Supreme Court case saying that, "In determining what is" -- I'm quoting now. "In determining what is proportional, the court should not employ a strict mathematical approach; rather, courts should look at the degree of plaintiff's overall success in determining reasonableness."

So what the defendants would have you do is tally the causes of action that we prevailed on, the ones we didn't, and employ a fraction against our fees. And that's been expressly rejected.

The court noted in its orders that the costs of presenting the two causes of action that we didn't prevail on, and that would be the unfair trade practices and conspiracy claims, the additional costs of presenting those or pursuing those claim was minimal. And the court also noted that we were not getting fees for all the post-trial work that we've done in briefing and responding to the numerous motions.

I think the defendants had ten post-trial motions, and we didn't get any sort of award of fees for that. And then the court noted that in the Uhlig case, which was a very similar case to the Encore case, the court there ordered $1.8 million in fees compared to 345,000 in our case.

And I will finally point out the Supreme Court of South Carolina just issued a decision in Horton versus Jasper County. It was filed May 30, 2018. In that case the judge cut back fees, for it was a simple Freedom of Information Act case to get records.

THE COURT: Is that the one that dropped it to $100 an hour?

MR. ENGLISH: Yes. And the court said no. And they awarded $35,000 in fees just for that simple thing. So I think the approach on the law that the defendants are asking for is wrong, and I think the court's order does the correct thing in determining that we didn't get a whole loaf and what we asked for was reasonable.

THE COURT: Thank you.

Any brief reply to that?

MR. SMITH: Yes, briefly. And Mr. English and I, obviously, did the same research because I have that same recent case which lays out the six factors the court has to consider under South Carolina law. And I've got a copy of that if the court would like it. I'm sure you have seen it and are familiar.

The plaintiffs focus a lot on the result, and, obviously, that's a factor that goes into the analysis, but that's not the only one. And post-trial work doesn't make -- you know, it's part of this, especially a complicated, long case. They said they're not going for fees, whether or not fees are reasonable for the work done for which they're sought. Because you do more work on the seeking fees doesn't make those fees reasonable in the first place.

And then, lastly, the portion of the order Mr. English pointed to saying that -- where it finds that the fees incurred -- let's see. Here we go. Page 9 of the order: "Although Encore did not prevail upon two causes of action, any additional fees and costs to present each additional cause of action would only be minimal," period. There's no basis for that finding. There simply isn't. It was put in the order, and I understand the court adopted it, but there's no basis for that finding.

THE COURT: Thank you, sir.

What's your next aspect of your motion to reconsider?

MR. SMITH: Sure. Again, I'm working a little backwards. Let me find the right page for you.

This is still towards the back of the motion, Your Honor. I think it's the last heading I have here, Roman numeral VIII, page 28 to 29. This is, again, low-hanging fruit. That's why I want to address this, too, upfront, but it's very important to my client.

This is talking about the basis for the court denying our request to post a bond. And, again, I don't know if you remember talking about that issue during the post-trial hearing -- again, it was several months ago -- but what we had asked the court to do is, under the statute, excuse me, that provides for, the 18-9-130, to post a bond to secure the judgments pending an appeal, right?

And if you remember, we had a long discussion because that statute caps the amount of the bond depending on if it's an individual, if it's a corporation with less than 50 people.

So in this one, we had individual, obviously, and we had the corporation with less than 50 people with Clear Touch. And if you recall, the bond statute, the one very on point here, gave the court the discretion to deny the bond but also said it's a million-dollar cap. It was 25 million if the company was over 50 people, or a million dollars cap, whichever, I think, is less. Or more. I can't remember the language.

The point was, under the applicable language of that statute, it was the most that could be put up for Mr. Trask was a million dollars and the same for the company.

So in the order, the basis put out for denying that request for the bond is not the basis the court said in the hearing. If you look again on the reference of the transcript I handed to you, Your Honor, if you flip over starting on page 47, it's this last little collection of pages I have here. It's where we're having this discussion in the post-trial hearing. And we are talking about the limits of that statute, like I just went through, kind of gave a rundown of our back-and-forth during that hearing.

And what the court says and what this transcript reflects, that the court denied my request, denying defendant's request for the bond because, saying, look, the amount of the judgment is too much in comparison to how much you can put up for the bond under the statute, because you can only put up two million tops, and we're looking at, potentially, an 8-, $9 million verdict.

So the court said, "I don't think that's adequate to secure the bond." That was your basis for the ruling. And understandable. Reasonable based on the strict math and numbers. But the order is problematic.

I'm looking at page 54 where you say, quote, "But I don't think it's adequate to put up $2 million in the face of what I anticipate being roughly a 7- or $8 million award, by the time I get through with it anyway." That was your basis.

Well, looking at the order, there's all kinds of stuff in there that's problematic, and it doesn't reflect the basis --

THE COURT: Where in the order is that?

MR. SMITH: Yes. Yes, Your Honor. I'm flipping.

MR. ENGLISH: Page 33, Your Honor.

MR. SMITH: Thank you. On page 33 there is a whole bullet point list talking about alleged destruction of evidence, saying Mr. Trask admitted he destroyed evidence and doing all these bad things, and this is the basis for you denying that bond.

Well, it's not. And the problem with all this language, all these bullet points, is some of them flatly aren't true. We submitted a redline that highlighted all those. It said over and over again -- you're going to hear me talk about this a fair amount today -- over and over again in this order that Mr. Trask admitted to destroying evidence. That didn't happen. He didn't do that. And talking about e-mail migration, things like that, that he get the details --

THE COURT: Let me ask you this about that: Are we talking about the e-mails that were discovered through the other former employees? If I recall, wasn't that along the lines -- is that what the evidence was that allegedly was destroyed?

MR. ENGLISH: That was one of the things, yes.

THE COURT: I mean, I think to make a carte blanche statement that it didn't happen is probably not accurate characterization either. I think that the evidence -- he denied it, clearly, but I think that there is an inference that could be drawn from the testimony presented that that is what happened.

MR. SMITH: I understand Your Honor's position. And I agree with you that an inference can be drawn by some of the evidence.

THE COURT: Let me stop you there.

MR. SMITH: Sure.

THE COURT: Why is it not sufficient for purposes of denying the bond, just say the amount is insufficient, bar none, and stop?

MR. ENGLISH: Well, the General Assembly has said that if a defendant is entitled to a bond, then the amount is one million. And so what the defendants would like Your Honor to say is you're just comparing the amount of the bond to -- it's almost like you're rejecting the General Assembly setting of the amount, and that's not what the court was doing.

What the court was comparing this request for a stay to was the conduct of the defendants that resulted in a multimillion-dollar verdict by the jury for punitive damages. And it's that conduct that means that we should be able to be allowed to pursue discovery and --

THE COURT: That's beside the point.

MR. ENGLISH: Right.

THE COURT: And the point I'm making, and I think that Josh is correct -- excuse me for saying Josh. My memory of this, of that hearing, was that we're looking at a cap of around two million, if that's what it is, in the face of a verdict that's around 8-plus, somewhere in there, is insufficient to protect the plaintiff's judgment in the event that you are successful on appeal. And so all the other flowery language may be -- because that's why you have punitive damages in the first place -- may be inherent in the order itself. But in the denial of the motion for bond, why again is it not sufficient to say it's not a sufficient amount to protect the judgment that you received in this case?

MR. ENGLISH: Well --

THE COURT: I don't see any harm or foul one way or the other.

MR. ENGLISH: I think the defendants will argue on appeal that if you're limiting the adequacy to just comparing the amount of the verdict to the amount set by the General Assembly, they will say that you're trying to overrule the General Assembly. And our point is there is --

THE COURT: I thought the statute gave me discretion in the first place.

MR. SMITH: It does, Your Honor, and I will represent right now --

THE COURT: How can I be overruling the General Assembly in any form or fashion? And I wouldn't do that.

MR. ENGLISH: I don't think you would be. I'm just anticipating what I think they will argue on appeal, and I'm trying to say there's also, in addition to a quantitative inadequacy, there is a qualitative inadequacy that supports the amount of the bond.

THE COURT: What's the next point?

MR. SMITH: Sure. I hate to -- our concern just -- I wouldn't argue that on appeal. It's a novel and interesting theory.

THE COURT: Well, what if I put language in the order that says nothing contained in this order shall be deemed fact.

MR. SMITH: I think that would be great, Your Honor, because that's exactly my concern. I think you're seeing my concern because we will see later in the receiver motion -- that's what I'm holding -- they translate that, the exact bullet points I have a problem with, into the receiver order, trying to say these things enough to where it's utilizing it against my client to get other things. And that's on page 3 of the receiver motion. But we'll get to that. I mean, but that's my concern, so I appreciate Your Honor listening to that.

All right. So those are the two low-hanging fruit items, I think, in the motion to reconsider I wanted to address up front.

Now, I'm going to start working top to bottom here, so starting on the first page and the first item, this election of remedies. And the order found that Encore only needed to elect its remedies between the breach of contract and tortious interference cause of action, it said because the jury awarded the same actual damages of 424 and change under those claims. So they said, okay, the three awards, they were the same, you got to elect into those, and that's that.

Those -- the issues, and we went through in detail here in the filings, were there is some specific factual findings about the basis for the jury's awards of damages all throughout this order saying, you know, on page 25, said those damages, according to the order, were to compensate Encore for the lost sales on account of --

THE COURT: For what? I'm sorry.

MR. SMITH: Excuse me. That was actually inaccurate. I read my note wrong.

You note in the order that the 424 is to compensate for the damages to Leon County's sales. That does line up, and there is a basis for that.

There is a couple issues we have with the conclusion on the election. One, there is -- we'll go through. There's several erroneous and inappropriate factual findings, we think, in the order that make -- the court making factual findings as to what the jury did and why, without any evidence supporting that and invading the province of the jury's factual finding function. And I'll go through those.

We believe there is a conclusion there that the damages are distinct is inaccurate, and there is an overly narrow application of the election doctrine.

So, first, there is numerous factual findings that were relied upon, that, as I said, the jury relied upon and define Encore's breach of duty. What was the breach of fiduciary duty? Breach of contract, fraud, and trade secret claims. Those are all the ones under which they are seeking recovery and which the court ordered recovery.

And looking on 26 and 27 of the order --

THE COURT: 27?

MR. SMITH: 26 to 27, Your Honor. So here is what the order determines that the jury found. It said, one: "The court determines Trask breached its fiduciary duties by failing to disclose the identity of Clear Touch suppliers to Encore so they can purchase direct. Two, that Trask violated the Trade Secrets Act by using Encore's trade secrets information regarding Leon County schools' needs for and purchase price of panels. Three, the jury found Trask liable for breach of contract by fraud based upon violation of non-disclosure, non-solicitation agreements, business opportunity clause; and, four, Clear Touch violated the Trade Secrets Act by using Encore's trade secret information regarding Leon County Schools' need for and purchase price for panels." And that's 26 to 27.

Well, as I said, these are all factual findings that would be made by a jury. And I just don't see, defendants don't see how the court can say, okay, the jury found liability based on these specific facts when there is overlapping facts that could have given liability to Encore -- excuse me, to the defendants based on the various causes of action.

I mean, for example, Leon County, we're all familiar with Leon County now, right? So let's say that the fact Leon County wanted to purchase more panels and the prices and preferences was a trade secret. Well, if Mr. Trask and Clear Touch utilized it to make the sales to Leon County, that would violate the Trade Secrets Act so they could be liable for trade secret misappropriation.

In the same vein, Mr. Trask doing that same thing would violate his employment agreement, non-disclosure non-solicitation agreement, so it would be a breach of contract. So it's the same facts overlapping different liabilities under different causes of action.

The problem we have with the order is it segments the facts to each cause of action under which they're recovering in order to avoid the election and says it distinctly and definitively as if the jury said, "We found Mr. Trask was liable for Trade Secrets Act because he used the trade secrets regarding Leon County. We found that he was liable for the breach of contract fraud claim because he violated the business opportunity provision of the contract."

I just don't think the court can make that definitive call, and that's how the order is written, in order to avoid the election issue.

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. SMITH: And --

THE COURT: Let me ask you this. My memory of the evidence presented and Mr. English's closing arguments was that he went through each separate cause of action, and this is what we're asking for here and this is why we're asking for this, and these are the things that we think they did, and he went through that in his presentation of the case and in closing argument in this case. Is that not part -- isn't that not correct?

MR. SMITH: I think the way you're saying it, Your Honor, yes.

THE COURT: And I don't necessarily disagree that for me to say the jury found this and found this, but that was the evidence and testimony presented and the arguments made to the jury which, apparently, they adopted.

And maybe I should qualify it by saying "apparently," but showing that there are different elements that were pursued and followed and different evidence and damages associated with each, which falls into the election of remedies issue. All right?

MR. SMITH: Yes, Your Honor.

THE COURT: How else would you do it? I'm not sure how I should do it any other way. And I don't pretend to have any crystal ball here. So, I mean, you can say what you want. It doesn't hurt my feelings. Okay?

MR. SMITH: Okay. I get what you're saying, and, yes, I see what you're saying. I think our main issue with this -- we have argued the other issues we have with this remedies thing to death. And I don't feel like we need to do it again today.

THE COURT: Let's not.

MR. SMITH: Good. We're all in agreement.

Our main issue with the order on this is what I just said, is there is distinct factual findings. It says the court has found that the jury determined liability based on this specific fact with this specific cause of action. That's the defendant's problem. I just don't think the court can do that unless the jury returned even a more specialized form than we gave them and said, hey, we found liability under the Trade Secrets Act because of this. We just can't do that. Especially -- and there's nothing wrong with pleading alternative theories. That's something -- we get to do that. I don't have a problem with that.

But the fact is the court can't -- I don't believe the court can definitively say what the jury based each cause of action on and segment out all those different facts. That's the issue.

THE COURT: I gotcha.

Mr. English, briefly.

MR. ENGLISH: Yes. Your Honor, that's not what the court did in the order. On page 2, the court set forth the standard that was raised when the defendants moved for election of remedies and also when they moved for a new trial under the 13th juror doctrine. They're asking the court to see: Does the evidence support the jury's verdict? And on page 2 we cite the Davis versus Cleary case that says it's the duty of the court to sustain verdicts when a logical reason for reconciling them can be found.

That's what the court is doing, is saying: Was there evidence that supported the verdict? And specifically on page 26, the court said specifically: "The evidence including but not limited to one of the exhibits supported the jury's findings." So it's not that the court is making its own findings, it's just responding to the motion by the defendants saying that the evidence dictated the result that they wanted, and the court's saying no, under the law, I can reconcile these verdicts, and that reconciliation was supported by evidence.

THE COURT: Thank you.

Next aspect of your motion.

MR. SMITH: Sure, Your Honor. I'm looking through. I don't want to replow the same grounds we argued on the remedies issue.

One more thing on the remedies issue here is the treatment of it seems a little bit overly narrow and simplistic. The way the order reads, it says -- it misconstrues our argument, but to make it very, very simplistic, and I don't think in accord with the purpose and import of the rule on page 25 of the order, it says our argument was Encore should have had to elect one, other than breach of duty or loyalty, because they committed, quote, a single wrong, and that Encore, quote, sought the exact same damages for the same injury.

Well, our argument wasn't that narrow. Again, we argued that they relied on the same facts to establish different liabilities, but they sought the same damages. So we've gone over that.

THE COURT: All right.

MR. SMITH: That's where that ends up on that issue.

So move on to the next one.

THE COURT: Yes, sir.

MR. SMITH: This is starting on page 9, I believe, Your Honor, Roman numeral II. Again, I'm moving best I can here not to replow the ground of the other motion.

THE COURT: You said page 9?

MR. SMITH: Yes, Your Honor, starting on Roman numeral II.

THE COURT: Page 9 of your motion?

MR. SMITH: Yes. Sorry. This is talking about the new trial. This is, again, the presentation of the Michael Knight testimony about the computer search, and we have discussed the lead-up to that, and the court heard all that in the original post-trial motion.

One additional thing to point out, one thing to point out, if you flip over, starting on page 11 going to 12, it's the final point here. And we cite Rule 26(c). And the reason we cite that is because our contention was Encore is obligated to tell us about this evidence that Michael Knight has done a computer search prior to trial. And Rule 26(c), I have the law quoted there on page 12, says, A party who's responded to a request for discovery with the response that was complete when made is under no duty to supplement his response to include information thereafter required except in a request for discovery under Rules 31, 33, 34, 36 shall be deemed to continue from the time of service until the time of trial of the action so the information sought which comes to the knowledge of a party or its representative or attorney after original answers have been submitted shall be promptly transmitted to the other party.

Well, if you look, we've got -- I've quoted, so you don't have to look at the exhibit. It's Exhibit A, Encore responses to our interrogatories, one of which asked, quote, "Set forth with specificity all facts and evidence plaintiff has to support the allegations of paragraph 33 of the complaint which allege Trask accessed Encore's computer system with or in excess of authorization and destroyed Encore property, software, and files. Specifically identify each and every item of Encore property, software, and files plaintiff claims Trask destroyed." That interrogatory covered Michael Knight Computer Service, and we weren't told about it before trial, and we think under Rule 26(e), they were obligated to do it.

THE COURT: All right, Mr. English.

MR. ENGLISH: Your Honor, first of all, that's a new argument that was not made in the initial motion for a new trial complaining about the degree of specificity in the interrogatory answers.

I will say that throughout the case -- and we did cite in response to the argument in the motion for new trial that Mr. Newnam specifically testified in his deposition about the deletion of these e-mails and also Mr. Viola, who produced some of Mr. Trask's evidence that Mr. Trask himself had not produced, gave a deposition before trial where he testified about it, so they were on notice that this was going to come up, and they weren't surprised by this issue.

THE COURT: All right. One thing that I have to say that strikes me about Mr. Trask's argument at this stage, quite frankly, I felt like he did destroy evidence from what I -- I know you disagree, and that's okay. And I'm not the fact finder. But from what I saw and what I heard, it looked like he, in fact, did. That's up to the jury to make a determination about that.

However, for Mr. Trask to come back and say this happened or this didn't happen but they should have told me anyway is kind of confirming his own bad conduct, and I think that played into my allowing that into evidence as well as the fact that that issue was you were on notice of it from the deposition. So with that being said, let's go to the next issue, please.

MR. SMITH: In the new trial stuff, we can rely on the briefs for that and the previous motion --

THE COURT: Right.

MR. SMITH: -- and the discussions we had on that.

Give me a moment, Your Honor. I'm trying to make this shorter.

THE COURT: I'm going to read all this, I promise you.

MR. SMITH: I appreciate that because it works better for everybody to make a point.

We can go to the next Roman numeral V that starts on page 19, I think.

THE COURT: Let me ask you this right quick, make sure you have your issue preservation and your record.

Have you filed your motion, your memorandum?

MR. SMITH: Yes, Your Honor. This is filed. And if the court is going to read it --

THE COURT: I am going to read it. I wanted to make sure in the event it's not discussed on the record, it's part of the record.

MR. SMITH: Yes, Your Honor. I would be much more lengthy if I had not filed it, but I do appreciate that.

You know, I think this lays out well our points and our issues, and I think the more practical motions that were on here today probably deserve a little more time than this. I mean, I understand it's a motion to reconsider, I'm asking you to reconsider decisions you have already made. We have pointed out a lot of the issues with the order in here. I do want to highlight real briefly the main ones we have gone over on this.

There is a considerable amount of factual findings in here on the court. The court is saying specifically -- now, Mr. English has pointed out there is a couple that hedge, that say "apparently this," "apparently that," but there is several distinct factual findings, including in the breakdown of the damages which really matters under the election.

Remember the charts we all did because we all had to, to keep this straight. There's brackets beside those numbers that say what they're based in.

THE COURT: Say that again, please.

MR. SMITH: If you look at the chart in the order where it breaks down the damages, there is brackets beside the verdict numbers saying the specific factual basis upon which the jury based those numbers. And I think you have got to have it one way or the other. You have got to say there was sufficient evidence for the jury to arrive at these numbers based on these things, but I think it's a step too far when an order puts a specific factual basis for a particular number because -- and we're talking about not invading the province of the jury on one hand and then going into it on the other. So it's problematic. I think the court understands my point on that.

There are many -- I don't know how many. I counted at one point. I don't remember the number -- times in this order that says "Trask admitted he destroyed e-mail evidence." My client -- I understand the court's position. You might not believe him. He never admitted to destroying evidence.

THE COURT: Let me stop you right there.

Mr. English, do you disagree with that because I seem to recall that he is one hundred percent correct that he did not admit to destroying evidence?

MR. ENGLISH: I recall -- Ms. Barker and I looked back at our notes on this, and on our notes --

THE COURT: I assume you had the transcript of the trial.

MR. ENGLISH: We don't have the trial transcript, but both of our notes reflect I asked Mr. Trask, "So isn't it true you destroyed e-mails?" And he said something like, "E-mails were destroyed." So he didn't deny he did it, and his answer was such that he essentially admitted.

And I think the way we characterize it in the order -- I'm not sure what specific provision Mr. Smith is complaining about, but I think the way we characterized this was consistent with Ms. Barker and my notes of what was said at trial.

THE COURT: Thank you, sir.

MR. SMITH: I just want to be consistent with what actually happened at trial, which is my client didn't admit he destroyed things, and it's throughout here. I submitted the redline. It's Exhibit D to my filed motion, which you have. So it notes each instance in which it's a blank statement, he admitted this happened. And it's utilized to justify some conclusions and some rulings and that didn't happen.

I understand you can couch it differently, but it does matter. And, again, because we will see in the receiver motion, because it will again be used as an attempt to get a receiver when it didn't happen.

THE COURT: All right, sir.

MR. SMITH: That's all we have on that. I mean, I appreciate the court taking the time to read the motion and the filing we have. I know it's going to take some time. And we're happy to submit, if you come upon an issue that needs further briefing, I'm happy to submit that to the court.

THE COURT: Say that one more time.

MR. SMITH: If you read through this and something comes up and you would like further briefing -- probably won't -- but I'd be happy to submit something quick-like.

THE COURT: What's the next motion?

MR. SMITH: All right. Simpler. I've got two motions to quash. And if the court recalls, it denied the motion of stay of execution by issuance of a bond, but you did, thankfully, and I think rightfully, allow us to pay the judgments in the court under Rule 67. So the judgment --

THE COURT: The total amount is to be paid into the court?

MR. SMITH: Yes, Your Honor. Clear Touch has paid the entirety of the judgment against it into court, the 1.7. That's inclusive of all the fees and costs and the entirety of the judgment against the corporation. So it was -- if you look at, you have --

THE COURT: That leaves how much remaining against Mr. Trask?

MR. SMITH: Mr. Trask?

THE COURT: I mean --

MR. SMITH: Yes, it's Mr. Trask. But they're separate and apart, obviously.

THE COURT: Sure.

MR. SMITH: So the one against Mr. Trask I think is 7 and change with punitives and all that stuff. And I think that's adding in the fees and costs as well.

THE COURT: So what is it you're trying to quash? They're trying to get to the corporation assets?

MR. SMITH: Yes, sir. There's two different motions to quash because there's two different subpoenas.

So the first one I have here is issued to Smith and Shin CPAs. That's my client's accounting firm. And you've got the subpoena right there. It is Exhibit A to the motion. And if you -- there are several problems with it.

I mean, first and foremost, anything that deals with a corporation we think is off limits. I mean, the corporation has paid the judgment against them into court. The plaintiff's fully secure with that judgment.

THE COURT: Didn't the evidence presented at trial show that this was a single-member LLC with Mr. Trask being the sole member of the LLC, mother being registered agent in her former maiden name; isn't that what the evidence presented showed?

MR. SMITH: It did for one point, but that has changed since Kathy Cruz came in.

THE COURT: Well, that might be a whole different issue.

MR. SMITH: It has not changed since trial. Nothing changed since trial. The way the corporate makeup looks now -- that's the exact question and issue I'm getting to -- is in 2014, when they transitioned, if you remember, it was an LLC initially.

THE COURT: Right.

MR. SMITH: And then in 2014, January 2014, it did a corporate conversion to an Inc. And the reason they did that was because Mr. Trask's IRA money was the capital money they needed to put into the business, and there was some legal requirement which I'm not versed enough in to explain, to where the IRA had to be a hundred percent owner of the business in order to put all of its funds into the business. That's the corporate structure.

The IRA is a sole owner, hundred percent owner of the business. Now, Mr. Trask is the beneficiary of that IRA, but if you allow me to pass up some law here.

THE COURT: There is a rule that says you can't get into IRAs.

MR. SMITH: There is a lot of highlighting on this.

THE COURT: I don't think anybody disputes that, but let me ask you this: I seem to recall, I do remember that the corporation was funded with an IRA of Mr. Trask, and that because it was his, it had to be the single-member entity. But I also recall that the corporation had some kind of gross proceeds of around $21 million or so in the year leading up to the litigation. Am I wrong?

MR. SMITH: I think there was a gross revenue amount I put out there.

THE COURT: I don't know what the net was.

MR. SMITH: Yes, Your Honor. I think there was a gross amount put out there at trial of one year, maybe 17, that was not the net value. But I don't think that affects in any way and has no bearing upon whether or not the property, to get into the business, just because it does well and the structure of it prohibits it, I think, I mean, the business paid the entirety of the judgment against it in court.

THE COURT: Well, let me ask you this. Assume, and I know, I mean, the IRA, it's off limits or retirement or pensions are off limits for collection or garnishment, things of that nature, but why shouldn't the plaintiff be allowed to look in there and see what's out there and see if there is any assets of the corporation that are attributable to Mr. Trask to help satisfy the verdict against him? I don't see any harm or foul. If they can't get it, they can't get it. But if they don't get a chance to look, there's a chance that they won't be able to be compensated for this verdict in the event that it's upheld on appeal.

MR. SMITH: I understand the company makes a lot of money. I see the concern you're putting out there, but I think it's doing it in reverse. I think they get to look at Mr. Trask's stuff. I'm not here saying they don't, and we're gathering those things up. The judgment out there is against him. If they see things in there, I think, that show, okay, you're doing something with the corporation; it's funneling money to you or you're doing something funny with this asset that he doesn't own and that his IRA owns and is not collectible, I think a competitor digging into it and getting all their financials.

And if you look at the breadth of this, this subpoena is massive. I mean, they want stuff on the Trask Family Trust, on Tamara Trask. I mean, you know, it's too much, too far. Tamara Trask isn't a part of this.

THE COURT: Let me look at this subpoena right quick.

MR. SMITH: There are two subpoenas. I'm looking at the one to the accountant, Your Honor.

THE COURT: You're looking at which one?

MR. SMITH: The one to the accountant, Brandon K. Smith, Smith and Shin CPAs.

THE COURT: Exhibit A has CatchFire Funding.

MR. SMITH: That is a different motion. I had two separate motions to quash.

THE COURT: I am sorry.

MR. SMITH: That's fine. They look very similar.

LAW CLERK: Josh, did you give us a copy of the second one?

MR. SMITH: Yes. They look almost identical.

THE COURT: Let me see your motion, please.

I want to hear -- I mean, first, when you're going into Clear Touch Interactive, regardless of whether or not it may have paid the total judgment against itself, I think that the plaintiffs have a right to look into the workings, maybe under a protective order, maybe under some kind of confidentiality order, but have a right to look in there to see what's going on with the assets of the corporation to see if any property attributable to the individual plaintiff or individual defendant in this action, because there is such a large number -- even if there wasn't such a large number, because it may be assets or things that they can seek to obtain to help satisfy their verdict.

Now, I don't disagree with you that this issue of the Trask Family Trust, I have a hard time seeing how you can get into that, quite frankly. They're not a party. That's a separate entity in and of itself. That may be something later that you pursue in collections after the remittitur comes back, assuming you uphold the judgment. But right now, I don't see that.

So tell me -- I'm going to give you a chance -- what are the particular -- I know you don't want any of the corporate stuff. I am going to disagree with you on that.

But I am, Mr. English, going to make you do it under a confidentiality order.

MR. ENGLISH: We have one that applies even during an appeal.

THE COURT: Okay. Now, other areas outside Clear Touch Interactive?

MR. SMITH: Tamara Trask, Trask Family Trust.

THE COURT: Trask Family Trust, okay.

MR. SMITH: I think Tamara, Ms. Trask, is off limits. I think the Trask Family Trust is off limits.

THE COURT: What was the other one? I don't disagree with you on the Trask Family Trust.

MR. SMITH: Tamara, the wife, Tamara Trask.

THE COURT: Her personal assets?

MR. SMITH: Yes, they're asking for Ms. Trask's personal -- I mean, this accountant does their personal tax returns as well.

THE COURT: Well, I don't think I agree with you on that one. She was a participant as far as the conduct in this case. She was sending these e-mails back and forth as if she were a seller or whatever, somebody who's doing business with the plaintiff.

She's also named, I believe, as the registered agent, after the defendant's mother, in her maiden name, no longer was the registered agent. So I think the plaintiff should have a right to determine whether there is any fraudulent transfers going on post-judgment to see if the conduct continues. And if there's not, again, there is a confidentiality order that you can put in place that you can't use against her. But I think they have a right, based on their history in this case and the facts that have been presented, to go uncover that, quite frankly.

MR. SMITH: I respectfully disagree.

THE COURT: The Trask Family Trust, I think, is an entirely different instrument.

MR. SMITH: I appreciate the court's -- I appreciate being frank with that. I respectfully disagree with the individual.

THE COURT: Well, you won't be the first nor the last, I promise you.

MR. SMITH: I know. And thank you, Your Honor. I think you would have to actually get to a piercing-type standard there to get into the corporation and then reverse, trying to get out to the individual who wasn't named and all that, but --

THE COURT: Piercing was not alleged.

MR. SMITH: It was not. And that's another reason I have a problem with getting so deep into the corporate books, because I think it's -- well, it's intrusive and invasive, one; and, two, you're looking -- you're spending time and effort and money on both sides looking at something you can't get.

THE COURT: Well, I think the distinction would be, in my mind, at least, if their money is being distributed or attributable to the individual as opposed to taking the corporate asset and applying it to the individual, and I think that's the difference. Okay? But, all right.

All said and done, I'm going to hear -- any other things about this subpoena other than the wife, the corporation, and I know the Trask Family Trust. I want Mr. English to talk to me about that. Any other issues about particular areas being requested?

MR. SMITH: I am looking to make sure. It' very broad. Real estate holdings. I understand the court's position on Ms. Trask and the corporation, so contact information, financial accounts, and other advisors, I don't really care. I don't think there's really anybody besides Mr. Smith of Smith and Shin.

THE COURT: Say that again.

MR. SMITH: I highlighted the last contact information of financial accounting, other advisors, but that doesn't really bother me.

THE COURT: So tell me why you should be able to get into some trust at this point.

MR. ENGLISH: Well, keep in mind, Judge, this is just discovery of what assets either Mr. Trask has which could be -- and we don't know anything -- I'll tell you what we know about the Trask Family Trust.

The only thing we know is during the pendency of the lawsuit, the Trasks transferred property from their individual names into this trust. And so we're entitled to discovery about, what is this trust? Is it a revocable or irrevocable trust? Was this a fraudulent conveyance? And by trying to prevent us from having any discovery about that, they're trying to prevent us from being able to bring a fraudulent conveyance action, if that's what happened, but it looks like that's what happened.

THE COURT: Let me ask you this. When I heard the Trask Family Trust, I'm thinking in terms of a trust that's been in existence for a long time, it's a family situation that they set up. He may be a beneficiary of the trust. But if it's like Mr. English has described, it was created during the pendency of this suit and created by Mr. Trask and his wife, then why should that be off limits?

MR. SMITH: That's different. I haven't seen this evidence. I don't know it. So this is news to me. If that happened, okay, we have a different discussion.

THE COURT: Right.

MR. SMITH: So I think the discussion would be different. So they have some --

THE COURT: Tell you what. Let's do this. I need to take a quick break.

Mr. English, show him what you're talking about and give him a minute to look at it, and I'll be right back.

Thank you, guys.

(WHEREUPON, a recess was taken from 9:56 a.m. to 10:01 a.m.)

THE COURT: Have you had a chance to look at the plaintiff's information?

MR. SMITH: Yes. It was part of the motion for receiver. It was in there, so I assume we're going to talk about this more. So it looks like there was a transfer in May 2017 to the trust.

THE COURT: That being Mr. Trask and his wife?

MR. SMITH: I'm going to be honest with you, Your Honor, I cannot speak intelligently on it because I don't know the inner workings of it.

THE COURT: Let me do this. I'm going to deny your motion to quash this subpoena to the CPA.

MR. SMITH: Okay.

THE COURT: I'm going to require there be a protective order that, if you guys can't agree on, come to me. I'll make sure it's right, but I'm going to deny that motion.

MR. SMITH: In the protective order that Mr. English said, rightfully, there's one place. Could I ask for some attorneys' eyes only incorporation in that? Because we don't have an attorneys' eyes only provision.

THE COURT: You don't have a what, please?

MR. SMITH: Attorneys' eyes only provision in the order that we have.

THE COURT: Do you have a problem with that?

MR. ENGLISH: Well, it depends on what specific documents he wants to mark attorneys' eyes only.

THE COURT: Well, normally, there is a confidentiality order, you put that it's subject to contempt, and anybody who is given the information will have to sign acknowledgement that a violation of this order will subject them to contempt. I think that would protect you, what you're concerned about.

Is that kind of provision in that order, Mr. English?

MR. ENGLISH: I think it is. It's a standard federal order.

THE COURT: If it's not, it needs to be put in there.

MR. SMITH: Yes, Your Honor. Standard federal order. I was just asking for it for the corporate stuff just because -- based on we've got a competitor --

THE COURT: Yeah, trade secrets, things of that nature, Mr. English, as you know, might have you back in court if you start using them.

MR. ENGLISH: Absolutely. My client knows that, too. They want to keep everything clean.

THE COURT: If you have, again, a problem with the wording in the order, let me know.

Second motion to quash.

MR. SMITH: Yes. This one was issued to CatchFire Funding. And both the CPA and CatchFire were actually subpoenaed in the action before trial. This is a mirror image subpoena of the one issued at trial with an updated time. The CatchFire is an entity through which Clear Touch did that corporate conversion I mentioned, the LLC to Inc., in January of 2014. And, again, this is the same -- and I think I probably know where the court is going on this, but that, I mean, the corporate conversion documents --

THE COURT: When did the corporate conversion take place?

MR. SMITH: January 2014. Again, this is a mirror image.

THE COURT: When was this case filed?

MR. SMITH: Late '15. I want to say December of 2015.

MR. ENGLISH: September.

MR. SMITH: September 2015, right. So, I mean, I just think this thing is just irrelevant. There's no reason to bother CatchFire Funding in trying to get more stuff. I think it's going to be the exact same.

THE COURT: Who is CatchFire Funding?

MR. SMITH: It's an entity out in Colorado.

THE COURT: Are they a factoring group or something?

MR. SMITH: No, I don't believe so. They may factor, but they were part of doing the corporate conversion stuff for my client. This is before -- before they were my client.

THE COURT: Sure, sure, sure.

MR. SMITH: And Mr. English, obviously, has something here. They may do some factoring. But I just don't think getting into the corporate assets -- again, it's the same argument I had before. They paid in the judgment before.

THE COURT: All right. Mr. English.

MR. ENGLISH: Again, we're talking about discovery of CatchFire which we already got some documents from prior to trial, and now we're trying to update that concerning the assets which may be used to satisfy the $8 million award of the jury.

I want to hand up a CatchFire document.

You will recall, even though we're just in the discovery phase, we're not trying to collect or sell anything, Mr. Smith has got up and said, "Oh, well, this company is in Mr. Trask's retirement account." And the law does not allow you to just put assets in something you call your retirement account. If you look at those exemptions, it has to be qualified under the IRS regulations.

And what this letter dated November of 2016 says is that they're delinquent and they're out of compliance with the law, and they could lose that exemption. And we don't know what's happened subsequent to this, and we're just trying to conduct discovery to find out.

THE COURT: I'm going to deny the motion subject to the same protective order.

What's next on our agenda today?

MR. SMITH: I think it's plaintiff's motion to appoint a receiver for Mr. Trask.

THE COURT: I have a real problem with that, Mr. English, quite frankly. I think it's premature. I think you need to be complete with your appellate process. I think you have a right to go out and collect, but to appoint a receiver at this juncture, tell me why that would be appropriate, because this case is clearly going up on appeal. There's no question.

MR. ENGLISH: I'll tell you, there's several reasons, Your Honor. First of all, this case -- and we have, just like these motions, in the trial, we served, I think, six to eight third-party subpoenas. There was a motion to quash all of them. We served these two subpoenas. There was a motion to quash.

We served request for production of documents about the assets back on April 13th. We got no response whatsoever until after it was due. Mr. Smith wanted more time. I said, look, we'll give you until June 4th to give us any documents you've got handy. And if you need more time to get them from third parties, get them to us by the 11th so when we come in here, we'll have an idea of what's going on. So we have gotten no response and no documents from a defendant who owes $8 million. And, frankly, he doesn't respect us. He's going to make us come back to court and file a motion to compel again and again and again.

THE COURT: You don't really expect that he's just going to lay down and give you this money right quick?

MR. ENGLISH: No, but he should at least give us documents, and he's not.

THE COURT: I don't disagree with that.

MR. ENGLISH: And I'll say, also, another important thing that the motion for receiver outlines is there has been a lot of transactions that have gone on during the pendency of the trial and afterwards that, you know, this guy is moving stuff around. He owns about 15 different rental properties. That rental income is coming in. There's nobody to collect it other than him.

THE COURT: What's the standard -- and I don't know the answer -- for me to consider at this juncture in the proceedings pending appeal to appoint a receiver in this matter?

MR. ENGLISH: Yes. And the standard is very different after judgment has been entered, and that's under the statute -- and this is on page 2 of our motion. Under the statute, South Carolina Code Section 15-65-10, there are three different grounds where receivers can be appointed. One, after judgment to carry the judgment into effect; two, after judgment according to the judgment or to preserve it during the pendency of an appeal. So there's specific authorization by the statute to preserve assets while an appeal is pending, and then in other cases as provided by law.

THE COURT: Do you have to make a showing that there is secreting or hiding of assets or anything along those lines?

MR. ENGLISH: No, sir, just the need to preserve assets, just that there's some need. And I would like to hand up to the court the Jeffcoat case, which touches on the function of a receiver.

On page 2, court of appeals -- this is a 1989 decision -- the court of appeals notes that a receiver represents the court. He's an officer of the court and is the agency through which the court acts. A receiver stands in the shoes of the debtor with respect to the property of the latter, and appointment will not change any existing contractual rights or create any new contractual relations. He holds property coming into the hands by the same right and title as the person for whom the property he is the receiver.

So his goal is, with all these rental properties, they can't be transferred without the receiver's involvement. The money, the net income that's coming in from all these properties, is to be held by receiver.

And I'll say that this proposed order that we gave to Mr. Smith three weeks ago as part of our motion is virtually identical to the one the business court entered for us in another case, Judge Miller entered in the Andrew Ballard shareholder case where he got a big judgment and the defendants were not cooperating in paying anything. They were not cooperating in providing discovery. They were -- they had lots of property. It was a very complicated asset situation, and a receiver was sort of the solution to, basically, be the court's representative and not require us to file motion after motion after motion when we don't get cooperation from the defendant. And I think it's specifically authorized by the statute, and the circumstances of this case which, as Your Honor notes, included multiple actions to hide the identities of people.

We have seen and we have cited in this memo that there have been -- for example, there was a transfer of property in Oconee County, like, within days after the jury verdicts came down, like, ten different properties were transferred. And the buyer, then, turned around and mortgaged them for double the amount of the consideration that was set forth. And maybe that was legitimate, but we don't know, and that's something a receiver can officially get to the bottom of because the defendant would have to answer to the receiver just like the defendant's answering to the court. It's in this context where there is a big judgment, this is not an unusual request.

THE COURT: All right.

MR. SMITH: Get to a couple points. I think Your Honor is absolutely right, this is premature. It's not necessary at this point. And it may become necessary if they -- and we are going to cooperate, and we are cooperating in discovery.

THE COURT: Well, Mr. English says you're not.

MR. SMITH: I know Mr. English says not. We owe him discovery. I've told him we're getting it together, I'm getting it from my client. I asked for a 30-day extension.

THE COURT: Do you disagree that your client has done all these post-judgment transfers, moves, liens, or things along that nature, with the inference being they're trying to avoid paying this big judgment?

MR. SMITH: I was going to get to the one in -- can I approach and hand you something?

THE COURT: Yes, sir.

MR. SMITH: This is the last one that Mr. English just mentioned having to deal with the transfer of property in Oconee. And, you know, it's presented in the motion it's this nefarious thing. Well, this is a letter that Mr. Stokely Holder provided. He's another attorney in Greenville. He represented Gilreath --

THE COURT: Is this Jim Gilreath?

MR. SMITH: Yes.

THE COURT: Well, let me just disclose on the record, I know Jim Gilreath. I have gone to Hatteras with him for 25 years, fished with him, I own property with him. If there's anything about Mr. Gilreath -- I know nothing about this Gilreath Investments, LLC. But if you want me not to consider anything about this, I won't. I don't Know what else to tell you. I'll let y'all talk for a second. I have to step out and let y'all converse. I'll be right back.

(Recess taken from 10:13 a.m. to 10:15 a.m.)

THE COURT: Have you had a chance to speak?

MR. ENGLISH: Yes. Judge, we're not alleging Mr. Gilreath did anything wrong or anything like that.

THE COURT: I just wanted to stop you before we got there.

MR. ENGLISH: But, for example, on that transaction, you know, we asked over two months ago or two months ago for the contract that would have included this. This letter is the first document we have -- that's been produced to us by the defendants since the, you know, we got the verdicts.

And, you know, we don't know, was it an installment contract? Was there more money due? And that's something that a receiver is going to be much more able to look into than we are. And I'll note that Mr. Newnam filed an affidavit that is Exhibit B to the motion to appoint a receiver, and we have attached some of the transfer documents that we have been able to find.

And, for example, this transfer from Keone Trask and Tamara Trask into the Keone Trask and Tamara Trask Trask Family Trust dated May 12, 2017, that was right on the eve when we were first scheduled to go to trial, and there was a continuance of that until September, but this is a very complicated situation.

THE COURT: I don't disagree with that.

MR. ENGLISH: And I think that's why the statute allows a receiver after judgment to be appointed during the pendency of appeal, not to sell anything, but just to collect whatever rent, hold it in account the same way Clear Touch has deposited money into an account.

MR. SMITH: Your Honor, I understand the concern. I'm not deaf to it. I'll tell you, and I just told Ms. Barker again, we're discussing collectively whether or not we all can agree to some receiver. I have a problem with the extent of this order, so I do ask if the court is inclined to appoint one on this motion, that we have an opportunity to redline the order, submit some -- or at least address the proposed order in writing, I think would be the most effective way to do it.

THE COURT: I'll tell you what. In the meantime, I'm not going to grant the order at this juncture. Just go ahead and submit to me your redline version so I can be considering that and whether or not I'm going to grant it.

MR. SMITH: Thank you, Your Honor. And I just point out the letter I handed you, it talks about the Gilreath transaction, shows it's legitimate.

THE COURT: Gentlemen, I appreciate it. Any other matters in this case?

MR. ENGLISH: No, Your Honor.

MR. SMITH: Nothing.

THE COURT: I appreciate your preparation. I'll let you know what my decision is going to be.

MR. SMITH: Thanks, Your Honor.

THE COURT: We had cross motions in this case, right?

MR. SMITH: Yes, sir.

THE COURT: A motion for summary judgement, a motion to dismiss -- two motions to dismiss, right?

MR. SMITH: And it's two motions for summary judgment, correct.

THE COURT: Two motions for summary judgement. Okay. I read your stuff. Who wants to go first?

MR. ENGLISH: Well, I believe the defendant in this case has filed the first motion to dismiss, so we're happy to go.

THE COURT: That'll be fine. Go ahead.

MR. ENGLISH: Judge, for the record, I'm Greg English. With me is Rita Barker. We represent the defendant, Encore Technology Group, in the second lawsuit that was initiated by Clear Touch.

And as we mentioned, we're here on four motions; cross motions to dismiss; the claims and counterclaims. Primarily, the motion to dismiss are both grounded on res judicata, and then cross motions for summary judgment.

I referred to this case as the second lawsuit because as Your Honor knows, the first lawsuit was Case No. 2015-CP-23-5757. That resulted in a jury verdict and judgment in favor of Encore against Clear Touch for about $1.7 million.

On the eve of the trial of that case, while the parties were discussing a potential resolution, Clear Touch on September 12th of 2017 filed this lawsuit. And this is the three important things about this lawsuit.

Number one, it's based on the same contracts that were at issue in the first suit.

Number two, the same witnesses who were deposed in the first suit presented the same facts for both cases.

And third, this suit is premised on the same arguments that Clear Touch made in the first lawsuit. And in particular in that first lawsuit, Clear Touch argued to the Court that Encore had unclean hands and, therefore, was not entitled to unjust enrichment based on the same facts that they've raised in this lawsuit.

I'd like to hand up to the Court a copy of the affidavit of Mr. Newnam that was filed in support of summary judgment and a couple of ---

THE COURT: I've read it, but go ahead and pass

it up, please.

MR. ENGLISH: We also have a couple of cases.

THE COURT: All right.

MR. ENGLISH: And, Judge, in the -- the Roddey v. Wal-Mart case that the Supreme Court decided in March of this year, on page 3 the Supreme Court upheld a Circuit Court's decision striking negligent hiring action on the basis of res -- res judicata and noted that res judicata barred subsequent actions by the same parties when the claims arise out of a transaction of occurrence that was the subject of the prior action between the parties.

And also noted that under the doctrine of res judicata, a litigant is barred from raising any issues which were adjudicated in the former suit and any issues which might have been raised in the former suit, so it's -- it includes both.

And then I've also -- I've handed up the Jaynes v. County of Fairfield case by the Court of Appeals. And it notes that on page 2 and that under the doctrine of res judicata, final judgment on merits in a prior action will bar the parties in the second action as to matters litigated and matters to which might have been litigated.

And in the footnote, one, it notes that the test of whether there's a logical relationship between the claim and the counterclaim in the first suit, so is there a logical relationship?

Here that test is met because as we note in Mr. Newnam's affidavit and as Your Honor has judicial notice, the very contracts that form the basis of Clear Touch's claim were exhibits in the -- the first trial. They were Clear Touch's Exhibit 20 and Encore's Exhibit 3.

So we think on either a motion to dismiss or a summary judgment, the plaintiff's lawsuit should be dismissed on grounds of res judicata.

THE COURT: All right. Thank you. Yes, sir.

MR. SMITH: Thank you, Your Honor. I'll pass you up a few things. It could be a little bit longer because I think you need a lot more context here.

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. SMITH: Those are copies of the stuff that's been filed here, Your Honor. If you don't mind me approaching.

THE COURT: I don't mind you approaching. I assume you're submitting this submission under your motion for summary judgment ---

MR. SMITH: Yes, Your Honor.

THE COURT: --- and your motion to dismiss?

MR. SMITH: Yes, Your Honor. What we can do potentially, I understand submitting things outside the -- the four corners of the pleadings came into the summary judgment motion. I believe the defendant just did that by submitting things pertaining to affidavits in support of their argument on a motion to dismiss. I think we're here talking about a summary judgment motion.

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. SMITH: I think that's pretty fair. I want to address a couple of things in their argument, but I wanted to really go through and -- and take the time to illustrate to the Court why this is a separate action and why res judicata does not apply to it. And even if the Court believes that res judicata would apply, why it shouldn't.

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. SMITH: So what I've given you up front here, this first document if you open your notebook, Your Honor. And it's a little thing I call an issue sheet that I learned from one of my mentors that was a very big advocate of these things and I think he learned from a judge in Greenville. And it breaks down kind of the argument.

And the first thing I want to walk through here is the timeline of events leading up to filing this lawsuit on September 12, 2017, and why it wasn't filed as a counterclaim or within the -- the confines of the previous suit.

Before I get to that really, really quickly, just to address Mr. -- or Encore's arguments.

One, it says based on the same contracts at issue. That's not completely accurate, and we'll get to that.

Two, same witnesses. Again, not -- not additional witnesses for this case, and you'll see why.

And then the footnote here in the case Mr. English passed up, the County of Fairfield, that's -- that's a test of whether or not a claim is a compulsory counterclaim, not res judicata.

So looking here, Your Honor, it's got all of our causes of action in this case. There's four: Breach of contract and mutual -- mutual confidentiality agreement.

That's a contract when Clear Touch, a business of Encore, said, "Here, we're going to get to share with you confidential trade secret information, mainly in the form of pricing list. And you're going to utilize those as our resell. And you're going to keep them confidential because they are a confidential proprietary and it's got price info."

Then have resell agreement; three, violation of South Carolina Trade Secrets Act; and, four, conversion.

Now, violation of trade secrets act, the breach of the mutual confidentiality agreement, and its conversion, all of those are based on Encore taking our trade secrets, and at a time when they decide they're not going to do business with Clear Touch anymore, utilizing them to unfairly compete with -- with us in the marketplace. And we'll get to an exhibit that we submitted.

THE COURT: From a temporal standpoint, you're alleging that the facts have occurred at the time the prior lawsuit was -- was brought and was known to your client at the time, based on Encore's, them basically saying, we're not doing business with you anymore. We want to do business with other providers. No?

MR. SMITH: No, Your Honor. Number one, at this time, I'll illustrate why that's -- that's not at all what we're saying. We're saying we didn't learn about it until May 31, 2017, when we got another 10,000 pages of documents and 4,000 different files that we had to go through.

And in -- and in June of that year, and we're talking a couple of months prior to trial at this point, that's the first time ---

THE COURT: Well, that was my question.

MR. SMITH: Yes, sir.

THE COURT: At the time of trial, the facts litigated in the trial were known to your client at that time. In other words, the facts that constitute the basis for your cause of action in this suit were known to your client at the time that the parties had the first trial, correct?

MR. SMITH: Not all the facts. The basis for some of these claims. We looked at it and said, "We may -- we may have a trade secret claim, conversion claim, excuse me, and breach of that mutual confidentiality claim on -- on all those facts right prior to trial. So that's not as high -- and, again, I'm going to go through those so that it makes our ---

THE COURT: Sure.

MR. SMITH: --- argument clearer because it's all about the full and fair opportunity to litigate the claim.

Let me walk through. You can follow along so you can see what we're doing here. It's just that first page or the first document, Your Honor.

So they -- Encore files their original action September 18, 2015. The basis of that, according to the complaint, and as you're very familiar with that case, was Mr. Trask now discloses his relationship to Clear Touch while he's an employee of Encore, in violation of various common law contractual obligations, misappropriation of company trade secrets, and malicious court statements.

All those actions that were taking place prior to and led to Encore terminating its relationship with Clear Touch in the summer of 2015. The final termination letter was September 10, 2015. So I'm going to walk through the first part of this fairly quickly and then slow down to where -- where the key actions happened.

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. SMITH: So April 2016, we issued our first set of discovery requests. June of that year, we get back some written responses to their documents. July, you know, we do some deficiency letters, all that good stuff, right, with some supplementation. We file cross motions for motions to compel. The Court issues a November 11, 2016, order. Now I'm on to page 2 here.

So the series of supplemental productions by Encore. As you know, Your Honor, this is a complicated case. As you might expect, there's a lot of documents going back and forth.

THE COURT: Sure.

MR. SMITH: So November 21, 2016, we get about 26,000 pages of documents. And all these -- all these supplemental productions from November of 2016 up until April 13th of '17, they total about 200,000 pages of documents producing over 32,000 separate PDF files.

If you go down, you know, looking at page 2 here, Your Honor. I'm not going to read all this to you. I mean, you can see it. There's a lot of supplementation. There were problems with the production that it wasn't reviewable in any kind of -- any kind of legitimate way. You try to combine things that crash, so we worked through that back and forth.

And then on the 29th of December, the very end of 2016, we get a supplemental production. It's total -- it's got over 175,000 new pages of documents.

THE COURT: That's in addition to the 200?

MR. SMITH: The 200 is a collective November to April.

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. SMITH: But there's -- if you look, you know, the November one's about 68,000 pages. A lot of it didn't have any attachments and a lot of it's e-mail. As you -- as you saw at the trial, a lot of it's e-mail. So there are no attachments.

So you get in December of 2000 -- 2016, the 29th of December, Encore attempts to rectify that issue. Sends a flash drive and it's got, you know, 175,000 new pages of documents in 32,000 individual files.

So we attempted to deal with this, to get it in some kind of reviewable format. It was a nightmare to say the least. The sheer volume, the lack of organization, it was -- it was documented up and it was extremely difficult to deal with. We tried to deal with them.

What we end up having to do is say, look, we're going to go and pay $5,000 just to have the stuff uploaded to a specialized review software so we can get in there, eliminate duplication maybe to some -- put it somewhere where you can actually look at this stuff in some kind of deliberate and methodical way, right?

So we ask for the native format of the files, and we got that. Now, in all this -- and I'm going to -- I know it's discovery. I don't like to talk about this, but it's real important here, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Sure.

MR. SMITH: In all of this, we had a date certain set. I believe it was for -- I'm sure Mr. English remembers the date better than I do on this one. It was set initially for the beginning of 2017. We were going to go to trial at that point.

All of this is going on. And we had asked -- Clear Touch asked Encore, "Can you consent to continuing the trial? We have to deal with all this stuff and take depositions. You know, we have to prepare our case. We've been working on that, but this has made it so incredibly difficult and it's time consuming."

So Encore said, "No. We're going to push to trial." And I believe at that time it was then set for early May.

So we file a motion for continuance. That motion was fiercely opposed, and the Court ended up granting it. Set it for trial the week of August 28th.

I'm on page 3, Your Honor. This will speed up. I promise you.

In April -- and this is where I'm going to slow down. In April 13, 2017, was one of the supplemental productions.

And if Your Honor flips back in your notebook in front of you. If you would like to look at this, it's Tab 7. If you go back to 7(B), there's an Exhibit A which is April 13, 2017, letter. And I'm looking at here is this paragraph labelled one.

And this was a supplemental production. We've been trying to get privilege law the whole time. This is -- had a document labelled privilege law with four objections to it, but this is what's really important, I think, to the issue of res judicata here is one of the things.

September 10, 2015, documents regarding Mr. Trask and Clear Touch. Encore terminated its resell agreement with Clear Touch on September 10, 2015, because of the defendant's breach to the contractual fiduciary duties to Encore. Those breaches formed the basis of the lawsuit filed on September 18, 2015.

Accordingly, we believed that all documents regarding Mr. Trask and Clear Touch dated or created on or after September 11, 2015, were created to sufficient litigation and trial were work product. Nevertheless, we've reviewed those documents, producing them, get the base numbers. None of which is relevant to this litigation.

I'm going to jump ahead of myself a little bit. Just flip to Exhibit C here, Your Honor. It's a collection of documents. Actually, take one step back and we'll look at that.

THE COURT: We're in "C"?

MR. SMITH: Yes, Your Honor. And that goes to what happened next and this is the seminal thing.

THE COURT: Under "C," I don't have anything. I have "B" that has a number -- oh, "C" to Tab B. Is that what it is?

MR. SMITH: This is not behind Tab C, Your Honor. It's right behind -- just flip the page -- just flip the page over in your notebook. If you just flip over in that April, you know, May 31st letter right here. Do you see what I'm talking about?

THE COURT: And then I go to Tab C?

MR. SMITH: Not tab.

THE COURT: Exhibit C -- Exhibit C which says collection of documents from property?

MR. SMITH: Yes -- yes, Your Honor, but let's ---

THE COURT: Okay. I'm sorry.

MR. SMITH: --- let's just go in order. I mean, you picked Exhibit B, the one right before that.

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. SMITH: It's May 31st. This is the seminal date here, May 31, 2018. This is -- we have -- we filed our motion to compel at this point. This is weeks after going back and forth. And May 31, 2018, we get an additional production. It's 10,000 plus pages of documents and over 4,000 individual files. There's several really important parts of this letter that go to res judicata issue. It's again very similar.

If you look at paragraph 3 on that first page, very similar to the representation made in April 13th letter that, hey, when we terminated the resell agreement on September 10, 2015, that's ---

THE COURT: Now, what number are we looking at right here?

MR. SMITH: Look -- looking at Exhibit B.

THE COURT: Right. What -- what paragraph?

MR. SMITH: Paragraph No. 3 on that first page. Very similar to the paragraph I just went over in the previous letter. It gives a basis for the lawsuit saying that breaches -- the defendant breaches the contractual fiduciary duties to Encore, the basis for the lawsuit.

And they believe everything created after September 11, 2015, was work product. And -- but they were producing e-mails after that time to resolve. Yo u know, we had a discovery issue.

So if you go -- if you go further. Flip over one page, the second page of that same letter, two important things are on here, another representation that these items in Encore's position are not relevant to the litigation.

They -- they discover -- if you look down at paragraph 2, they discover that they had over a year and a half at this point. And not searched for the name of the company Clear, space, Touch when they searched their e-mails. They searched for Clear Touch as one word. So, you know, any time anyone would refer to the company within the body of an e-mail and typed in Clear, space, Touch, we hadn't had it up to this point.

We're a couple of months away from trial. A week-long complicated trial as you very well know, and we're getting this for the first time on May 31, 2018. We get a little bit -- and, again, it closes in that last paragraph on this letter.

Again, we do not believe that these additional e-mails are relevant to this case. So it's saying, hey, look, inadvertently it really doesn't matter at all. This is overlooked. The mistake's made. And this evidence was not given to us until May 31, 2018, a couple of months before we're supposed to go to trial.

There is no way to review this stuff and get together a case in a few months based on what we were doing, but I want to show you what was part of -- now that's Exhibit C that I mentioned before. Just flip over a couple of pages. This is just a collection of documents that was in that May 31st production.

You can see the first is from February 3, 2016. You can see down here. They're passing along my client's pricing information to bid jobs. Passing it along to ViewSonic, their competitor.

If you flip through here, Your Honor, you'll see where -- look at the third page. They're telling Jason Web -- Webster of ViewSonic on September 16, 2015, hey, look, there's Spartanburg District 7. We need you -- they are -- they are putting my client's profit numbers in here and saying, we need you to be less than this particular price.

THE COURT: Well, wasn't that document or something very similar to that document introduced at trial in this matter?

MR. SMITH: Introduced at trial?

THE COURT: Uh-huh.

MR. SMITH: I don't think it was introduced in the trial in front of a jury. Part of it and Mr. English ---

THE COURT: Well, whether it was introduced, that one equitable cause of action before me, wasn't it introduced some time during that trial? And that -- I mean, that rings a bell about the price listing and the fact that that issue, I have a memory of -- and I think I do -- of the fact that Encore was allegedly telling the competitor, "This is what the pricing is for Clear Touch," and that kind of thing. Wasn't that some subject of testimony during the course of this trial?

MR. SMITH: Not subject of any testimony during the course of the trial. It is part of the equitable ---

THE COURT: Claim?

MR. SMITH: --- equitable defense of unclean hands that we submitted at trial.

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. SMITH: Because that's -- that's all we could do with this based on the time frame we got. And -- and we'll get to down here on the -- what the case law is saying, look, it's about -- if we could've brought -- I know it's easy to quote the could've been brought, but you have to look at could this have been brought?

It could not have been brought a full claim because there's no way in the time frame we were allowed based on withholding of evidence that we could've put together an actual claim and shown our damages and present it to a jury. There's no way. And it wasn't based on anything that my client did at all.

You know, something was overlooked and things were withheld up to the very last minute and presented in a way that made it impossible for our client to -- for my client to put together a claim and bring it to trial. It could not work.

And then it's very important that Encore said, "Look, that stuff's not relevant. It has nothing to do with this trial. It has nothing to do with this case."

Everything that happened after September 10, 2015, in Encore's own words, irrelevant. So I think their actions should be estopped from now saying the stuff was relevant and should've been brought, but I'm getting a little ahead of myself.

So that's -- that's what happens on May 31, 2018. Get all the stuff. We also got to review it. That takes a while. And then we do that.

So first -- for the first time, I mean the absolute earliest, being the most conservative I can be, in June of 2017, we were alerted to the fact that we may have a trade secret misappropriation claim. And that -- that is -- those single actions underline the conversion and the breach of mutual confidentiality agreement claims. All based on Encore utilizing our trade secrets here, but that's why we filed this so we could -- we could do discovery and develop that claim appropriately.

I mean, right now all we've got is this stuff. We -- we issued a discovery request in February of this year. The deadline passed. They filed a motion to dismiss and asked, "Can we have 30 days from the resolution of this motion to respond to discovery?" You know, that makes sense to me. I'm reasonable and professional. I said yes.

So right now this is all the evidence we have, but we believe that, you know, this goes to deals in 2017. A very large game of a ticket in Winston-Salem worth many millions of dollars.

That's not the kind of claim we could just throw together without enough discovery and time to conduct appropriate discovery and depose additional witnesses that were not a part of the prior case, have an economics expert look at it, and prove and develop things that Your Honor knows you have to do to get a claim ready for trial. That was impossibile to do given when this evidence was turned over in relation to when the trial happened.

So we actually -- on May 31st, a couple days after, some time the very first week of June, we went to Encore and said, "Guys, you know, there maybe has to be an amendment to the pleading. You know, this seems like something may have to be added if we're going to go forward. Will you consent to a continuance?"

No. They said no. So we had to file a second motion for continuance. And opposing that, they said again to Judge Stilwell, "This is not relevant to this claim. It has nothing to do with it." That representation was made to fight a continuance motion. So now we've got that at least three times saying this stuff is irrelevant. It had nothing to do with the case.

So now I'm going to flip forward here now. This goes through, again, when we filed the case. Mr. English has already gone through that, but we believe it's on different facts and occurrences. It's not the same as those underlying in the previous case.

Now, we all, you know, cite at the top of what are called the headline cases. Well, okay. It's about whether they brought or could've been brought in the previous case. Well, I think you focus on here, first of all, whether it is the same transaction or occurrence. And if you look over, if you flip to page 7 at the bottom ---

THE COURT: Page 7 where?

MR. SMITH: The bottom of this issue sheet. This first document I gave, the summary outline.

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. SMITH: And I believe at the bottom there under B(1) and it's a quote from the South Carolina Public Interest Foundation in Greenville County. It's talking about what factual groupings constitutes a transaction and what grouping would constitute a series.

And it says to be determined pragmatically, giving the weight such considerations as whether the facts related in time, space, origin, or motivation, whether they form a convenient trial unit and whether treatment as a unit conforms to the parties expectations or business understanding and usage.

Well, here I think the facts underlining in our claims -- and I will say, I'm carving out the reseller agreement claim as far at this argument goes. I think both sides here say, look, the reseller agreement was at issue in the last case. We've both filed motions for dismissal on res judicata on that. I think we both conceded that position, but ---

THE COURT: In other words, you're saying the reseller is not appropriate for this case, or you're saying it is a standalone claim in this case. I'm not ---

MR. SMITH: Sure.

THE COURT: --- I'm not following.

MR. SMITH: I think the reseller agreement reaches that on both sides. Could've been brought in the prior case.

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. SMITH: I am saying that. I'm not carving that out of this argument because that's undeniable.

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. SMITH: And that's one of our claims. Encore has two contract claims based on that agreement and should go away as well, because, I mean, if you're bringing the same argument and the same contract, I think per se is -- is out.

THE COURT: The reseller, and that's all that we're saying, right?

MR. SMITH: Yes, sir, on both sides though. That's what I'm saying. That go -- that goes two ways to my point there.

So going back to the res judicata, that's really, I think, where this agreement lies here. I think the facts underline our claims. And when I say "claim," we're talking about three trade secret base claims, three remaining claims.

That's allowing Encore misappropriation of our trade secrets and used to unfairly compete with us. And all of those events occurring after time, they say -- what they said was irrelevant to litigation in the prior suit.

It all -- it's all occurring in 2000-, you know, 2015. All the stuff in Exhibit C here in front of you, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Which -- which one?

MR. SMITH: Exhibit C, the collection of documents from the May 31st production.

THE COURT: And that's under ---

MR. SMITH: That's under ---

THE COURT: --- Seven?

MR. SMITH: --- 7(B). This is all stuff from September 15th of 2015 on and 2016. So we think the facts themselves underline our -- our claims here are different from those adjudicated in the prior suit.

And they have -- they occur in a time that is after the relevant time frame, according to Encore itself, as it relates to the previous suit. So we think the claims issue based on the facts that are distinct in time and all that, they should be subject to res judicata.

Now, the second point we make here is, they're really getting out -- outside of too much technicality and fundamental unfairness to the whole thing if the Court were to dismiss our claims on res judicata.

We've been through and we got this evidence that alerted us to the liability -- potential liability with the claims we asserted. It was a few months prior to a week-long complex trial. It was -- it was evidence within our opposition's possession. And things happen and it was overlooked on their side. I'm not -- I am not saying they did something intentionally in fairness because it doesn't matter at this point.

The fact is they had control of this stuff and didn't get it to us until May 31, 2017. So to allow Encore to not have to answer for misappropriation and misuse of our trade secrets by dismissing this claim, all that does is encourages the withholding of evidence. It encourages you're giving a bunch of stuff to your opposition just before trial at a time where you know there's no way to prepare a case based on.

And our Supreme Court has said and I quoted -- I got it in here. Excuse me. Our Supreme Court has said in a recent decision that you -- I can give you the citation. I have it here and I've quoted it at the bottom of the page on the issue sheet. And it says, quote, Our Supreme Court's recent decision of res judicata to acknowledge there are certain circumstances in which policy underlining the document of res judicata is outweighed by more compelling policy. And it cites the restatement. And go down. There's a footnote there. Where it states -- it talks about the full and fair opportunity to litigate a claim.

Well, here we arrive at the full and fair opportunity to litigate our claim. We could not have brought that claim appropriately, adequately before that, Judge. It's too much and it's all based on when we got this evidence and alertness to it. And ---

THE COURT: Is your client -- and I don't -- I don't know. I don't think so, but I don't have a memory of your client saying, "Look, we just got these documents showing that -- that Encore was passing along our protected information at this juncture. We need to amend. We need to fully engage in more discovery and also we need to look at potentially making other claims or counterclaims in this case." Did you ever raise that to the Court?

MR. SMITH: We filed a second motion to compel saying those things at the time. We got May 31st.

THE COURT: Say that again.

MR. SMITH: Sure. Sure. We got something on May 31st. On June -- June 6th or 7th, something like that, we filed a second motion to continue the trial based -- saying those things, that, "Hey, look, we just got this stuff. It looks like we're going to have to potentially amend our -- our answer to that in counterclaims," so on and so forth, just like you just said, Your Honor.

And Judge Stilwell held a phone conference on it because we were on such a tight time line. This was June, and at the time we were looking at an August 28th trial date. And Encore opposed that motion saying, "This stuff has nothing to do with this case. It doesn't."

So Judge Stilwell said, "Okay. I'll give you a couple more weeks." So we got to -- it was -- it was either August 28th or September 7th was where we were before that motion was filed as far as the date certain.

And then it got moved to the very end of September. The 25th, I believe, is the day we started in front of Your Honor, that last week of September.

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. SMITH: So, yes, we brought that up. We were -- and Encore's opposition to our motion to continue based on those very things is an answer to what they have conceded to amend. Of course not. They don't want to concede to continue, much less amend. They said, no, it has nothing to do with this case.

So, yes, Your Honor, I think my shorter answer than the one I just gave to your question, we filed something with the Court based on it. And Encore opposed it saying, "That stuff has nothing to do with this case."

So I keep saying that because it really does matter. I mean, the representation was made multiple times. And then of the matter, this is not relevant. It has nothing to do with what we're talking about. And now ---

THE COURT: And you raised that, and I've got that in my mind. And I understand your argument as to whether or not they have the opportunity as to estoppel, but that's really putting the burden on somebody else to tell you about your case a little bit.

I mean, once you have notice of these alleged violations of the confidentiality, the trade secrets, and various such things about the pricing disclosure to third parties, doesn't that then put upon your client the obligation to make a full evaluation as to whether or not that should be raised in this case?

MR. SMITH: Yes, it does, Your Honor.

THE COURT: And you're saying that two months or three months is just insufficient time to do it?

MR. SMITH: I'm saying it's absolutely insufficient time to do it. We evaluated whether or not to bring it. If that's the course we should do ---

THE COURT: What about dating back to the letter from Encore to Clear Touch, Mr. Trask, or who it was that says, "We're terminating your agreement, the resell agreement. We're not going to do that"? That -- that's notice of somebody else is going to be being dealt with, is it not?

MR. SMITH: It certainly is, but it's not ---

THE COURT: But not notice of disclosure?

MR. SMITH: It's just not -- it's not notice at all. They kept the trade secrets they were supposed either destroy or turn back over and are utilizing them and competing against us. We had no idea they were doing this.

I wish we had known. I wish I could've put this in front of a jury. It would've helped me out. It would've -- it would've dinged the narrative a bit of Encore that was very aptly put up of "we were the victim here and we got hurt by Mr. Trask and Clear Touch."

I would've loved to put up some of that on my side that shows Encore isn't the white knight they said they were. It would've been beneficial to my case, but it would've been detrimental to my client to include this -- this claim and the parties sue because we did not have an adequate time to develop the claim. We didn't.

And -- and -- and that's why I'm saying the competing policy reason here and the Supreme Court recognized can overcome in the application of the doctrine of res judicata. When you have a situation to where if you apply it, it had not only negative consequences, but an over -- overriding negative implication.

What -- what granting their motions to kick our claims at this point does, it is -- it is licensed to withhold evidence to a point to where you can dump it on your opponent and say, "I gave it to you before trial. Regardless of the circumstances, you got to -- you got to bring that claim forward, even though I sandbagged you and made it completely unattainable to do it."

Again, deliberate or not, I'm not saying that's what, but it happened based on the takeover side according to the letter they sent us. Okay. But once you do that, you got, you know, Clear Touch comes to court and sues for the wrongs that Encore has done to it.

And to allow Encore not to answer for that based on what happened here, based on these circumstances is just a really lack of -- it's a very negative message to send out to Encore and to the bar in general. It encourages the gamesmanship and withholding of evidence. And I think -- I think we can all agree, that doesn't serve the purpose of this court.

So we think, one, res judicata doesn't apply and we've shown the reasons why.

We think, two, they should actually be estopped from them making the argument based on their representations.

And, three, to the extent the Court believes res judicata does apply, there is undeniably fundamental fairness and compelling policy reasons not to apply these circumstances.

I want to make sure I got everything.

Mr. English didn't address the last two arguments, but they -- they put in their motion and they're extremely brief. It's on page 10 here.

They said there's sufficient evidence to proceed with claims. I'm showing you Exhibit C. I think that's more than sufficient to overcome the very differential summary judgment bar. We've got a scintilla of evidence, more than that. I forgot how many pages are in this exhibit, but there's many examples of trade secret misappropriation that allow us to go forward.

And then "D," I'm not sure if I understand this one. It's in the motion. It said that our claims barred the statute of limitations. I frankly don't understand that one. You know, discovery rule of three years. Your Honor is very familiar with it. We got stuff on May 31, 2017. We filed suit a few months later. And it's all actions and events occurring in 2015, '16, and forward. So I don't see how the statute of limitations can bar us here.

So that goes to res judicata stuff. The one other portion, it's a separate issue, is -- or not separate, but they have an abusive process counterclaim.

THE COURT: Sorry. Say that again?

MR. SMITH: They have an abusive process counterclaim against us for filing this action. We -- we've been through it in detail now why this is a separate case, why this action was filed, and why we had to file it as a separate case.

Our summary judgment motion, and if you can look, it's broken down very quickly here on page 11. Starting on page 11 here through 14. Just there's two elements they got to show for abusive process they just absolutely cannot show.

One is, they have to show an ulterior purpose and, two, a willful act in the use of the process not proper in the conduct proceeding. And the most obvious portion of that they can't show, it goes to the second element. That second willful act element has several parts.

And one of the things that the case law says, and I'm quoting it in here, is you got to show -- you got to be able to show the sole or paramount reason for utilizing a process was an unlawful ulterior purpose. The whole abusive process counterclaim is based on the broad accusation that, hey, y'all filed this to get a -- to get a better outcome of the prior action.

Well, we've been through my file. This is a separate action, so that's just not sufficient to maintain a claim. And if it were true, we would've not proceeded this case all the way to trial till after we got the judgement back in the other action.

Instead, we received discovery. We're here on multiple substantive, very involved motions. This case is absolutely 100 percent legitimate. And it is to seek to address Encore's trade secret misappropriation, my client's trade secrets utilizing them to underbid them on jobs. And, again, what we think would be a very substantial claim here, Your Honor.

So the fact that we filed this, they don't like it, but they can't show the two elements of abusive process that are -- that are necessary to maintain the claim. And, I mean, to be quite frank, it's -- it's ironic at best and definitely a bit hypocritical that this counterclaim is alleged against my client. Last week alone, Encore has moved to intervene in another case, an appellate matter, that's in front of Your Honor. Excuse me. Cross ---

THE COURT: Is there a third Encore case?

MR. SMITH: Well, now there is.

THE COURT: Is that the one that Judge Young sent up to me the other day? Is it a business case?

MR. SMITH: I'm not sure, Your Honor.

MR. ENGLISH: We moved to intervene, but that hasn't been heard yet.

MR. SMITH: That's -- that's, yes, Your Honor. It's a business court case.

THE COURT: Okay. I'm not familiar. I haven't heard any ---

MR. SMITH: Oh, sure. I'm talking about the amount of substance. I'm saying they moved to intervene in that case. They've cross appealed on appeal of the final order, and then filed a separate lawsuit this past Thursday pursuing Keone Trask's mother; Leo Gallant; the retirement plan; the business.

I mean, we -- we are -- have a very straightforward claim based on what they did. We would've -- I would've loved to have it in the prior case, but an abusive process counterclaim is -- it's offensive. And they can't -- they can't show the necessary elements to sustain it, and I'm very much in support to get rid of this one summary judgment here. Thank you, Your Honor, for listening.

THE COURT: Thank you, sir. Does everybody agree -- does everybody agree at this juncture that this should be reviewed under the standards for summary judgment?

MR. SMITH: Yes, Your Honor, I do.

MR. ENGLISH: Yes, sir.

THE COURT: All right. Mr. English.

MR. ENGLISH: Thank you, Judge. Just briefly, I'm a little confused because Mr. Smith said initially right off the bat that he didn't think res judicata applied. And he sort of said that at the end, but his -- the plaintiff's own motion to dismiss says that Encore's counterclaim should be dismissed, quote, pursuant to the doctrine of res judicata.

And during his argument, he admitted that their second cause of action, the breach of the reseller agreement, should be dismissed for under the doctrine of res judicata, so that -- clearly, the doctrine does apply to this case.

THE COURT: Wait a minute. The gist of what I got, and I'm not looking at the abusive process claim right now. I want you to speak about the gist so far of what I've heard is that res judicata is probably applicable, but under the doctrine of fundamental fairness and overriding public policy, they should be allowed because your client's conduct in not bringing up or producing this information in a timely manner enabled them to prepare an adequate counterclaim based on this newly revealed information. That's the way I'm looking at it, right?

MR. ENGLISH: Okay. Yes, and I -- I agree. I think -- I just want to note by agreeing that res judicata applies to the reseller agreement. It also applies to the confidentiality agreement which was a preexisting agreement that was superseded by the reseller agreement. And those agreements form the basis for the trade secrets and the conversion.

The conversion claim involves confidential information, so they're all intertwined and the question is factually. All these claims that were logically related to claims that were litigated and that could've or should've been brought in the first case.

Now, I'll note the ones in this policy argument that they made that he admits that they learned the facts that they formed the basis of these claims on May 31 of 2017.

And I will say that Encore had as of February of 2017, if you look through his document, you'll see that Encore has produced about 200,500 e-mails by February of 2017.

And Clear Touch kept saying, "Well, we think there's more. We think there's more." And Encore would go back and do additional searches. They found maybe 5 percent more between February and May of 2017, but, again, that was four months before trial. And they used those same e-mails to argue that Encore had unclean hands. So they were able to formulate, take those facts, and use them in the -- that first case.

Encore did take the position that legally what these e-mails that they were requesting were irrelevant. And they were irrelevant because Clear Touch never filed a counterclaim against Encore in the first suit.

Not only did they not file a counterclaim, they never moved to amend their answer to assert a counterclaim. All they asked for was a continuance. And if -- even though they had these same e-mails four months before trial that they used to raise an affirmative defense, they never asked to amend the counterclaim to make them relevant.

And the argument that Encore is judicially estopped is wrong because judicial estoppel has to be based on facts, not based on legal arguments.

And what we said is that we believe the way these pleadings are framed, what you're asking for is not completely relevant, but we went ahead and produced them anyway. So we've just noted in those letters, we think this is irrelevant, but here you go. We gave them all of these e-mails.

And what Clear Touch then did with those e-mails is they didn't move to amend, but they asked for continuances and they got continuances. So they got what they asked for in response to receiving those e-mails.

And, finally, with regard -- on the policy argument, I will say that, you know, the first case and everything is -- is now gone up to the Court of Appeals. And I would say the policy here is a matter of judicial economy. This case should go up to the Court of Appeals too and let the Court of Appeals decide all of this.

THE COURT: Say that again now.

MR. ENGLISH: I said the first case is already at the Court of Appeals. I think this case, for purposes of judicial resources and judicial economy, this case should be dismissed on the grounds of res judicata and let the Court of Appeals just deal with everything at the same time. In other words, this case can be consolidated with that and the Court of Appeals can decide it all. I think that's the policy that should prevail here.

And then, finally, on summary judgment, I will not that we did submit the affidavit of Mr. Newnam in support of our motion. Mr. Smith has handed up a stack of e-mails, but he's got no affidavit or anything to explain the context. So I don't think that Clear Touch has met a standard under case law to submit evidence that the Court can consider to uphold their case.

And, finally, on abuse of process, Ms. Barker is going to handle that.

THE COURT: Okay. Ms. Barker.

MS. BARKER: Thank you, Your Honor. On the abuse of process claim, Mr. Smith argued that we are unable to show the second element, willful acts, and he relied on the Food Lion case. I'll note for the Court that there are important distinctions between our case and the Food Lion case.

The Court never said that a participation in a lawsuit cannot constitute a basis for an abusive process claim. There was a pleading deficiency in the Food Lion case in which the abusive claim process, the pleadings did not note that the primary purpose in bringing the claim was the -- was the basis for satisfying the willful act element.

Here that is -- that is not the case at all as Your Honor likely has seen our counterclaim specifically refers to the plaintiff's filing of this action constituting an abusive process on the basis that it was done for the primary purpose. The ulterior purpose to gain objectives. It's not legitimate, specifically attempting to settle the prior action on terms stated by the plaintiff.

In fact, to date, Mr. Smith has not presented any evidence to the contrary. He has argued that if that had been true, we wouldn't have proceeded, but failure to be able to settle has no bearing on whether we properly state an abusive process claim.

Also, Mr. Smith has talked about our participation, other litigation. That's irrelevant to the abusive process claim, particularly in light of the fact that our participation is to protect the judgment in the original action between these two parties.

THE COURT: Let me ask you this, I know, Mr. -- you -- English, excuse me, it was, you said 1.7. I thought the judgment -- I know you didn't get everything, but I thought it was closer to about nine.

MR. ENGLISH: Well, if you add -- the judgment against Mr. Trask was about 7.9 and Clear Touch was 1.7.

THE COURT: I see. Okay. All right.

MR. SMITH: And the company -- the company paid that. We paid that to the Court, the company side. Mr. Trask didn't.

THE COURT: I gotcha. Okay. All right. I'll be glad to hear any responses to anything.

MR. SMITH: Very, very briefly, Your Honor. Because we say res judicata applies, the resell agreement applies, and everything, Your Honor did a very great job of reciting the very law argument I made, the summation, but I want to say it is not at all what we're saying.

We're saying we recognize and I think they have to as well that res judicata applies to the one claim based on the resell agreement. That is based on actions that between the two parties within the basis of their -- their business relationship under that agreement, all occurring prior to the time when Encore terminated their relationship. That's one set of facts.

We're saying another set of facts underlie in those other three claims that we have here, misappropriation of my client's trade secrets and use of -- use of them to unfairly compete with them. That underlies the breach of mutual confidentiality agreement, obviously the trade secret misappropriation, and the conversion of claims out of the three claims we have here. So just because it applies to one, we certainly are not saying that that -- it applies to the other for the very reason, et cetera.

Now, we first learned of a potential viable counterclaim at best in June of 2017 because we got the documents May 31st, 10,000 pages. I read fast, but not that fast. So it had to at least be in June when I finally figured out we might have something.

And as I noted in detail and the reason I put that time line in front of you is so long, but I was trying to do it for everyone's convenience, especially Your Honor's because there's a lot going on here, we got one continuance of a few weeks when we brought the need to potentially amend the -- the answer to the Court. And the opposition was, this stuff doesn't matter. It's irrelevant.

So we think that is what matters here. It's not -- and I think the -- if it's equitable estoppel or judicial estoppel in some form, we all get confused on what form applies as I do. So it may just be me, but if you make -- if you take on the position of a prior case, you cannot take one that's contrary and subsequent and believe this a contrary position and multiple representations made in the prior litigation the stuff's irrelevant.

THE COURT: Well, how do you address the argument from Mr. English that based on the state of the pleadings, it was not relevant and that you never -- or your client never made a motion to amend to assert a counterclaim to this matter?

MR. SMITH: Sure. Based on the state of the pleadings, it wasn't in there for them to know about. So that -- that one goes off the table. Of course, it's off the table because we had no idea about it.

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. SMITH: Then -- and we brought to the Court the need. And, I mean, I -- I hesitate because there was a lot of internal discussion about what to do with this, Your Honor. And we -- it's definitely something that kept me up many nights thinking about what -- what's the right thing to do here for the best interest of Clear Touch.

And the decision had to be made, do you take a major risk of putting potentially a multimillion dollar claim on an extreme fast track that is already attached to a week-long trial and other stuff and this whole new theory? Or do you file a separate action allowing -- allowing the courts to do what they do and allow us to do discovery in a manner and time that allows that claim to develop and be ripely, fully, and fairly adjudicated?

And I had to choose the second option. And I'm -- and I'm here today to really implore the Court to let us do that. Put this up on appeal with that other case.

THE COURT: I don't -- I don't think that's ---

MR. SMITH: Well, I just had to say it.

THE COURT: Well, who knows what they think about it, but I don't know how that can be. If they have issues framed, and that's what they got to resolve.

MR. SMITH: Thank you, Your Honor. That's all I have.

THE COURT: All right. Mr. English.

MR. ENGLISH: Just briefly. I'll note that, you know, he talks about these e-mails. He had 95 percent of the e-mails back in by February of 2017. He got these remaining 5 percent four months before trial.

THE COURT: Well, he had -- and, you know, when y'all make those arguments to me, that somewhat kind of goes over my head because I don't know what the context of the 95 percent is. If the context or the 5 percent has to do with these alleged misappropriation trade secret information, then the 95 percent doesn't matter at all.

Back in February and as of the discovery at that point, to your knowledge, were any -- was there anything in the discovery that you had given them that would indicate or put somebody on notice that they need to investigate a claim that you are misappropriating our trade secrets?

MR. ENGLISH: You know, I don't -- I would say there's probably, but I don't -- I can't think of anything specific. I just don't know because, you know, it's -- there's massive e-mails.

THE COURT: I understand.

MR. ENGLISH: The one thing -- the last thing I'd say is, Mr. Smith candidly acknowledged that they considered bringing a counterclaim. He just said they considered bringing a counterclaim in this trial and they made a strategic decision not to, and I understand that res judicata doesn't let you do that.

THE COURT: Okay. Anything further, guys?

MR. SMITH: No, Your Honor. Thank you for your patience and time.

THE COURT: Oh, sure. All right. Lisa, we'll go off the record.

THE REPORTER: Okay.

8. SOFTWARE

8.1. Software as Component

Company Products include as components certain software programs (collectively "Programs") proprietary to Company or licensed by it from third-party vendors, which may be periodically updated and substituted. Company has all rights necessary for it to market and distribute the Programs as Company Product components, as well as the right and authority to conclude this Agreement and to grant rights hereunder regarding the Programs. 8.2. Distribution Rights

Subject to the use license in Section 8.3 below, Company grants to Reseller during the Term a non-transferable right to transfer to end users within the Territory the copies of the Programs it obtains under this Agreement only as components of Company Products, subject to the following terms & conditions:

a) Reseller shall sell or lease Company Products with the Program packages as integral parts, and shall abide by all terms and conditions imposed by the Programs' licensors. It shall not open the Program packages or end user license packets or separate such Program packages (including documentation and end user licenses) from the Company Products. Reseller shall not copy or reproduce any Program (except as stated herein or in any Program's pre-packaged license agreement), or modify, reverse engineer, disassemble, or de-compile any Program in any way.

b) Reseller shall promptly notify Company of any unauthorized use or copying of any Program, and will take at Reseller's expense (but at Company 's option and under Company 's control and direction) legal action to prevent or stop any unauthorized use or copying of the Programs by anyone that has obtained the Programs due, in substantial part, to Reseller's fault.

c) Termination of this Agreement will automatically and immediately terminate Reseller's rights under this Section.

8.3. Use License

Reseller shall pass on to end users of each Company Product a license to use the Programs in the form of a "break-the-seal" end user license agreement contained in the Programs' packages.

8.4. Compliance with Import Regulations

INCLUDING BUT NOT LIMITED TO SPECIAL, INCIDENTAL, CONSEQUENTIAL, PUNITIVE OR OTHER DAMAGES.

9. TERM

This Agreement's term ("Term") shall begin on the Effective Date and continue for 36 months, and shall be automatically renewed for 2 additional 12 month terms up to a maximum term of 5 years, provided that either party hereto may terminate this Agreement at any time with 30 days' advance written notice, and further provided that this Agreement shall terminate automatically if Reseller makes no purchases from Company hereunder for a period of 90 calendar days, such termination to be effective as of the next calendar day after such period elapses.

10. SECTION X: TERMINATION

10.1. Termination Without Cause

Either party can terminate this Agreement without cause by giving 90 days' written notice to the other.

10.2. Termination for Cause

This Agreement may be terminated for cause upon written notice:

a) By either party upon 30 days' written notice if the other commits a material breach of the Agreement and fails to cure it within the 10 days;

b) By Company immediately if Reseller files for or has instituted against it any proceedings as to its bankruptcy, insolvency, reorganization, liquidation, receivership, or dissolution or there is an assignment for the benefit of creditors;

c) By Company upon 30 days' written notice (i) if Reseller becomes ineligible to receive approval for any license or export documents necessary to buy or resell Company Products; (ii) if Reseller tries to register this Agreement with any government conferring any exclusivity upon Reseller; (iii) if Reseller assigns this Agreement without Company's prior written consent; (iv) upon substantial change in Reseller's ownership; or (v) if any change or enactment of law or regulation after the date of this Agreement interferes, in Company's opinion, with the parties' rights or obligations stated herein.

10.3. EFFECT OF TERMINATION

a) Upon termination of this Agreement, Company may terminate any or all unfilled orders.

b) Upon termination, Reseller shall immediately stop all marketing, promotion, advertising or reference to Company Products and shall have no further rights to use Company's marketing, promotion or advertising materials or other resources.

c) Termination will discharge and release Company from all obligations and liability under this Agreement, except as it expressly accepts for unfulfilled orders. The sole fact of this Agreement's termination shall not make either party liable to the other for any compensation, reimbursement, losses or damages whatsoever, though Reseller shall remain obligated to pay all outstanding balances on its Company Product purchases.

11. CONFIDENTIALITY

11.1. Confidential Information

Prior to and during the Term hereof, Company may convey to Reseller proprietary and confidential information about Company Products, services, strategy and analysis. For the Term of this Agreement (including renewals) and for 2 years thereafter, Reseller shall not disclose to any third party any such information marked CONFIDENTIAL, PROPRIETARY, STRICTLY PRIVATE, or INTERNAL DATA, or which, though not so marked, could reasonably be construed as confidential or sensitive, such as the terms of this Agreement (all collectively "Confidential Information"), nor shall it use any such Confidential Information for its own benefit, except as provided herein. Any reliance on such Confidential Information is at Reseller's own risk. Nothing in this Section grants or implies any rights by license, estoppel, or otherwise. 11.2. Presentations and Planning Company's oral and visual presentations describing Company Products and plans, business and product plans, and any inspections thereof by Reseller or its personnel shall all be deemed Confidential Information under this Agreement whether so marked or not.

12. EXPORT CONTROLS

12.1 Compliance with Laws

Reseller shall comply with all United States export laws and regulations applicable to Company Products, and shall obtain any licenses required for export.

12.2 Products of United States Origin Technology

Reseller may sell Company Products only to end-users within the Territory, and shall not export any Company Products, including Programs, or any direct products thereof without Company 's advance written approval and, if required, United States Government permission. This requirement shall survive termination or expiration of this Agreement. Reseller shall not do business with any person or firm identified by the United States government as being denied the right to receive any United States product.

13. LIMITATION OF LIABILITY AND REMEDIES; INDEMNITY

13.1. Limitation of Liability; Sole Remedy

Any liability of Company under this Agreement is expressly limited to the price paid by Reseller for the Company Products involved. Reseller's sole remedy against Company in any dispute concerning this Agreement shall be to seek recovery of that amount, upon payment of which Company shall be released from all further obligations and liability to Reseller.

13.2. Indemnity

a) Except as otherwise stated herein, Reseller shall indemnify and hold harmless Company against any and all claims, legal actions, losses, damages, liabilities, costs and expenses asserted against, imposed upon or incurred by Company arising out of or relating to (i) any misrepresentation or breach of warranty or covenant by Reseller under this Agreement; (ii) any actual or alleged act or omission of Reseller in the course of its performance hereunder; (iii) death or injury to any person or damage to any property resulting from any product or part (a) not supplied by Company, (b) supplied by Company but changed, modified, adapted or refitted without Company's written authorization, (c) not in Company's standard inventory but purchased by Company at Reseller's direction, or (d) manufactured to Reseller's design, as well as any claim of infringement arising from the use of any Product with any other product as a combination not furnished by Company.

b) Company warrants and represents that the Products shall be delivered with good title free of any rightful third party claim of infringement of any patent, copyright, trademark, trade secret or other intellectual property right recognized or registered within the United States and its possessions. Company shall defend Reseller from all claims, suits, damages, costs, expenses or liabilities actually incurred by Reseller as a result of any such claim. If a Product or part thereof is held to constitute an infringement and its intended use is enjoined, Company shall at its option procure for Reseller the right to continue using the Product or part, replace it with a non-infringing Product or part, modify it to become non-infringing, or remove it and refund its purchase price (less depreciation and amortization). This Section does not apply to

i) any product or part not supplied by Company;

ii) any Product or part supplied by Company which is changed, modified, adapted or refitted without Company 's express written approval;

iii) any Product or part not in Company 's standard inventory but purchased by it at Reseller's direction;

iv) any Product or part manufactured to Reseller's design or

v) any claim of infringement arising from the use of any Product in combination with any other product not furnished by Company. THIS INDEMNITY IS COMPANY'S SOLE LIABILITY AND RESELLER'S SOLE REMEDY FOR INFRINGEMENT OF ANY PATENT, COPYRIGHT, TRADEMARK, TRADE SECRET OR OTHER INTELLECTUAL PROPERTY RIGHT.

14. WARRANTIES AND REPRESENTATIONS

The Products are covered by the limited warranties in effect at the time the Products are delivered, on standard terms and conditions supplied with each product shipped and which are incorporated herein by this reference. Should Reseller resell Products to any entity other than an end-user, and Products are further resold, the final end-user may not receive any Company warranty or technical support.

15. BUSINESS STANDARDS; PRODUCT SERVICE PROVISION

b) The party receiving the Demand Letter shall have 3 Business Days to send a written response ("Response Letter"), which shall be sent in accordance with Section 17.4. The Response Letter must accept the Proposed Resolution in the Demand Letter or offer some other resolution.

i) If the Response Letter accepts the proposed resolution in the Demand Letter or no Response Letter has been received within 3 Business Days, then the Proposed Resolution shall be promptly implemented by the parties and shall, where applicable, be considered an amendment of this Agreement.

ii) If the Response Letter offers some other resolution, it shall include all facts supporting the responding party's position on the dispute, include copies of any written materials, and identify the executives of the responding party who are authorized to resolve the dispute. The executives identified in the Demand Letter and Response Letter shall meet one or more times and exchange such additional written materials and proposals as needed to reach a resolution of the matter or for one of them to declare an impasse.

f) The Mediation shall be attended only by the mediator and the executives identified in the Demand Letter and Response Letter. The Mediation shall take no more than 3 days. Each side shall have counsel available by telephone to draft any documents necessary to implement any resolution of the Mediation. If at the end of the Mediation the parties have not reached a mutual resolution, the mediator shall within 24 hours adopt one of the party's Final Proposals or set forth in writing a resolution of the matter that is between the parties' Final Proposals ("Mediator's Resolution").

g) The Mediator's Resolution shall be immediately implemented by the parties. The Mediator's Resolution shall be binding upon the parties and not subject to any further review except in the following limited circumstances:

The Proceeding shall make a de novo review of the parties' dispute, except the Mediator's Resolution shall be admissible. The parties shall each pay one half of the costs of the retired judge unless directed otherwise by the retired judge.

17.7. No Waiver

Any failure of either party to enforce at any time, or for any period of time, any provision of this Agreement, shall not constitute a waiver of such provision or in any way affect the validity of this Agreement.

17.8. Complete Agreement

This Agreement with its Exhibits contains the parties' entire Agreement and supersedes all previous communications, representations or agreements, oral or written, regarding its subject matter. No addition to or modification hereof shall bind either party unless reduced to writing and duly executed by the parties as this Agreement was, subject, however, to revisions of Exhibits A, B and C, which Company may revise at any time pursuant to Section 17.9.

Date This Agreement Received by Employee: April 25, 2014 (the "Offer Date")

SEVERANCE AGREEMENT AND GENERAL RELEASE

This Severance Agreement and General Release ("Agreement") is made by and between Encore Technology Group, LLC ("Company," which term includes all affiliated companies and all Released Parties as defined below, where appropriate) and Keone Trask ("Employee").

WHEREAS, Employee and Company mutually agree that Employee's employment with the Company will terminate, effective April 25, 2014 (the "Effective Date");

WHEREAS, the Company and Employee do not anticipate that there will be any disputes between them or legal claims arising out of Employee's separation from employment, but nevertheless, desire to ensure a completely amicable parting and to settle fully and finally any and all differences or claims that might arise out of Employee's employment;

THE PARTIES HEREBY AGREE, in consideration of the foregoing and the following terms, conditions and obligations, as follows:

1. Employment Ended. The parties agree that Employee's employment with the Company (and any and all of its affiliates) will end on the Effective Date. Employee shall thereafter no longer be employed by Company in any capacity, and Employee shall not represent to any third party that Employee retains any employment or other relationship with Company.

2. Severance Benefits.

In exchange for the general release of claims and other good and valuable consideration and subject to the performance by Employee of the terms and provisions of this Agreement, the Company agrees to pay Employee $6,730.77 (2 weeks regular base salary as of the Effective Date) in a lump sum ("Severance Pay"), less all normal withholdings for federal and state income taxes and payroll taxes. The Severance Pay will be transmitted to Employee at the time such payments would otherwise have been made to Employee and paid to other employees, consistent with the Company's normal payroll practices, at the first normal pay period occurring immediately (i) after Company receives a fully-executed copy of this Agreement in unmodified form without deletions executed by Employee, and (ii) after the expiration of the seven-day revocation period as described below. Employee acknowledges that s/he is not entitled to receive the Severance Pay unless s/he executes and does not revoke this Agreement.

A. The Company also agrees to pay Employee $13,124.98 for Employee's accrued but unused paid time off as of the Effective Date.

B. Employee recognizes and agrees that Employee is solely responsible for any federal, state, or other tax obligations, including but not limited to all reporting and payment obligations that could arise as a consequence of Employee's receipt of any payments or benefits pursuant to this Agreement.

C. Employee will be advised of her/his COBRA continuation rights through a separate communication sent by The Employers Association, the Company's COBRA administrator. Employee should notify Tammy Summerell, Director of Human Resources, at 864-770-2758 [phone] if s/he does not get this notice. If Employee elects COBRA continuation coverage, the making of timely premium payments is solely her/his obligation.

3. Cooperation. Employee agrees to cooperate with all reasonable requests from the Company or other delegated requests regarding the transition of Employee's position and/or for information regarding Employee's position with the Company during the Severance Period. The Severance Pay set forth in this Agreement is contingent and conditioned upon Employee's full cooperation and compliance with these requests.

4. General Release of Claims. Employee hereby releases and forever discharges the Company, its subsidiaries, business units, affiliates, and parent companies, past and present, its predecessors and successors and its respective officers, directors, employees, agents, legal counsel, successors and assigns, past and present (hereinafter referred to collectively as the "Released Parties") from any and all known and unknown claims of action that Employee may have against the Released Parties arising from or in connection with: (a) the terms and conditions of her/his employment with the Company; (b) the termination of her/his employment from the Company; and (c) any conduct, actions or omissions, known or unknown, by the Released Parties occurring on or before the date Employee executes this Agreement. This release, and the term "claim" or "claims" as used in this Agreement, includes all benefits, grievances, proceedings, investigations, hearings, charges, complaints, claims, demands, actions, causes of action, and suits of whatever nature, whether known or unknown, fixed, absolute or contingent, matured or unmatured, asserted or unasserted, however arising, and whether legal, equitable, or administrative. The released claims include Employee's attorneys' fees, court costs, wages, back pay, front pay, severance pay, compensatory damages, punitive damages, general damages, special damages, penalties, benefits of any sort, liquidated damages, costs and disbursements, expert fees, injunctive relief, equitable relief, declaratory relief, interest, reinstatement, future employment, and any other legally recoverable category of damages or relief that Employee has ever had, or now has, or may claim to have, against the Company. It is expressly intended, understood and agreed that the claims released by Employee shall include, by way of example and without limitation, all claims arising under federal, state, or local statute, ordinance, common law, regulation, equity or other sources, whether known or unknown, based upon:

A. Actual or alleged defamation, invasion of privacy, injury to credit, personal inconvenience, damage to Employee's personal reputation, outrage, distress, humiliation, loss of standing and prestige, personal injury, bodily injury, tort, loss of consortium, intentional or negligent infliction of emotional distress, abuse of process, retaliation, negligence, fraud, extortion, or other common law causes of action or other compensation for bodily injury;

B. Failure to provide benefits or pay wages or commissions, including actual or alleged violations of the South Carolina Human Affairs Law, the South Carolina Payment of Wages Act, common law and any and all other applicable state, county or local codes, statutes, ordinances or regulations;

C. Actual or alleged violations of discrimination, including but not limited to any and all claims of age, disability, race, color, sex, national origin, ancestry, religion, genetic information, or other discrimination, retaliation, or harassment;

D. Actual or alleged violations of the federal Age Discrimination in Employment Act, as amended, the Civil Rights Acts of 1866, 1871, and 1964, Section 1981 of Title 42 of the U.S. Code, Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964, as amended, the Civil Rights Act of 1991, all federal and state executive orders including Executive Order 11246, the Uniformed Services Employment and Reemployment Rights Act of 1994, the Equal Pay Act, the Americans with Disabilities Act of 1990, the Rehabilitation Act of 1973, the Family and Medical Leave Act, the Fair Labor Standards Act, the Genetic Information Nondiscrimination Act of 2008, the Worker Adjustment and Retraining Notification Act, the Pregnancy Discrimination Act, state and local wage-hour laws and regulations, and the federal Employee Retirement Income Security Act, including but not limited to claims under Company-sponsored severance and termination pay plans, if any;

E. Actual or alleged violations of any other federal or state codes, laws, ordinances, regulations or case law which prohibit employment discrimination, retaliatory termination of employment, wrongful discharge, and employment termination in violation of public policy;

F. Actual or alleged breach of express and implied contract, breach of contract accompanied by a fraudulent act, breach of implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing, interference with contract, promissory estoppel, and claims under any employment agreement, handbook or policy; and

G. Actual or alleged violations of the National Labor Relations Act and the Labor Management Relations Act.

Employee agrees and understands that any claims s/he may have under the aforementioned statutes, or any other federal, state or local law ordinance, rule or regulation, are effectively waived and released by this Agreement. Employee represents that s/he knows of no claim that s/he has that has not been released by this paragraph. This release does not extend to claims which as a matter of law cannot be waived. Employee acknowledges and understands that this paragraph is intended to prevent her/him from making any claim against the Released Parties regarding any matter or incident relating to or arising from the employment relationship or its termination that occurs up to the date Employee executes this Agreement.

5. Covenant Not to Sue. Employee hereby covenants and agrees not to file, commence or initiate any suit, grievance, demand or cause of action against the Released Parties based upon or relating to any of the claims released and forever discharged pursuant to this Agreement. If Employee breaches this covenant not to sue, s/he hereby agrees to pay all of the reasonable costs and attorneys' fees actually incurred by the Released Parties in defending against such breaching conduct, together with such other and further damages as may result, directly or indirectly, from that breach. Moreover, Employee agrees that s/he will not persuade or instruct any person to file a suit, claim or complaint on her/his behalf based on a claim released in this Agreement with any state or federal court or administrative agency against the Released Parties. Employee expressly agrees not to commence or file any class action, including any class arbitration against Company, or serve in any representative capacity in any class action, including class arbitration, against or involving the Company. In accordance with 29 C.F.R. § 1625.23(b), nothing in this covenant not to sue is intended to preclude Employee from challenging the validity of this Agreement under the Older Workers Benefit Protection Act, 29 U.S.C. § 626(f), with respect to claims under the Age Discrimination in Employment Act, and the Company shall not be entitled to recover any consideration paid under this Agreement, damages or its attorneys' fees and costs resulting from such challenge.

6. Non-Interference. Nothing in this Agreement shall interfere with Employee's right to file a charge, cooperate or participate in an investigation or proceeding conducted by the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission, or other federal or state regulatory or law enforcement agency. However, the consideration provided to Employee in this Agreement shall be the sole relief provided to Employee for the claims that are released by her/him herein. To the maximum extent permitted by law, Employee agrees that Employee will not seek and waives any right to accept any relief or award from any charge or action against the Released Parties before any federal, state, or local administrative agency or federal, state or local court whether filed by Employee or on Employee's behalf with respect to any claim or right released in this Agreement.

7. No Admission of Wrongdoing or Liability. Nothing contained in this Agreement shall constitute, or be construed as or is intended to be, an admission or an acknowledgment by the Company or the Released Parties of any wrongdoing or liability, all such wrongdoing and liability being expressly denied.

8. Confidentiality and Nondisclosure Provisions. Employee agrees to maintain absolute confidentiality and secrecy concerning the terms of this Agreement and will not reveal or disseminate by publication in any manner whatsoever this document or any matters pertaining to it to any other person except as required by legal process. This confidentiality provision does not apply to communications necessary between Employee's immediate family members or legal and financial planners or tax preparers who are also bound by this confidentiality provision. Employee also agrees to honor and remains obligated under any confidentiality agreement(s) Employee entered into with the Company or the Released Parties, and nothing in this Agreement shall be deemed to limit, void, abrogate or lessen any otherwise existing obligation of the Employee to keep confidential any trade secret or confidential information belonging to the Company, including but not limited to any such contractual or common law confidentiality obligations Employee owes to the Company.

9. Restrictive Covenants Obligations. Nothing in this Agreement shall void, abrogate or lessen any otherwise existing obligation of Employee to the Company to keep confidential any trade secret or confidential information belonging to the Company or refrain from any competition with the Company or solicitation of the Company's employees or customers, including but not limited to the obligations contained in statutory or common law, or those contained in the Employee's Non-Disclosure and Non-Solicitation Agreement with the Company or referenced in other written agreements with the Company.

10. Non-Disparagement. Employee agrees not to make any statements, written or verbal, or cause or encourage others to make any statements, written or verbal, including but not limited to any statements made via social media, on websites or blogs, that defame, disparage or in any way criticize the personal or business reputation, practices, or conduct of the Company, or any of the Released Parties. Employee acknowledges and agrees that this prohibition extends to statements, written or verbal, made to anyone, including but not limited to the news media, competitors, vendors, employees (past and present), customers and clients. Employee further understands and agrees that this paragraph is a material provision of this Agreement and that any breach of this paragraph shall be a material breach of this Agreement, and that the Company would be irreparably harmed by violation of this provision.

11. Disclosure. Employee acknowledges and warrants that s/he is not aware of, or that s/he has fully disclosed to the Company, any matters for which Employee was responsible or which came to Employee's attention as an employee of the Company that might give rise to, evidence, or support any claim of illegal conduct, regulatory violation, unlawful discrimination, or other cause of action against the Company.

12. Company Property.

a. All records, files, lists, including computer generated lists, data, drawings, documents, equipment and similar items relating to the Company's business that Employee generated or received from the Company remain the Company's sole and exclusive property. Employee agrees to promptly return to the Company all property of the Company in her/his possession. Employee further represents that s/he has not copied or caused to be copied, printed out, or caused to be printed out any documents or other material originating with or belonging to the Company. Employee additionally represents that s/he will not retain in her/his possession any such documents or other materials. Employee agrees not to delete Company information or any other electronic information from Employee's computer or other devices belonging to the Company before or after the Effective Date. Employee further agrees not to access the Company's computer system or other electronic systems following the Effective Date.

b. Any and all social media and other online accounts and profiles created or used by Employee on behalf of Company or otherwise for the purpose of promoting or marketing Company or similar business purposes, including such profiles and accounts featuring or displaying Company's name and trademarks ("Company Social Media Accounts") belong solely to Company. As of the Effective Date, Employee agrees to cease accessing, using, updating or modifying any and all Company Social Media Accounts.

c. Upon the separation of Employee's employment, Company will retain ownership and control of all Company Social Media Accounts created or used during the course of Employee's employment with the Company, including all related data and information. Prior to the Effective Date, Employee agrees to provide to Company the log-in information, including usernames and passwords, for each Company Social Media Account that Employee created, used or managed. Employee also agrees to assist Company, both prior to and after the Effective Date (as may be necessary), with the transition and maintenance of each Company Social Media Account created or used by Employee during the course her/his employment with the Company, including providing information that may be necessary to ensure that Company is able to access the Company Social Media Accounts.

13. No Other Compensation Due. Employee acknowledges and agrees that neither the Company nor any of the Released Parties owes Employee any wages, salary, stock options, bonus, accrued vacation or sick leave, benefits, paid time off, notice pay, severance pay, commissions, equity or ownership, incentive pay, salary, reimbursement, expenses, deferred compensation, or other compensation in any amount whatsoever other than as expressly agreed to herein. Employee agrees that to the extent that Employee is otherwise due any such amounts or compensation or expenses of any nature, the Company's obligation to pay these amounts is satisfied and subsumed in full by the Severance Pay. The parties shall each bear their own costs and their own attorneys' fees.

14. No Other Consideration. Employee affirms that the only consideration for the signing of this Agreement is that set forth in this Agreement and that no other promises or assurances of any kind have been made to Employee by the Company, the Company's attorneys, or any other person, as an inducement to sign this Agreement. The consideration for this Agreement tendered and herewith accepted is solely by way of settlement, compromise, and final disposition of disputed claims, and it is therefore specifically agreed that this Agreement shall forever be a final and complete bar to and full satisfaction of Employee's claims and suits for injuries or damages of whatsoever nature resulting from the aforesaid matters.

15. No Assignment. Employee hereby represents and warrants that Employee has not assigned, transferred, or conveyed to any individual or entity any alleged right, claim or cause of action of any kind which is included within the above releases. Employee further represents and warrants that Employee is aware of no lien or other encumbrance on Employee's rights, claims, and causes of action, and that Employee is entitled to receive from the Company payment of the full amount of the proceeds due to Employee under this Agreement.

16. Breach of Agreement. If either party brings a claim for breach of the terms of this Agreement, the prevailing party shall be entitled to its reasonable attorneys' fees and expenses incurred in prosecuting or defending such an action.

17. Binding Effect. This Agreement shall be binding upon and inure to the benefit of Employee and the Company, and their officers, directors, employees, agents, legal counsel, heirs, successors and assigns.

18. Warranties/Representations. Employee hereby warrants and represents that:

A. Throughout her/his employment, s/he was fully and appropriately compensated for all hours worked in accordance with the Fair Labor Standards Act and other applicable law, if any;

B. Employee has been provided with all leave to which s/he is entitled under the Company policy and applicable law, including but not limited to the Family and Medical Leave Act;

C. Employee has carefully read and fully understands the comprehensive terms and conditions of this Agreement and the releases set forth herein;

D. Employee is executing this Agreement knowingly and voluntarily, without any duress, coercion or undue influence by the Company, its representatives, or any other person;

E. Employee has consulted with legal counsel of her/his own choice before executing this Agreement;

F. Employee has pending no claim, complaint, grievance or any document with any federal or state agency or any court seeking money damages or relief against the Company;

G. The Severance Pay recited above constitutes good and valuable consideration;

H. Employee is fully satisfied with the terms and conditions of this Agreement including, without limitation, the consideration paid to her/him by the Company;

I. Employee has not made a claim for worker's compensation related to her/his employment with the Company, and that s/he is currently unaware of any injury or illness that would support such a claim; and

J. Employee is not waiving rights or claims that may arise after the date this Agreement is executed.

19. Entire Agreement; Severability of Terms. Except as expressly otherwise provided herein, this Agreement contains the complete, entire understanding of the parties. In executing this Agreement, neither party relies on any term, condition, promise or representation other than those expressed in this Agreement. This Agreement supersedes all prior and contemporaneous oral and written agreements and discussions with respect to the subject matter hereof. This Agreement may be amended or modified only by an agreement in writing. If any provision of this Agreement is determined to be invalid or otherwise unenforceable, then that invalidity or unenforceability shall not affect any other provision of this Agreement, which shall continue and remain in full force and effect. Except as stated herein, all other agreements, written or verbal, between the parties shall be void and of no effect.

20. Compliance with the Older Workers Benefit Protection Act. To comply with the Older Workers Benefit Protection Act of 1990, the Company has advised Employee of the legal requirements of that Act and this Agreement fully incorporates those legal requirements by reference and as follows:

A. This Agreement is written in layman's terms, and Employee hereby represents to the Company that Employee understands and comprehends its terms;

B. Employee is hereby advised to, and has had an opportunity to, consult with an attorney to review this Agreement prior to executing it;

C. This Agreement specifically refers to rights and claims arising under the Age Discrimination in Employment Act;

D. Employee does not waive any rights or claims that result from events occurring after the date this Agreement is executed by Employee;

E. Employee hereby acknowledges that Employee is receiving consideration beyond anything of value to which Employee already is entitled;

F. Employee has twenty-one days from Employee's receipt hereof (the Offer Date) to consider this proposed Agreement. Employee's failure to accept this proposed Agreement by close of business on the twenty-first day following Employee's receipt of this Agreement may be deemed rejection of its terms; and

G. Employee has the right to revoke this Agreement for seven days following Employee's signing of this Agreement, and after the expiration of that seven days the executed Agreement shall be of full validity, force, and effect. To exercise this right, Employee is required to deliver written notice to the Company prior to expiration of this right to revoke, and such revocation is not valid or effective unless and until the written notice of same is received by the Company, at the address or facsimile number specified at the end of this Agreement, within the revocation period. Otherwise, such revocation shall be invalid and ineffective and this Agreement shall be deemed accepted.

21. Governing Law. This Agreement shall be governed by and construed and enforced in accordance with the laws of the State of South Carolina, without regard to the choice of law principles. This Agreement may be enforced only in a court of competent jurisdiction in Greenville County, South Carolina, and the parties hereby consent and submit themselves to the exclusive venue and personal jurisdiction of said court with respect to all such disputes and controversies whether or not Employee is then residing in South Carolina.

22. Counterparts. This Agreement may be executed in any number of counterparts, each of which shall be an original, but all of which taken together shall constitute one and the same agreement. Delivery of an executed counterpart of this Agreement by facsimile or other electronic means shall have the same force and effect as the delivery of an original executed counterpart of this Agreement.

Re: Notice of Termination

To whom it may concern:

This letter serves as official notice that Encore is terminating the "Clear Touch Interactive Reseller Agreement" (the "Agreement") dated April 24, 2013 between Encore Technology Group, LLC ("Encore") and Clear Touch Interactive ("ClearTouch"), including any related revisions and amendments deemed to be in effect. Encore also hereby rescinds and terminates all outstanding purchase orders for which Encore has not yet received delivery of product.

Termination is effective 30 days from the date of this letter per Section 9 "Term" of the Agreement, which allows termination by either party at any time with 30 days' written notice.

Encore also notifies you of its termination of the Agreement for cause on grounds that the Agreement is invalid given the facts and circumstances surrounding its execution. Specifically, at the time of and subsequent to the execution of the Agreement, Keone Trask ("Keone") was employed by Encore as a senior executive, had non-disclosure and non-solicitation obligations to Encore, and was subject to a range of customary legal duties to Encore, including fiduciary duties and duties of loyalty and care.

Keone was the primary Encore employee responsible for developing the supplier relationship between Encore and ClearTouch. Keone is currently a senior executive and an owner of ClearTouch. We now understand and have evidence that Keone and his immediate family members were in fact owners, managing members, and managers of ClearTouch prior to and during the term of the agreement and during Keone's employment with Encore.

Neither Keone nor ClearTouch disclosed these facts and conflicts of interest to Todd Newnam, owner of Encore, or to Russell Young or David Masters, who were and are other senior executives of Encore and who were involved with the development of ClearTouch as a supplier to Encore. During his employment by Encore, we believe that Keone used Encore financial and other resources directly and indirectly to benefit ClearTouch and devoted a significant portion of his time to advance the business of his and his family's related interests in ClearTouch rather than the interests of Encore, his full-time employer.

Attached is an executed copy of Keone Trask's Non-Disclosure and Non-solicitation Agreement effective February 18, 2013. Among other provisions, we direct you to the section titled "Business Opportunity," which clearly obligated Keone to notify Encore of opportunities of which ClearTouch has taken advantage.

We also understand that some group of Keone Trask and ClearTouch and its employees and/or affiliates have told directly or intimated to customers, potential customers and others in the market that either Todd Newnam or Encore have a financial interest or other stake in ClearTouch in an effort to generate credibility and alleviate questions regarding the financial stability of ClearTouch. Since neither Todd Newnam nor Encore have any such interest in ClearTouch, you are directed to communicate this fact to your employees and affiliates and to direct them to not communicate otherwise.

We also remind Keone Trask of his April 2014 severance agreement, which has several provisions applicable to this situation. We have not included a copy of this agreement with this communication, but he can contact Tammy Summerell at Encore directly if he needs another copy.

Amended Expert Report of:
Michael E Meilinger, CPA, ABV, CFE, CFF, MAFF, CMA
Dated September 26, 2017

I. Expert Report of Michael E. Meilinger

I, Michael E. Meilinger, am the President of Meilinger Consulting, P.C., a licensed CPA firm in the state of South Carolina that specializes in consulting, forensic accounting, business valuations, and litigation support. I hold a Bachelor of Science degree in Accounting. I am a Certified Public Accountant, Accredited in Business Valuation, a Certified Fraud Examiner, Certified in Financial Forensics, a Master Analyst in Financial Forensics, and a Certified Management Accountant. My curriculum vitae and history of prior testimony are attached as Appendix 1.

II. Documents

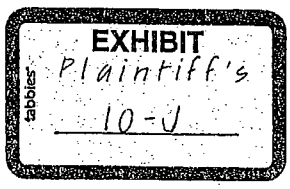

In preparing this expert report, I have considered the documents listed in Appendix 2.

III. Executive Summary

I have presented my calculations as three separate items to be evaluated by the court:

1. The first, shown in Table 1: Direct Costs Incurred by Encore below, represents only the direct costs incurred by Encore while the Defendants were allegedly working in the interest of Clear Touch while employed by Encore, including compensation paid to Encore employees working for Clear Touch as well as trade show and related expenses paid by Encore for Clear Touch's benefit. For these items, I have calculated $488,041 in damages.

Wages, Benefits, and Expense Reimbursements	$ 420,352

2. The second, displayed in Table 2: Profit Lost on Sales Made to Encore and Encore Customers by Clear Touch on the following page, represents the profit diverted to Clear Touch by the Defendants' alleged breach of his fiduciary duties and duties of loyalty to Encore, the business opportunity provision of his agreement with Encore, and Trask's non-compete agreement with Encore.

3. The third, presented in Table 3: Damages for Loss of Business Opportunity, shows Encore's lost business opportunity because of the Defendants' alleged taking of the Clear Touch business opportunity cultivated while Trask was employed by Encore. This loss is represented by Clear Touch's profit from 2/13/2013 – 12/31/2015, adjusted for expenses either required or not required by Encore to facilitate the same level of business, and the fair market value of the Clear Touch business opportunity as of 12/31/2015.

IV. Preliminary Anticipated Testimony

If called as a witness at trial, I will testify to a reasonable degree of accounting certainty concerning the amount of economic damages to which Encore Technology Group (Encore or Plaintiff) contends it is entitled as a result of the allegations against Mr. Keone Trask and Clear Touch Interactive (Trask, Clear Touch, or collectively as Defendants), which include breaches of various duties owed to Encore by Trask as an employee and breach of agreements between Trask and Encore that included, among others, a non-compete agreement, non-solicitation of customers agreement, non-piracy of employees agreement, and business opportunity agreement.

Specifically, as requested, I will testify to the amount of calculated damages related to

1. Wages and other forms of compensation paid to Trask and other Encore employees, including Mr. Leo Gallant and Mr. Jimmy Higginbotham, who are alleged to have been actively working for the benefit of Clear Touch while employed by Encore
2. Estimated marketing costs unknowingly paid by Encore for the alleged benefit of Clear Touch
3. Profit lost on products sold to Encore by Clear Touch during specific periods, including:
    a) Trask's employment with Encore from 2/13/2013 through 4/25/2014
    b) The period following Trask's termination during which the non-compete and non-solicit covenants were in force per the termination agreement between Encore and Trask, which was from 4/26/2014 –4/25/2015
    c) The period following the expiration of the covenants mentioned above through the end of the reseller agreement, 4/26/2015– 10/10/2015
4. Profit lost on sales made by Clear Touch to Leon County Schools during the periods of 4/26/2014 – 4/25/2015 and 4/26/2015 – 10/10/2015
5. The value of Encore's lost business opportunity, which encompasses the normalized earnings of Clear Touch during the same periods as in sections 3a – 3c above and the fair market value of the Clear Touch business opportunity as of 12/31/2015.

In order to perform these calculations, I was provided both internal information by Encore management and documentation provided by Clear Touch during discovery. As displayed in the Executive Summary above, I have calculated these damages to be between $488,041– $5,536,254, depending on the determination of the court.

Relevant theory, procedures, and further details of my findings are included below.

V. Background Information

Encore was formed in February 2013 from the Technology Solutions and Cloud Services division of Computer Software Innovations, Mr. Trask's employer. As such, he, along with several others, became an employee of Encore around the same time. Per discussions with Encore management, Mr. Trask was primarily tasked with business development and classroom technology strategy, sourcing, sales, and execution.

Trask formed Clear Touch Interactive, LLC as a Nevada LLC on August 24, 2012 and has maintained the benefits of ownership, direct or indirect, since. Per Clear Touch financial statements provided in discovery, no revenue was recorded until May 2013, which was a sale to Encore. It has been alleged that, during his employment with Encore, Trask used his position to 1) advance the interests of Clear Touch ahead of those of Encore by negotiating arrangements with terms favorable to Clear Touch, including a reseller agreement between Encore and Clear Touch as well as sourcing arrangements between Clear Touch and its suppliers with whom Encore could have transacted directly, 2) promote Clear Touch products to Encore clients without disclosing his interest in Clear Touch, 3) influence Encore employees to act in the interest of Clear Touch, and 4) intentionally dissuade Encore from pursuing options aside from Clear Touch.

Trask's employment with Encore was eventually terminated on April 25, 2014. Following his termination, Trask was bound by various covenants, including non-solicitation of customers, non-competition, and non-piracy of employees, all of which he has allegedly breached through direct contact with Encore customers and efforts to entice Encore employees to join Clear Touch.

VI. Basis for Opinions

I have read and analyzed the documents listed in Appendix 2 to understand the details and issues regarding this case. I have also met with Encore management and their counsel to discuss details of the case relevant to my procedures.

VII. Assumptions

My calculation of damages assumes that Encore will prevail on one or more of its theories of liability. Additionally, my calculations were performed to the standard of reasonable certainty as defined below:

> "The law does not require absolute certainty of data upon which lost profits are to be estimated, but all that is required is such reasonable certainty that damages may not be based wholly upon speculation or conjecture, and it is sufficient if there is certain standard or fixed method by which profits sought to be recovered may be estimated and determined with a fair degree of accuracy."

VIII. Calculation of Damages

As stated above, all calculations of damages in this case have been based on the court ruling in Encore's favor on one or more issues of liability. Procedures and findings regarding each element of damage in my calculations are included in the sections below:

Calculation 1: Direct Costs Incurred by Encore

This calculation assumes that Encore is entitled to the expenses, in the forms of compensation and expenses, incurred that directly benefited of Clear Touch. This includes the wages and other forms of compensation paid to Trask, Mr. Leo Gallant, and Mr. Jimmy Higginbotham, all of whom are alleged to have worked for Clear Touch's benefit while employed and compensated by Encore, expenses reimbursed to those same individuals, and expenses paid by Encore for trade shows and related items which benefited Clear Touch. These items are detailed in the following sections:

1) Wages and Compensation Paid to Encore Employees

Certain employees, including Mr. Trask, are alleged to have spent considerable time and effort advancing the interest of Clear Touch while still employed by Encore. It is Encore's position that compensation, in various forms, paid to these employees during this period represents one element of damage. My calculation assumes that each respective individual spent certain percentages of time on Clear Touch during their employment with Encore. Encore's management has presented estimated allocation percentages to me for use in this calculation. Which at the direction of the attorneys, I have utilized for this report, as I understand detailed time activity was not kept at Encore. The allocation percentages provided to me are as follows:

Keone Trask	95%
Leo Gallant	90%
Jimmy Higginbotham	95%

I have examined the following documents and summarized the information therein to calculate the damages incurred by Encore resulting from this element.

- W-2s for Jimmy Higginbotham, Leo Gallant, and Keone Trask (collectively "CT Employees") for years 2013 – 2015 for the duration of their employment with Encore
- Expense reports itemizing expenses paid to Trask, Gallant, and Higginbotham for expenses alleged by Encore to be related to and/or beneficial to ClearTouch

- Encore management prepared schedules detailing dental, medical, and 401(k) expenses paid by Encore for each individual listed above.
- Leo Gallant costs have been calculated from 4/26/2014, the date he signed a non-disclosure agreement with Clear Touch
- Jimmy Higginbotham costs have been calculated from 4/28/2014, the date he signed a non-disclosure agreement with Clear Touch

Damages for this element, totaling $644,396 have been calculated and displayed in the following table:

2) Trade Show and Other Related Costs Paid by Encore for the Benefit of Clear Touch

Per Encore's management, Mr. Trask was primarily responsible for business development and classroom technology strategy, sourcing, sales, and execution during his employment with Encore. He was tasked with expanding the Encore customer base, particularly in the classroom technology end-market, and as such, was given authority to select which trade shows to attend and to drive related activities. Because of the allegations against Mr. Trask and the other CT Employees, Encore claims that many trade show expenses paid by the company were in fact for the benefit of Clear Touch.

My analysis of the trade show expenses included examination of a schedule (generated from Encore QuickBooks) provided by Encore management detailing the trade show expenses at Encore from 2013 through 2015. This analysis required two primary steps. Both are discussed below:

1. High Level Comparison of Trade Show and Related Expenses

   When Encore assumed control in 2013, total trade show expenses for that partial year were $59,508. In 2014, they increased 70% to 100,990. This increase alone is a significant factor, but is especially so when considering that Mr. Trask was terminated in 2014 and trade show and related expenses declined to $40,529 in 2015. These figures do not represent damages, but instead indicate that Mr. Trask may have increased trade show expenses at Encore for the benefit of Clear Touch.

2. Calculation of Estimated Marketing Costs Paid for Benefit of ClearTouch

   To calculate the trade show costs paid by Encore, I relied upon spreadsheets provided by Encore management. Considering that certain expenses are incorporated in the reimbursed expenses included in the wages and compensation calculation above and other expenses have been clearly delineated by Encore management as not being related to Clear Touch, these amounts have been netted from the total. To calculate the amount of marketing expenses that benefited Clear Touch, I then applied Encore management's estimate of 50% to the remaining amount to estimate Encore's damages.

   Based on the procedures above, I have estimated trade show costs paid by Encore for the benefit of Clear Touch to be $67,689. This result is calculated in the table below, while a more detailed analysis is included as Appendix 3:

Year	Total*	Reimbursed Expenses	Not CT Related per Encore Mgmt	Net	Est. %	CT Trade Show Expense
2013	59,508	(10,242)	(3,890)	45,376	50%	22,688
2014	100,990	(14,963)	(13,000)	73,027	50%	36,514
2015	40,529	-	(23,554)	16,975	50%	8,488
Totals	201,027	(25,205)	(40,444)	135,378		67,689

 Figures from QuickBooks rounded to nearest dollar*

Calculation 2: Profit Lost on Sales Made to Encore and Encore Customers by Clear Touch

This calculation assumes that Trasks abided by his duties and agreements with Encore and brought the vendors and sourcing arrangements directly to Encore rather than taking the opportunity for himself. As such, the damages related to their compensation would not be included as a part of this scenario as those costs would not have been avoidable had Encore received those profits. This calculation assumes that Trask should have introduced Encore directly to Clear Touch's suppliers so that Encore could have derived additional gross profit by purchasing on the same terms as Clear Touch. In addition to his duties as a senior executive of Encore, Trask's employment contract required him to afford Encore with "any project, investment, venture, business, or other opportunity...that is competitive with, related to or in the same field as Company [Encore]."[1] Based on this, Encore would have had the same supplier agreements with Clear Touch's suppliers, and thus would have benefited from the profit that was instead passed through to Clear Touch. [2] Therefore, I have calculated the gross profit (Amount invoiced to Encore less the cost of the products to Clear Touch) that Clear Touch generated as an element of damage.

Additionally, the non-solicitation agreement states that Trask agrees not to "for Employee [Trask] or on behalf of any Person, directly or indirectly solicit, influence, contact, sell to, service or deal with any Customer of the Company [Encore]," during his employment and for one year following the end of his employment with Encore. I have been advised that Higginbotham had the same non-solicitation agreement that applied until the second half of 2015. I have been advised by Encore management and its counsel that Leon County Schools, a former customer of Encore's, was directly contacted and sold to by Clear Touch during the applicable period. As such, I have calculated the gross profit on those sales as an element of damage in this calculation.

[2] It is reasonable to assume that Encore could have negotiated superior terms and margins to that of Clear Touch given its greater scale and financial resources.

1. Lost Profits Resulting from Sales to Encore from Clear Touch

Encore's position is that Mr. Trask used his position within Encore to sell Clear Touch products to Encore's customers, thus creating a middle layer of the transaction in which Clear Touch profited to Encore's detriment. Therefore, gross profit has been chosen as the damage because it represents the margin that Encore was not able to realize on the sales of products that Trask was selling through Clear Touch rather than notifying and allowing Encore to purchase the products from Clear Touch's suppliers at the same terms.

As such, I have calculated Encore's lost profits as a result of these actions by performing the following procedures:

1. I reviewed invoices provided to me by Encore management for all sales made to Encore by Clear Touch during the relevant periods discussed above
2. I then, in all instances in which it was possible, traced the transactions back to Clear Touch's suppliers to determine the cost of the products sold to Encore. Twenty invoices representing $1,593,411 in revenue to Clear Touch were traced in total.
3. In instances in which a Clear Touch invoice to Encore could not be traced back directly to a Clear Touch supplier, I have calculated average costs of items purchased by Clear Touch and sold to Encore to estimate the margin realized by Clear Touch.
4. NOTE: As referenced above, I have considered the necessity of deducting operating expenses from calculated lost profit; however, I understand that Encore still incurred these expenses in the normal course of business. Therefore, they did not avoid these costs as the sales were still made, only at a lower margin due to involvement of Clear Touch. Based on this, operating expenses have not been deducted as part of these calculations.
5. NOTE: Encore would, however, have paid commissions on the gross margins if it had been realized. Encore management has represented that they paid commissions between 8% - 12% on gross margin. Therefore, I have added 10% commission costs from these damages to account for this additional expense that would have been incurred.

Based on these procedures, I have calculated $675,362 in damages related to sales made to Encore by Clear Touch. A summary of these calculations is included in the table below. Detail may be found in the attached Appendix 4[3].

Net 10% Commission	125,731	344,201	205,430	675,362

 All figures rounded to nearest dollar*

As one may see in the table above, during the period from Clear Touch's inception to the end of Trask's non-compete, approximately 82% of revenue and 83% of profit is directly traceable back to Clear Touch's suppliers.

2. Lost Profit on Sales made by Clear Touch to Leon County Schools

Encore management has informed me that Leon County Schools was an Encore customer before being solicited by and subsequently moving its business directly to Clear Touch. As such, for all sales taking place during the non-compete period (4/26/2014 – 4/25/2015), I have calculated the gross profit earned on these sales by Clear Touch as an element of Encore's damages.

Additionally, I have calculated profit lost on sales to Leon County Schools during the period 4/26/2014 – 10/10/2015, during which time such sales were derived both Higginbotham's non-solicit and the re-seller agreement between Encore and Clear Touch were still was in effect.

A summary of these damages is included in the table below, with more detail included in the attached Appendix 5.

[3] Per my discussions with Encore management, while the calculation related to this item is based on the margins that Clear Touch could realize, it is reasonable to believe that Encore, considering its greater scale and resources, could potentially have negotiated even more favorable terms and realized higher margins. It should also be noted that, in this calculation, there is no addition for compensation for these individuals who were spending their time building the broader value of Clear Touch beyond the sales to Encore and Leon County Schools. Additionally, Encore's sales force is compensated largely on commission. Due to the low margins it had been receiving as a result of Clear Touch's involvement, the sales force was not fully motivated to sell those products. If Encore was afforded the opportunity, Encore sales representatives would have received approximately 300% more commission on each sale. Therefore, it is reasonable to believe that, if the margins were higher, Encore could have sold even greater volume at higher margins.

	Trask Non-Compete	Higginbotham Non-Solicit & Reseller Agreement
	4/26/2014 - 4/25/2015	4/26/2015 - 10/10/2015
Leon County Sales by Clear Touch	539,898	321,192

Gross Margin on Leon County Sales	343,821	128,340
Net 10% Commission	309,439	115,506

Calculation 3: Loss of Business Opportunity

Pursuant to the Encore agreements with Trask, Trask was required to offer "any project, investment, venture, business or other opportunity...that is competitive with, related to or in the same field as Company [Encore],"[4] to Encore. This alternative accounts for the fact that Clear Touch had value beyond the sales with Encore and Leon County Schools in the preceding section. Rather, Clear Touch began generating cash flow that would have otherwise been Encore's had the opportunity been afforded to it. Therefore, in calculating the damages in this scenario, I have identified and calculated two separate elements, 1) the lost cash flow generated by Clear Touch, represented by the adjusted income of Clear Touch, from 2/13/2013 – 12/31/2015, and 2) the fair market value of Clear Touch as of 12/31/2015.

1. Adjusted Income Generated by Clear Touch from 2/13/2013 – 12/31/2015

In order to prepare this calculation, I used the following formula using information from QuickBooks income statements provided by Clear Touch's accountant in discovery:

Revenue – Cost of Goods Sold – Operating Expense + Adjustments = Adjusted Income

Adjustments

It is my understanding, based on review of financial and operational information provided to me in additional to my conversations with Encore management,that Encore was and is larger in scale than Clear Touch and financially healthy. Specifically, Encore had the capacity and capability to handle the Clear Touch sales without incurring the same costs as Clear Touch. Encore had access to funds, specifically a $5,000,000 credit line it could utilize to purchase inventory or sustain operations while awaiting payment of receivables. Additionally, during this period, Encore had between 75 – 85 employees who were available to offer the capacity necessary to service the Clear Touch business. Based on this, I have adjusted the income reported by Clear Touch in its accounting records to encompass these factors and calculate the amount of income lost by Encore due to Trask's alleged breach of the business opportunity clause in his employment agreement with Encore. These adjustments included:

- Cost of Goods Sold[5] adjustment – The financial statements provided by Clear Touch appear to be mostly on the cash basis, meaning that revenue and expenses were recorded when cash was received or spent. As such, cost of goods sold appears to have been overstated early in the company's life cycle as inventory was being built. This expense has been adjusted to a 33% margin on gross sales based on the analysis performed in Calculation 2. Margins appear to have increased over the course of my analysis, to greater than 40% - 50% in some instances, but my calculation normalizes the margin to 33% to encompass the stability of Encore's operation[6]. This figure is further supported by the Clear Touch memo to potential investors in which Clear Touch management represents its margins to be 33% (CT01722 – CT0724).
- Factoring fees – Encore is a healthy company with a $5,000,000 credit line and can operate on extended collection periods. During this period from 6/30/2014 to 12/31/2015, the average amount drawn on the line was $1,067,143, leaving approximately $3,900,000 to finance this business. Factoring of receivables would not have been required. Therefore, factoring fees have been eliminated.
- Margin Split – Like the factoring fee adjustment above, Encore's size and resources allow it to operate without requiring a margin split arrangement with downstream distribution partners.
- Professional fees – Encore's expense structure already included these fees and expenses.
- Warehousing expense - Encore's expense structure already included this expense.
- Rent expense – Encore's expense structure already included this expense.
- Mailbox rental - Encore's expense structure already included this expense.
- Bonuses – Bonuses are considered discretionary; however, they have been included under the assumption that they were paid to critical employees.

[5] Factoring fees were not included in any adjustment to Cost of Goods Sold as they were adjusted separately.
[6] Based on the characteristics of Encore discussed above, it is reasonable to believe that Encore could have used its scale and access to funds to increase this margin further. For the calculation, I have relied on the margin determined from the Clear Touch invoice and purchase order analysis.

- Additional Employee Salary – Encore is sufficiently staffed and would not have had to incur significant additional salary to service the Clear Touch business. However, it is understood that certain Encore employees (Gallant and Higginbotham) moved to Clear Touch over the course of this period. Additionally, Encore management has represented that one additional position may have been required. As such, I have adjusted additional salary downward by 25% to incorporate this adjustment.
- Contract Labor – It is assumed that Encore's employee base could have absorbed the activity represented by the contract labor expensed by Clear Touch.
- Trask Salary for period during which he was not employed by Encore and not being paid by Clear Touch – I have subtracted the amount of compensation that would have been paid to Trask by Encore during his employment for the months May – June 2014, which are understood to be the months during which he was no longer being compensated by Encore and was not yet being compensated by Clear Touch.
- Payroll Taxes Adjustments on Compensation Related Adjustments - In all instances involving wages, I have adjusted – either up or down – for payroll taxes estimated at 7.5% of wages.

This calculation is summarized in the following table. Additional information and detail is included in Appendix 6 attached with this report:

Dates	Revenue	COGS	Expenses	Unadjusted Income	Adj	Adjusted Income
2/13/2013 - 4/25/2014	408,647	593,101	54,964	(239,418)	344,555	105,137

2. Fair Market Value of Clear Touch Interactive as of 12/31/2015

In addition to the damages related to the loss of the Clear Touch business opportunity from 2/13/2013 – 12/31/2015 calculated above, Encore has also lost the opportunity into the future as Clear Touch has further established itself in the market. This loss is considered permanent, and as such:

> "...damages are to be measured by one of two alternative methods: (1) the going concern value; or (2) lost future profits."
> Cooper Distributing Co v Amana Refrigeration, Inc 180 F.3d 542 (3rd Cir. 1999) cited by Thomas Burrage, CPA/ABV in The Comprehensive Guide to Lost Profit Damages, 2009

The going concern value, in this instance the fair market value, of an enterprise is defined as "the price that a willing buyer would pay and a willing seller would accept in a free marketplace for the business in question" (Burrage, 2009). Damages are then valued as the difference between the value of the business (Clear Touch in this case) and the value received by the plaintiffs upon sale, which in this case is zero Based on this, I have estimated the fair market value of Clear Touch as of 12/31/2015. I have considered three different approaches in my calculation of Clear Touch's value: 1) Asset, 2) Market, and 3) Income.

Asset Approach:

In considering the asset approach, otherwise known as book-value, net asset value, or liquidation value, I have calculated Clear Touch's equity per its filed 2015 tax return as $1,428,883, which has not been adjusted upward for potentially significant cash payments for inventory believed to be expensed at year end for tax purposes. This method does not incorporate any consideration for the ongoing and future potential earnings of Clear Touch, and therefore, has received no weight in my final estimate of value. Rather, it stands as a factor in my consideration of my final estimate's reasonableness.

Market Approach:

The market approach represents the application of pricing multiples derived from transactions of comparable companies in the same or similar lines of business. In my considering of the market approach, I have derived market multiples from the Pratts Stats database for NAICS codes 423430 – Computer and Computer Peripheral Equipment and Software Merchant Wholesalers and 443142 – Electronics Stores, which are believed to best represent the operations of Clear Touch. All multiples used are "asset sale" multiples which assume that the seller will keep all cash held by the business, all receivables, and pay all debt.

A summary of cash, accounts receivable, and debt are summarized in the table below:

Net Adjustment for Market Approach Values*

Cash	694,748
Accounts Receivable	261,159
Total Debt	(357,303)
Net Adjustment	598,604

 All values derived from Clear Touch 2015 tax return*

Income Approach:

Income approaches rely on the theory that the value of a business depends on the future benefits that will accrue to it, with the value of the future economic benefits discounted back to present value, at some appropriate discount rate. I have utilized and relied on the capitalization of earnings method in my calculations.

Relevant Business Valuation Factors Considered:

Please see Appendix 7 for additional exhibits regarding this analysis.

a. Date of Valuation: To estimate a value for Clear Touch, I have chosen 12/31/2015 as the valuation date. This date has been chosen for several reasons. The primary reason for choosing the 12/31/2015 valuation date is that it is the nearest tax year-end for Clear Touch. This represents a clear "cut-off" for the financial results of the company, as the books for small businesses are closed as of the end of the year, thus offering a clearer financial picture for analysis rather than a point occurring mid-year.

   Additionally, Encore and Clear Touch's re-seller agreement ran through 10/10/2015. This relationship leads me to again believe that year-end 2015 best represents the value of Clear Touch during the time it was affiliated with Encore.

   After considering all of the business and financial factors in this case, it is my opinion that 12/31/2015 is most appropriate valuate date for Clear Touch.

b. Discount and Capitalization Rates (Income Approach): I have determined discount and capitalization rates utilizing the build-up method. This is presented in the following table:

Build-Up of Discount and Capitalization Rates Used [7]

Normalized Risk Free	4.00%
Normalized Equity Risk Premium	5.00%
Size Premium	11.79%
Average Market Risk	20.79%
Specific Company Discount Rate	5.00%
Calculated Discount Rate	25.79%
Growth Rate Estimate	3.00%
Capitalization Rate	22.79%

[7] Normalized Risk Free Rate, Normalized Equity Premium, and Size Premium have all been taken from the Duff & Phelps 2016 Valuation Handbook. Other rates are my own estimates.

c. Weighting of Income (Income Approach – Capitalization of Earnings Method): The capitalization of earnings method requires determination of weighted earnings to which the capitalization rate must then be applied. I have weighted the earnings 15% for 2014 and 85% for 2015 considering the relative youth of the company, the relative maturation of the company in 2015, and the continued growth of the company in 2016.

d. Adjustments to Income: In valuing the business, I have made the same adjustments to income as shown in my normalization to Encore's lost profit in Calculation Two. These adjustments have been made to estimate the income stream and subsequent value of the Clear Touch business opportunity to Encore rather than the fair market value of a standalone Clear Touch entity as it is currently operated.

e. Additional Considerations: In addition to my analysis and calculations, I have also considered the values that have been represented by Clear Touch management in documents provide to me. These include the following: 1) a CatchFire Funding questionnaire completed by Clear Touch management representing the value of the company to be $2,269,818 as of 12/31/2015 (CT 000072 – CT000074), and 2) a memo prepared for potential investors in Clear Touch offering convertible equity in the amount of 1% interest for each $100,000 invested, which equates to a $10,000,000 fair market value (CT01722 – CT0724).

I have summarized the results of my calculations in the following table:

EBIT	1,178,067	4.5	5,301,302	598,604	5,899,906
EBITDA	1,273,081	4	5,092,324	598,604	5,690,928
Income Approach
Capitalization of Earnings					3,876,156
Opinion of Value					3,900,000
Clear Touch Management Representations of Value Considered
Book Value per Clear Touch 2015 tax return (not adjusted for inventory write-off)					1,428,883
Clear Touch Internally Prepared Catchfire 401(k) Valuation as of 12/31/2015					2,269,818
Investor Memo Prepared by Clear Touch Management in 2014					10,000,000

Alternative Calculation

As discussed above, lost profit theory allows for either the fair market value of the lost business or the calculation of anticipatory damages for a set period of time. I have considered this alternative which would allow for Encore's recovery of known damages, which in this instance would be from 2/13/2013 – 12/31/2016, and anticipatory damages for a limited number of years in the future.

Considering this alternative, I have utilized the same procedures as calculation 2 to calculate the known losses through 2016, which have been estimated at $4,055,656. I then calculated three years of anticipatory damages assuming the same 2% growth estimate for revenue and operating expenses and a 33% gross margin. Total gross anticipatory damages were calculated at $6,010,943, the present value of which at 12/31/2016 are $3,742,976 utilizing the 27.79% discount rate from my capitalization rate build-up. Therefore, total damages utilizing this alternative are calculated as $7,798,632.

I have not utilized this calculation to derive any specific element of damage but rather as a test for reasonableness related to the lost business opportunity by Encore. Based on this figure, I believe that my calculation of $5,536,254 is reasonable.

This NONDISCLOSURE AND PROTECTIVE AGREEMENT ("Agreement") is hereby made and entered into as of this 29th day of April, 2014 (the "Effective Date"), by and between Clear Touch Interactive, Inc., a corporation organized under the laws of Nevada, and its affiliates and subsidiaries ("Clear Touch"), and James Higginbotham, an individual. Clear Touch and James Higginbotham hereinafter shall each be referred to as a "Party" and shall collectively be referred to as the "Parties."

RECITALS:

WHEREAS, the Parties intend to jointly explore the possibility of entering into a business relationship;

WHEREAS, the Parties, to facilitate this effort, may exchange information deemed to be confidential and/or proprietary by the disclosing Party, including, without limitation, financial, operational, business and technical data regarding, as well as business, marketing, and sales strategies and plans of, the disclosing Party;

WHEREAS, the Parties desire to preserve and protect the confidentiality of all confidential and/or proprietary information disclosed by the Parties to one another;

NOW THEREFORE, for and in consideration of the mutual promises contained herein, and other good and valuable consideration, the receipt and adequacy of which is hereby acknowledged, the Parties, with the intent of being legally bound, do hereby agree as follows:

1. Purpose. Each Party hereby acknowledges that it has entered into this Agreement solely to facilitate the joint exploration by the Parties of a potential business relationship, providing a mechanism to safeguard any confidential and proprietary data exchanged by the Parties. This Agreement shall not require either Party to furnish Confidential/Proprietary Information to the other Party, nor shall the furnishing of Confidential/Proprietary Information by a Party to the other Party obligate either Party to evaluate, negotiate or enter into a business relationship with the other Party or preclude either Party from evaluating, negotiating or entering into any business relationship with a third party. No warranties of any kind are given by either party with respect to the information provided to the other.

2. Confidential/Proprietary Information. All information disclosed by a Party, its affiliates, subsidiaries or agents, or third parties at the request of the Party, to the other Party, shall be deemed to be "Confidential/Proprietary Information" if it is (a) in written, graphic or other tangible form, including, without limitation, computer discs and tapes and other media which can be converted to readable form, and bears an appropriate legend indicating its confidential and/or proprietary nature, or (b) disclosed orally, or in a form other than in writing or a media which can be converted to readable form, and is identified as confidential and propriety at the time of disclosure, with such designation confirmed in writing within seventy-two (72) hours thereafter; provided, however, that the disclosing Party's failure to place an appropriate legend indicating the confidentiality and/or proprietary nature of information disclosed in written, graphic or other tangible form or to provide written confirmation of the confidential nature of information disclosed orally, or in a form other than in writing or on computer disk or tape, shall not relieve the receiving Party of its obligation to preserve the confidentiality of said information if the receiving Party knows, should have known or has reason to know that the information is confidential or proprietary; provided further that the receiving Party shall not be liable for any reasonable, good faith disclosure of such information. Any agreements or other documents memorializing or reflecting the terms of the Parties business relationship shall also be deemed Confidential/Proprietary Information. Each Party acknowledges that the Confidential/Proprietary Information of the other Party is uniquely valuable and competitively-sensitive.

3. Use and Dissemination. Neither Party shall use Confidential/Proprietary Information of the other Party for any purpose other than evaluating and negotiating a business relationship between the Parties. Each Party shall restrict internal disclosure of Confidential/Proprietary Information of the other Party to such of its officers, employees and agents, including attorneys, accountants and financial or investment advisors, as have a reasonable need to know such information and shall advise said officers, employees and agents of the obligations assumed by it in this Agreement. Neither Party shall disclose Confidential/Proprietary Information of the other Party to any third party, other than such attorneys, accountants and financial or investment advisors as shall be assisting the Party in evaluating and negotiating the business relationship between the Parties, without the prior written consent of the other Party; provided, however, that either Party may disclose Confidential/Proprietary Information of the other Party to its principal lenders and substantial stock holders without the prior written consent of the other Party so long as such lenders and stock holders have executed a nondisclosure agreement substantially similar to this Agreement. A Party shall not reproduce Confidential/Proprietary Information of the other Party unless necessary to evaluate and explore a business relationship between the Parties, and shall ensure that all such copies, as well as summaries and notes of and other documents and materials containing or referencing, the Confidential/Proprietary Information of the other Party are appropriately marked as such.

4. Standard of Care. Each Party shall take all reasonable and necessary steps to prevent the disclosure, unauthorized use or publication of Confidential/Proprietary Information of the other Party and in so doing, shall not use less than the same degree of care it uses with regard to its own proprietary or confidential information, and shall maintain said information in a secure location accessible only by those who are authorized to view it.

5. Exceptions. The restrictions on disclosure of Confidential/Proprietary Information shall not apply to (i) information which at the time of disclosure was generally available to the public; (ii) information which subsequent to its disclosure to a Party, is published or otherwise becomes available to the public through any means other than an act or omission of the Party; (iii) information which was previously known to a Party free of any obligation to keep it confidential or which is subsequently developed independently in good faith by the Party; and (iv) information rightfully acquired in good faith from a third party on a non-confidential basis without breach of an agreement to maintain said information in confidence. Notwithstanding anything to the contrary herein, a Party may disclose Confidential/Proprietary Information of the other Party (i) if required to do so by law; or (ii) if ordered to do so by a court or other governmental authority of competent jurisdiction; provided, however, that a Party shall provide the other Party prior written notice of any such disclosure and exercise its best efforts, consistent with sound business practice, both to afford the other Party an opportunity to contest the disclosure and to limit the extent of the disclosure to the maximum extent practicable.

6. Proprietary. By disclosing Confidential/Proprietary Information, a Party does not relinquish any proprietary rights and interests, or grant any rights or licenses, in said information. No patent, copyright, trademark or other proprietary right is licensed, granted or otherwise conveyed by this Agreement with respect to Confidential or other information. copies thereof, as well as all summaries, notes or other documents, materials or things containing Confidential/Proprietary Information.

7. Remedies. In the event a material breach hereof occurs, or is threatened, the nonbreaching Party shall have the right to pursue any and all legal and equitable remedies to which it would be entitled under the law. Each Party hereby agrees and acknowledges that the other Party would be irreparably damaged by the breach of this Agreement, which damage could not be adequately compensated except by specific performance hereof. In the event such a default has occurred or is threatened, it is agreed that the nonbreaching Party shall be entitled to temporary and permanent injunctive relief, including, without limitation, specific performance of this Agreement, without any showing of actual damage or inadequacy of legal remedy or the posting of any bond in any proceeding which may be brought to enforce this Agreement.

8. Representations and Warranties. Each Party represents and warrants to the other Party, which representations and warranties shall survive the execution hereof, that it has the power and authority to execute, deliver and perform this Agreement, that its execution and delivery of this Agreement and its performance hereunder have been duly authorized and that this Agreement has been duly executed and delivered by it and is a valid and binding agreement enforceable in accordance with its terms against it. Neither Party is making any representation or warranty, expressed or implied, as to the accuracy or completeness of the Confidential/Proprietary Information being disclosed to the other Party.

9. Nonsolicitation. For a period commencing on the Effective Date and ending on the second anniversary of the termination of this Agreement, neither Party shall directly solicit for employment or hire any person who is now employed by the other Party (or whose activities are dedicated to the other Party).

10. Termination/Survival. This Agreement may be terminated upon thirty (30) days' written notice by either Party; provided, however, that the obligations imposed by this Agreement to safeguard and to promptly return or destroy the Confidential/Proprietary Information of the other Party shall survive any termination of this Agreement for a period of three (3) years.

11. Entire Agreement. THIS AGREEMENT SHALL CONSTITUTE THE ENTIRE AGREEMENT BETWEEN THE PARTIES CONCERNING THE SUBJECT MATTER HEREOF AND SUPERSEDE ALL PRIOR AGREEMENTS AND UNDERSTANDINGS, WHETHER WRITTEN OR ORAL, REGARDING THE SUBJECT MATTER HEREOF. This Agreement may only be amended or modified by written consent of both Parties. The terms, conditions and provisions of this Agreement shall inure to the benefit of, and be binding upon, the Parties and their respective heirs, successors, transferees and assigns.

12. Miscellaneous. The waiver of compliance with any of the provisions of this Agreement by a Party shall not be considered an ongoing waiver of such provisions or a waiver of any of the other provision hereof by said Party. Each provision of this Agreement shall be considered severable and if for any reason any provision hereof is determined to be contrary to any existing or future law, rule or regulation of any jurisdiction, such invalidity shall not impair the operation of said provision in any other jurisdiction or any other provisions hereof. All notices and solicitations of consent or approval, and other communications hereunder, shall be in writing; shall be deemed to have been given when delivered by hand, by telecopy (followed by mailed notices as hereinafter provided), by overnight delivery service, with acknowledged receipt, or by United States mail, if sent by registered or certified mail, postage prepaid, return receipt requested, addressed, to a Party at the address set forth for that Party below or such other address as the Party shall have given in writing for such purpose. Can you confirm for me that we can make the following pricing deviations for some key account opportunities?

Nash Rocky Mount Schools, NC

Looking at single purchase of 200 65" or 70" displays. Requesting a $200- interactive panel price discount.

Winston Salem Forsyth Schools, NC

One of our biggest accounts. Currently piloting mobile interactive panels in a couple of schools. Requesting free stand to support pilot.

Please contact me with any questions or additional details about these opportunities.

Amy –

Two new opportunities that we are working with:

Vance Granville Community College, NC – Immediate purchase of 2 units with near term purchase total of 10 units.

Customer is looking for a mobile solution to use throughout campus. This is a competitive account with Sharp being the incumbent, customer is willing to present at regional conferences and discuss product on state level communications to all community colleges in North Carolina. We are looking at providing the mobile stands complementary.

Winston Salem Forsyth Schools, NC – Immediate purchase of 1 to 5 units at specific locations.

Customer is historically one of Encore largest buyers of classroom technology. Budget constraints have forced district administrative staff to consider and implement interactive projectors. Following recent regional events individual schools staff have opted to pilot and review the interactive panel. This would allow us to escalate the decision to move away from interactive whiteboards and projectors moving toward panels. We are looing at providing the moblie stands complementary for these pilot initiatives.

Call me with any questions.

Customer is looking for a mobile solution to use throughout two campuses to gauge usability and response. The opportunities continue to come in...

Warren County School District, NC – District is moving order over from Promethean Interactive Whiteboards to the clear Touch Interactive Panels. Features and functionality is heavily favored. Warren County is a rural school district with little spend capability. They are funding this purchase with a federal grant. Unlike our other opportunities that are in larger districts, Warren County is representative of the majority of school district in the region. By implementing Warren County School District they will be a favorable reference and a like reference for other accounts.

I've updated the spreadsheet.

The costs to customer is the panel only (based on the 70" model), installation costs are subject to the reseller but most likely will be similar from installer to installer. The cost to install by Encore would be the same no matter what panel we were installing.

While Clear Touch provides the fixed wall mount with their panels, there is no information stating whether or not the other manufacturers provide the same.

Each panel will come with the same basic cables for connecting up to 6 feet from the panel.

All of these models in the spreadsheet are tv type panels, so there are no projector bulbs involved in this comparison.

As to software compatibility, I only know that we can run any other software on the Clear Touch panels. While it may be possible to run Promethean on a SMART E70, a Promethean customer will likely never buy a SMART E70, and visa versa.

The messaging with SMART, Promethean, and others is that they will always optimize their panels to work with their software as they both move to monetizing their software packages.

Power consumption across the panels is very similar, pretty much industry standards.

We enjoy a unique position with Clear Touch in a very robust, reliable product that is actually shipping. We are also not competing against other resellers for the same product, a situation that would be there with all the other panels (Promethean included) in this comparison. We are working very hard to create the demand and awareness for this unique offering by Encore and have built great momentum. Momentum that would be very hard to rebuild in a scenario where we've quadrupled our competition field. :)

Thanks!

Leo,

Does the cost to customer assumption include installation and known needed accessories (like wall bracket, cables, etc)? If not, can you provide a second line that includes that as well as a line that would indicate anything regarding maintenance (ala the current promethean projectors needing bulbs). I'd like to have a complete install cost comparison.

Can you also include a line for software platform compatibility. As I understand it the ClearTouch comes with its own basic software but can also use the promethean and smart offerings.

Please also add lines for input array (i.e. Number and type of inputs), power consumption, auto shut off yes/no, and estimated panel life.

Thanks,

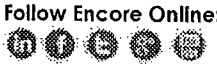

Todd

These are the most talked about features. Everything else will be comparable (things like mounting options, etc.)

We don't have exact pricing on the different manufacturers other than Promethean, but Clear Touch is always in line or much better cost to the customer.

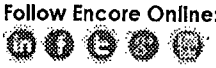

Hope this helps, let me know if you have any questions.

Clear Touch and Leo Gallant hereinafter shall each be referred to as a "Party" and shall collectively be referred to as the "Parties."

RECITALS:

WHEREAS, the Parties intend to jointly explore the possibility of entering into a business relationship;

WHEREAS, the Parties, to facilitate this effort, may exchange information deemed to be confidential and/or proprietary by the disclosing Party, including, without limitation, financial, operational, business and technical data regarding, as well as business, marketing, and sales strategies and plans of, the disclosing Party;

WHEREAS, the Parties desire to preserve and protect the confidentiality of all confidential and/or proprietary information disclosed by the Parties to one another;

NOW THEREFORE, for and in consideration of the mutual promises contained herein, and other good and valuable consideration, the receipt and adequacy of which is hereby acknowledged, the Parties, with the intent of being legally bound, do hereby agree as follows:

1. Purpose. Each Party hereby acknowledges that it has entered into this Agreement solely to facilitate the joint exploration by the Parties of a potential business relationship, providing a mechanism to safeguard any confidential and proprietary data exchanged by the Parties. This Agreement shall not require either Party to furnish Confidential/Proprietary Information to the other Party, nor shall the furnishing of Confidential/Proprietary Information by a Party to the other Party obligate either Party to evaluate, negotiate or enter into a business relationship with the other Party or preclude either Party from evaluating, negotiating or entering into any business relationship with a third party. No warranties of any kind are given by either party with respect to the information provided to the other.

2. Confidential/Proprietary Information. All information disclosed by a Party, its affiliates, subsidiaries or agents, or third parties at the request of the Party, to the other Party, shall be deemed to be "Confidential/Proprietary Information" if it is (a) in written, graphic or other tangible form, including, without limitation, computer discs and tapes and other media which can be converted to readable form, and bears an appropriate legend indicating its confidential and/or proprietary nature, or (b) disclosed orally, or in a form other than in writing or a media which can be converted to readable form, and is identified as confidential and propriety at the time of disclosure, with such designation confirmed in writing within seventy-two (72) hours thereafter; provided, however, that the disclosing Party's failure to place an appropriate legend indicating the confidentiality and/or proprietary nature of information disclosed in written, graphic or other tangible form or to provide written confirmation of the confidential nature of information disclosed orally, or in a form other than in writing or on computer disk or tape, shall not relieve the receiving Party of its obligation to preserve the confidentiality of said information if the receiving Party knows, should have known or has reason to know that the information is confidential or proprietary; provided further that the receiving Party shall not be liable for any reasonable, good faith disclosure of such information. Any agreements or other documents memorializing or reflecting the terms of the Parties business relationship shall also be deemed Confidential/Proprietary Information. Each Party acknowledges that the Confidential/Proprietary Information of the other Party is uniquely valuable and competitively-sensitive.

3. Use and Dissemination. Neither Party shall use Confidential/Proprietary Information of the other Party for any purpose other than evaluating and negotiating a business relationship between the Parties. Each Party shall restrict internal disclosure of Confidential/Proprietary Information of the other Party to such of its officers, employees and agents, including attorneys, accountants and financial or investment advisors, as have a reasonable need to know such information and shall advise said officers, employees and agents of the obligations assumed by it in this Agreement. Neither Party shall disclose Confidential/Proprietary Information of the other Party to any third party, other than such attorneys, accountants and financial or investment advisors as shall be assisting the Party in evaluating and negotiating the business relationship between the Parties, without the prior written consent of the other Party; provided, however, that either Party may disclose Confidential/Proprietary Information of the other Party to its principal lenders and substantial stock holders without the prior written consent of the other Party so long as such lenders and stock holders have executed a nondisclosure agreement substantially similar to this Agreement. A Party shall not reproduce Confidential/Proprietary Information of the other Party unless necessary to evaluate and explore a business relationship between the Parties, and shall ensure that all such copies, as well as summaries and notes of and other documents and materials containing or referencing, the Confidential/Proprietary Information of the other Party are appropriately marked as such.

4. Standard of Care. Each Party shall take all reasonable and necessary steps to prevent the disclosure, unauthorized use or publication of Confidential/Proprietary Information of the other Party and in so doing, shall not use less than the same degree of care it uses with regard to its own proprietary or confidential information, and shall maintain said information in a secure location accessible only by those who are authorized to view it.

5. Exceptions. The restrictions on disclosure of Confidential/Proprietary Information shall not apply to (i) information which at the time of disclosure was generally available to the public; (ii) information which subsequent to its disclosure to a Party, is published or otherwise becomes available to the public through any means other than an act or omission of the Party; (iii) information which was previously known to a Party free of any obligation to keep it confidential or which is subsequently developed independently in good faith by the Party; and (iv) information rightfully acquired in good faith from a third party on a non-confidential basis without breach of an agreement to maintain said information in confidence. Notwithstanding anything to the contrary herein, a Party may disclose Confidential/Proprietary Information of the other Party (i) if required to do so by law; or (ii) if ordered to do so by a court or other governmental authority of competent jurisdiction; provided, however, that a Party shall provide the other Party prior written notice of any such disclosure and exercise its best efforts, consistent with sound business practice, both to afford the other Party an opportunity to contest the disclosure and to limit the extent of the disclosure to the maximum extent practicable.

6. Proprietary. By disclosing Confidential/Proprietary Information, a Party does not relinquish any proprietary rights and interests, or grant any rights or licenses, in said information. No patent, copyright, trademark or other proprietary right is licensed, granted or otherwise conveyed by this Agreement with respect to Confidential or other information. 7. Remedies. In the event a material breach hereof occurs, or is threatened, the nonbreaching Party shall have the right to pursue any and all legal and equitable remedies to which it would be entitled under the law. Each Party hereby agrees and acknowledges that the other Party would be irreparably damaged by the breach of this Agreement, which damage could not be adequately compensated except by specific performance hereof. In the event such a default has occurred or is threatened, it is agreed that the nonbreaching Party shall be entitled to temporary and permanent injunctive relief, including, without limitation, specific performance of this Agreement, without any showing of actual damage or inadequacy of legal remedy or the posting of any bond in any proceeding which may be brought to enforce this Agreement.

8. Representations and Warranties. Each Party represents and warrants to the other Party, which representations and warranties shall survive the execution hereof, that it has the power and authority to execute, deliver and perform this Agreement, that its execution and delivery of this Agreement and its performance hereunder have been duly authorized and that this Agreement has been duly executed and delivered by it and is a valid and binding agreement enforceable in accordance with its terms against it. Neither Party is making any representation or warranty, expressed or implied, as to the accuracy or completeness of the Confidential/Proprietary Information being disclosed to the other Party.

9. Nonsolicitation. For a period commencing on the Effective Date and ending on the second anniversary of the termination of this Agreement, neither Party shall directly solicit for employment or hire any person who is now employed by the other Party (or whose activities are dedicated to the other Party).

10. Termination/Survival. This Agreement may be terminated upon thirty (30) days' written notice by either Party; provided, however, that the obligations imposed by this Agreement to safeguard and to promptly return or destroy the Confidential/Proprietary Information of the other Party shall survive any termination of this Agreement for a period of three (3) years.

11. Entire Agreement. THIS AGREEMENT SHALL CONSTITUTE THE ENTIRE AGREEMENT BETWEEN THE PARTIES CONCERNING THE SUBJECT MATTER HEREOF AND SUPERSEDE ALL PRIOR AGREEMENTS AND UNDERSTANDINGS, WHETHER WRITTEN OR ORAL, REGARDING THE SUBJECT MATTER HEREOF. This Agreement may only be amended or modified by written consent of both Parties. The terms, conditions and provisions of this Agreement shall inure to the benefit of, and be binding upon, the Parties and their respective heirs, successors, transferees and assigns.

12. Miscellaneous. The waiver of compliance with any of the provisions of this Agreement by a Party shall not be considered an ongoing waiver of such provisions or a waiver of any of the other provision hereof by said Party. Each provision of this Agreement shall be considered severable and if for any reason any provision hereof is determined to be contrary to any existing or future law, rule or regulation of any jurisdiction, such invalidity shall not impair the operation of said provision in any other jurisdiction or any other provisions hereof. All notices and solicitations of consent or approval, and other communications hereunder, shall be in writing; shall be deemed to have been given when delivered by hand, by telecopy (followed by mailed notices as hereinafter provided), by overnight delivery service, with acknowledged receipt, or by United States mail, if sent by registered or certified mail, postage prepaid, return receipt requested, addressed, to a Party at the address set forth for that Party below or such other address as the Party shall have given in writing for such purpose. Hi Keone! I just wanted to touch base with you to see how things are going. First of all, I sent Pam and Russell and update in regards to your current shipments which stated the following:

> I just wanted to give you a quick update on your shipments: Your consignment inventory is scheduled to arrive into port on May 3 and should reach your office shortly thereafter. I will provide tracking information once it has reached the states and is on its way to you. As far as PO53175, it is scheduled to arrive into port on May 29. I was hoping for sooner but you never can tell for certain with shipment prep and vessel schedules. Once again, I will provide tracking information once it has reached the states and is on its way to you. Please let me know if you have any additional questions.

How are things going in the sales department? Anything I can be of assistance with? I know Pam had inquired about possibly ordering 55 of the 65" panels here soon and I didn't know what else you may be looking at coming up. It is probably a good idea to get another order in soon due to the length of time in production and shipping.

We are streamlining some things here moving forward to help make things run more seamlessly on your end. We will be implementing some additional pricing discounts with quantity orders that will enable you to have full control of how you wish to allocate those funds whether to increase margin or offer additional customer discounts or marketing, etc. I truly think this will alleviate the headaches of having to not only reconcile every "free stand" or having to come to me for additional things to help out the customer – it will now be all in your hands!

I will get you some additional information soon. Please let me know how I can be of assistance. Thanks!

Rick / Gary -

I apologize my my recent absence and lack of communication related to the prototype and development of interactive display solutions target for the education environment. Computer Software Innovations (CSI) has recently completed its acquisition by Harris Computer Corporation (Harris). During this period our conversation opportunities were very limited as we determined the course and future related to Interactive Display Solutions.
My colleagues and I are diligently working to align our solutions to either stay has part of Harris or to acquire operational control on the business units that are responsible for the sales, marketing and delivery of Interactive Display Solutions. For this reason we have established Clear Touch Interactive (CTI) with which we will use for distribution of the interactive display solutions for CSI and more importantly our affiliates across the country that provide both Promethean and Smart products. While this has caused some delay it has also presented a more far reaching opportunity.

With our ability to now move forward with introducing the Interactive Display Solutions to the market we are prepared to order a prototype of the 70" product to allow for testing, integration and initial marketing. Please revise, update, the associated pricing and provide a quotation. We will complete this order without hesitation.

Please find attached the completed application documentation for Clear Touch Interactive. Additionally, I have enclosed a non-disclosure agreement that will allow us to continue to grow our opportunities with confidentiality. I will be reviewing pricing and creating additional supporting documentation that will allow Clear Touch Interactive to leverage its direct sales partners in bringing the displays to market. Following the review of the prototype and other matters we will begin to commence formal operations. Thank you for your patience as we overcame many obstacles in getting to this point. I look forward to our mutual success.

I will be limitedly available for the balance of this week attending a conference on the west coast. Please do not hesitate to contact me should you have any questions.

Gary –

Very impressed with the unboxing today. The finish quality is outstanding compared to overlay usage we have seen in the past.

Couple of items we would like to have considered in pricing – associated white labeling efforts:

- Labeling – Would like to add Clear Touch Interactive resin label or similar (to be provided).
- Documentation – Would like to add Clear Touch Interactive branded instructions including web based software download.
- Shipping Label – Would like to have shipped from Clear Touch Interactive; number of distribution points increased following delivery.

Need additional information regarding warranty for both televisions and glass... noted consumer models are 2 years. Any options for extended warranty or should we shop 3rd party?

I see this market being quickly fluid and we will have to update pricing quarterly throughout production and would be interested in learning about "low price" solutions like plasma....when appropriate.

The dual , 1x2, format is still of interest and makes a compelling talking point right now. Need to revisit, your other email about two independent monitor driven from the same host is interesting!

We will continue to test through the Easter break, locally anyways, and forward any questions to you.

We are still actively setting up Clear Touch Interactive as a business concern and will promptly have payment to you for the prototype!

Our initial distribution partner, Encore, has an order that is anticipated next week for 100 classroom's... potentially a good way to start!

Awaiting upgrades in pricing!

Keone, I will get you updated pricing and new model information. The Sharp 70LE640U went end of life this month. We just received our first buy of next gen 70" units . We are now using the 70LE650U. The unit is about ½" thinner and width and height are about 2" less but viewable is the same.

I will send you new pricing on the 55, 60, 70, and 80 based on cost break points in volume vs arbitrary volume cost break points. Some of the newer models such as the 70" Sharp consumer and 60" LG plasma dropped in price while the NEC commercial units going to LED went up.

I will get you the 60, 70, and 80 first.

Samsung, Sharp, LG, NEC, and Philips are all in some stage of product transition right now. Most touch prices dropped since DSE. Appears to be a run to the bottom between China mgf.

We are integrating a commercial LG 60" 60PA550C plasma. The price is pretty attractive and does not need a cover glass.

Thank you,
Gary

For clarification –

I am curious about the pricing associated with the previous provided configuration based on the: Sharp 70" 70LE640U Monitor

Also would like to add pricing for a configuration based on the: Sharp 80" 80LE632U Monitor

What displays are you recommending for the dual 55" or dual 60" configuration... previously had

I just wanted to drop a note and let you know that we will be unboxing the unit later this afternoon and look forward to functional testing. You should be receiving payment information shortly as we a wrapping up our administrative setup. The market is poised well and we are establishing part numbers and pricing; accordingly I wanted to inquire about any pricing changes since the submission of pricing in October. I know, especially for the consumer based products, that pricing has fluctuate dramatically following the holiday season. Please let me know of any changes there.

I can say with confidence that we will be placing some initial orders quickly, following functional review, as demand has been generated over the last six months.

I will let you know how we progress today!

The proverbial "check is in the mail" and headed your way with certified funds. Thank you for your patience in getting through the prototype. We are already getting information out to the sales force in time for budgeting and are looking so far at soft commits in the 250 quantity range. I would like to next week round out the pricing on the Sharp 60" and Sharp 80" models; no admiration for Sharp but they make a good product and our customer look for consistency. I would also like to review the dual display and the plasma option for our most price conscious customers.

Keone, I have attached a generic set-up sheet stripped of our info. If you dress it, add your info, delete, modify etc, we will print and ship with each unit.

Your numbers look great. As soon as you know, let me know and we will get the bezels rolling.

Will see you at infocom. We do not have a booth. Just going for meetings. We are coming in early Wed and out Friday.

I saw the video last week. Good stuff.

We will ship everything white label/CTI branded. No TSItouch marking on anything.

Let me know the Panasonic model when you can.

Thank you,
Gary

Fantastic! Can we review the "white label" requirements tomorrow? It is critical to make sure these units do not arrive with anything other than "Clear Touch Interactive" labeling.

Did not expect you to be at Infocomm... but a VERY welcome addition to the conversation. Actually will make it more relevant!

I do know that we have a confirm order for 50 units of the 70" that will come in the first week of June... we are selling about 15 of the existing order into that. Give me another week and we can firm up numbers.

Sales response is coming in very well... as expected and strongly looking at firming up 500 for the balance of the year. Do want to talk about Panasonic option for another opportunity that can increase our volume.

Here is a sales video that has been circulating from our reseller... Encore Technology Group:

Please do not respond or comment online per our NDA...

Very much looking forward to meeting with you.

Keone, Thanks for the status. I fully appreciate the pain of cash flow. I should have a firm ship date either later today or early tomorrow. Rick has mentioned meeting you at Infocomm. I will be there and expect I will be joining you.

If you have any minimum projections of June orders, I will get the bezels in the production que now.

Thank you,
Gary

Gary -

We have moved the funds around necessary and have cleared the bank; what a pin. The draft for $50,000.00 as partial payment for the recent orders is being sent today.

Junes orders are starting to come together and should have an order forecast shortly. Please let me know if you have any questions.

It looks like we will be visiting with Rick Gordon while attending InfoComm.

Gary –

Per our communications yesterday please review the video available at the following link:
http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=o7_xGOHyS-o

This video was recorded by A/V engineers from Encore who visited the end user location to insure all other basic requirements were met: driver, calibration, cleaning, etc.

This visit followed the last incident, perhaps misdiagnosed as related to the glass, that required that all of units to be returned to TSI for service and replacement. Given that this is recurring and isolated to a specific end user I can only assume that this might be related to the Zaggtech IR component of the interactive display. Unfortunately, both Encore and the end user are extremely frustrated and making strong demands... the end user following their previous experience is wanting to return the units and Encore is seeking compensation for the labor associated with multiple site visits and freight preparation.

What are our options? I am sure it goes without saying but this is a very significant event that could have very negative consequences.

I will be travelling today through the afternoon to another tradeshow promoting the interactive displays.

Please let me know your thoughts and our course of action...

Keone.

Yes - Will update today. We are bringing new CRM system online to assist in managing opportunities. Detail to follow.

BTW – I do not think we told you. Leon County School District, FL has selected Clear Touch Interactive as their panel manufacture... beating Promethean, Smart and Qomo. This was not a formal bid... Encore received a purchase order for 18 units yesterday. These 18 are the beginning of 285 units to be acquired through December. Next year is 600 rooms.

Our thought is to use the H Series to battle it out at the lower end – to compete with existing panels as pricing pressure and market share are pursued. The H Series panel has performed well against these competitively and if necessary we can push price down to add further pressure.

Further, we use the V Series to differentiate ourselves in the market... rise above the pricings pressure with the additional integrated features... and request a small premium for it.

Your risk is minimal for the additional H Series Chipsets...

Milton -

While it has been a short time since the spring conferences in North Carolina, where we last had the opportunity to speak, there have been many exciting changes. Like you, I was so impressed with the classroom technology developed by Clear Touch Interactive that I had to be a part of it. While exciting for me personally I am even more excited about the new products and features that Clear Touch Interactive is launching at ISTE 2014 in Atlanta, GA this month.

These new products features are transforming the classroom technology space and go far beyond simply replacing projectors and interactive white boards. Imagine the possibilities:

- Integrated High Fidelity Sound with Voice Amplification
- Network Managed; full control of all displays via the network
- Mobile Adjustable Stand that not only raises and lowers but transforms into a interactive table
- And more - See video here: https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=asmqDI9TBsk

If you or anyone else from your district are attending ISTE 2014 please visit our booth (#1058)!

You will also see the Clear Touch Interactive Panel in these booths:

- Encore Technology Group (#1556)
- Howard Technology Solutions (#3448)
- ITS Learning (#3614)
- Safari Montage (#1726)
- FileWave (#2948)
- EdVation (#1848)
- Lumens Technology (#2814)
- Audio Enhancement (#2434)

I look forward to visiting with you and sharing more about this amazing technology.

Operational Information

In 2014, sales and marketing activity are strongly outpacing product supply availability, this is primarily due to the demand generated and the product supply cycles associated with production, shipment and payment. Each product supply cycle requires approximately 4 weeks with additional administrative and logistics variables between cycles. Participation in the full product supply cycle consumes operating capital and the product supply cycle must be completed before additional product supply cycles can be initiated.

Negotiations with manufacturing, the utilization of purchase order financing and invoice factoring have eased demands on operating capital. However, with increasing demand, forecasted sales and market exposure the current product supply availability will not be sufficient.

In summary, additional operating capital is required to increase product supply to meet demand and enter into a continuous stream of product supply availability. The additional operating capital sought in this opportunity will be augmented through obtaining traditional banking and finance instruments that will be available in FY15Q2. These traditional banking and financing instruments will further assist in the continued development of the organization and reaffirm the product supply availability for continued demand.

Personally, appeared before me Keone Trask, who, after being duly sworn, deposes and states the following:

1. My name is Keone Trask. I am over the age of 21 and have personal knowledge of the facts contained in this Affidavit and, if called as a witness, could competently testify to those facts.

2. I am President of Clear Touch Interactive, Inc. f/k/a Clear Touch Interactive, LLC (hereinafter "CTI").

3. CTI was incorporated under the laws of the State of Nevada on August 2012.

4. CTI's first email accounts were established in late 2012 with the service Blue Host. CTI email accounts were transferred to Zoho Email on or about May 2014.

5. In February of 2015, CTI began experiencing electronic communication issues with its email; namely issues with CTI emails being caught in other parties' Spam filters thereby hindering CTI's ability to communicate in an efficient and predictable manner. Its email provider at the time was Zoho Email. Zoho Email is an integrated component of the Zoho CRM Suite allowing for integrated communications.

6. CTI attempted to work with Zoho to overcome the electronic communications issues. After numerous attempts to resolve the issues, CTI, decided to implement Google Apps for Business in April of 2015.

7. A key part to the implementing of Google Apps for Business was the requirement to migrate existing electronic communications. Google Apps for Business provided tools, the Google Apps Migration Tool, to facilitate the migration of each user account. The Google Apps Migration Tool was used manually, using the IMAP Migration method, to import email from Zoho into Google Apps for Business. Though the use of the IMAP Migration allowed for the import of email, it was later observed that not all emails were successfully migrated to Google Apps for Business. Following the termination of service with Zoho Email, CTI no longer had access to emails not successfully migrated from Zoho to Google Apps for Business.

8. Google Apps for Business has since been rebranded to G Suite of Business. CTI continues to use G Suite for Business to this day and has overcome the majority of electronic communication issues. Since CTI's inception through today, CTI does not have an electronic communications discovery or preservation policy.

9. From CTI's founding to present, the company did not maintain any email archiving system or preserve emails on backup tapes. Emails are currently stored on the G Suit for Business cloud service.

FURTHER AFFIANT SAYETH NOT.

Maybe, but Encore is not OEM'ing them, I guess Clear touch could be. He said they are getting them directly from Clear touch and Clear touch has a focus on education and they have sold about 1000 units so far. These units are not android units like SeeWo units.

However they are looking at Android units this week. He wasn't sure what brand but will get back to me.

Keone is bringing a unit to TCEA (I Think for Mike) and is going to get me in touch with His Clear Touch contact. I'll keep you posted.

I'm talking with Keone later today about these. Sounds like they are looking for "exclusive dealers" and they are already selling a lot of them.

Hello Robin,
Terri and I am delighted to hear she is doing well. I am sure your parents are very excited. Grandchildren are God's blessing.
How many of the 20 70" pieces may I have? Each of my customers is requesting one for evaluation in their environment.
What type of forecast information are you seeking? I expect to know more information fairly soon but I would probably consider at least a container with a more solid forecast to come in the next few weeks.
I did speak to Keone. He is using an older product — what is the CVTE base model? We are going to talk at TCEA however Tony and I have some reservations regarding ClearTouch's ability to scale to the level we need.
Happy New Year,
Dale

Hi Dale
So far she feels very well, no much sick feeling, thank you very much for your caring.
Her English name is Cherry, I shared our experience in your house with her, she loves the dogs so much! ☺
Currently the soonest batch of production finish time is around Feb. 20th, by which time we will have 20pcs 65" and 20pcs 70" H+ in stock.
I suggest we set up a forecast and I will hold the samples for you in advance.
If we ship out samples by air, they should arrive at your side within Feb.
I assume average air cost from our warehouse to New Orleans airport is around $1000/pc.
Besides, I'd like to check the possibility for a 3 party meeting during TCEA.
I will arrive at TCEA by Feb 6th afternoon and hopefully can have a dinner with you, Mike and Keone.
What is your opinion about this?
Await your reply.
Thank you.

No warranties of any kind are given by either party with respect to the information provided to the other.

2. Confidential/Proprietary Information. All information disclosed by a Party, its affiliates, subsidiaries or agents, or third parties at the request of the Party, to the other Party, shall be deemed to be "Confidential/Proprietary Information" if it is (a) in written, graphic or other tangible form, including, without limitation, computer discs and tapes and other media which can be converted to readable form, and bears an appropriate legend indicating its confidential and/or proprietary nature, or (b) disclosed orally, or in a form other than in writing or a media which can be converted to readable form, and is identified as confidential and propriety at the time of disclosure, with such designation confirmed in writing within seventy-two (72) hours thereafter; provided, however, that the disclosing Party's failure to place an appropriate legend indicating the confidentiality and/or proprietary nature of information disclosed in written, graphic or other tangible form or to provide written confirmation of the confidential nature of information disclosed orally, or in a form other than in writing or on Each Party acknowledges that the Confidential/Proprietary Information of the other Party is uniquely valuable and competitively-sensitive.

3. Use and Dissemination. Neither Party shall use Confidential/Proprietary Information of the other Party for any purpose other than evaluating and negotiating a business relationship between the Parties. Each Party shall restrict internal disclosure of Confidential/Proprietary Information of the other Party to such of its officers, employees and agents, including attorneys, accountants and financial or investment advisors, as have a reasonable need to know such information and shall advise said officers, employees and agents of the obligations assumed by it in this Agreement. Neither Party shall disclose Confidential/Proprietary Information of the other Party to any third party, other than such attorneys, accountants and financial or investment advisors as shall be assisting the Party in evaluating and negotiating the business relationship between the Parties, without the prior written consent of the other Party; provided, however, that either Party may disclose Confidential/Proprietary Information of the other Party to its principal lenders and substantial stock holders without the prior written consent of the other Party so long as such lenders and stock holders have executed a nondisclosure agreement substantially similar to this Agreement. A Party shall not reproduce Confidential/Proprietary Information of the other Party unless necessary to evaluate and explore a business relationship between the Parties, and shall ensure that all such copies, as well as summaries and notes of and other documents and materials containing or referencing, the Confidential/Proprietary Information of the other Party are appropriately marked as such.

4. Standard of Care. Each Party shall take all reasonable and necessary steps to prevent the disclosure, unauthorized use or publication of Confidential/Proprietary Information of the other Party and in so doing, shall not use less than the same degree of care it uses with regard to its own proprietary or confidential information, and shall maintain said information in a secure location accessible only by those who are authorized to view it.

5. Exceptions. The restrictions on disclosure of Confidential/Proprietary Information shall not apply to (i) information which at the time of disclosure was generally available to the public; (ii) information which subsequent to its disclosure to a Party, is published or otherwise becomes available to the public through any means other than an act or omission of the Party; (iii) information which was previously known to a Party free of any obligation to keep it confidential or which is subsequently developed independently in good faith by the Party; and (iv) information rightfully acquired in good faith from a third party on a non-confidential basis without breach of an agreement to maintain said information in confidence. Notwithstanding anything to the contrary herein, a Party may disclose Confidential/Proprietary Information of the other Party (i) if required to do so by law; or (ii) if ordered to do so by a court or other governmental authority of competent jurisdiction; provided, however, that a Party shall provide the other Party prior written notice of any such disclosure and exercise its best efforts, consistent with sound business practice, both to afford the other Party an opportunity to contest the disclosure and to limit the extent of the disclosure to the maximum extent practicable.

6. Proprietary. By disclosing Confidential/Proprietary Information, a Party does not relinquish any proprietary rights and interests, or grant any rights or licenses, in said information. No patent, copyright, trademark or other proprietary right is licensed, granted or otherwise conveyed by this Agreement with respect to Confidential or other information. 7. Remedies. In the event a material breach hereof occurs, or is threatened, the nonbreaching Party shall have the right to pursue any and all legal and equitable remedies to which it would be entitled under the law. Each Party hereby agrees and acknowledges that the other Party would be irreparably damaged by the breach of this Agreement, which damage could not be adequately compensated except by specific performance hereof. In the event such a default has occurred or is threatened, it is agreed that the nonbreaching Party shall be entitled to temporary and permanent injunctive relief, including, without limitation, specific performance of this Agreement, without any showing of actual damage or inadequacy of legal remedy or the posting of any bond in any proceeding which may be brought to enforce this Agreement.

8. Representations and Warranties. Each Party represents and warrants to the other Party, which representations and warranties shall survive the execution hereof, that it has the power and authority to execute, deliver and perform this Agreement, that its execution and delivery of this Agreement and its performance hereunder have been duly authorized and that this Agreement has been duly executed and delivered by it and is a valid and binding agreement enforceable in accordance with its terms against it. Neither Party is making any representation or warranty, expressed or implied, as to the accuracy or completeness of the Confidential/Proprietary Information being disclosed to the other Party.

10. Termination/Survival. This Agreement may be terminated upon thirty (30) days' written notice by either Party; provided, however, that the obligations imposed by this Agreement to safeguard and to promptly return or destroy the Confidential/Proprietary Information of the other Party shall survive any termination of this Agreement for a period of three (3) years.

11. Entire Agreement. THIS AGREEMENT SHALL CONSTITUTE THE ENTIRE AGREEMENT BETWEEN THE PARTIES CONCERNING THE SUBJECT MATTER HEREOF AND SUPERSEDE ALL PRIOR AGREEMENTS AND UNDERSTANDINGS, WHETHER WRITTEN OR ORAL, REGARDING THE SUBJECT MATTER HEREOF. This Agreement may only be amended or modified by written consent of both Parties. A Party shall not reproduce Confidential/Proprietary Information of the other Party unless necessary to evaluate and explore a business relationship between the Parties, and shall ensure that all such copies, as well as summaries and notes of and other documents and materials containing or referencing, the Confidential/Proprietary Information of the other Party are appropriately marked as such.

4. Standard of Care. Each Party shall take all reasonable and necessary steps to prevent the disclosure, unauthorized use or publication of Confidential/Proprietary Information of the other Party and in so doing, shall not use less than the same degree of care it uses with regard to its own proprietary or confidential information, and shall maintain said information in a secure location accessible only by those who are authorized to view it.

5. Exceptions. The restrictions on disclosure of Confidential/Proprietary Information shall not apply to (i) information which at the time of disclosure was generally available to the public; (ii) information which subsequent to its disclosure to a Party, is published or otherwise becomes available to the public through any means other than an act or omission of the Party; (iii) information which was previously known to a Party free of any obligation to keep it confidential or which is subsequently developed independently in good faith by the Party; and (iv) information rightfully acquired in good faith from a third party on a non-confidential basis without breach of an agreement to maintain said information in confidence. Notwithstanding anything to the contrary herein, a Party may disclose Confidential/Proprietary Information of the other Party (i) if required to do so by law; or (ii) if ordered to do so by a court or other governmental authority of competent jurisdiction; provided, however, that a Party shall provide the other Party prior written notice of any such disclosure and exercise its best efforts, consistent with sound business practice, both to afford the other Party an opportunity to contest the disclosure and to limit the extent of the disclosure to the maximum extent practicable.

6. Proprietary. By disclosing Confidential/Proprietary Information, a Party does not relinquish any proprietary rights and interests, or grant any rights or licenses, in said information. No patent, copyright, trademark or other proprietary right is licensed, granted or otherwise conveyed by this Agreement with respect to Confidential or other information. 7. Remedies. In the event a material breach hereof occurs, or is threatened, the nonbreaching Party shall have the right to pursue any and all legal and equitable remedies to which it would be entitled under the law. Each Party hereby agrees and acknowledges that the other Party would be irreparably damaged by the breach of this Agreement, which damage could not be adequately compensated except by specific performance hereof. In the event such a default has occurred or is threatened, it is agreed that the nonbreaching Party shall be entitled to temporary and permanent injunctive relief, including, without limitation, specific performance of this Agreement, without any showing of actual damage or inadequacy of legal remedy or the posting of any bond in any proceeding which may be brought to enforce this Agreement.

8. Representations and Warranties. Each Party represents and warrants to the other Party, which representations and warranties shall survive the execution hereof, that it has the power and authority to execute, deliver and perform this Agreement, that its execution and delivery of this Agreement and its performance hereunder have been duly authorized and that this Agreement has been duly executed and delivered by it and is a valid and binding agreement enforceable in accordance with its terms against it. Neither Party is making any representation or warranty, expressed or implied, as to the accuracy or completeness of the Confidential/Proprietary Information being disclosed to the other Party.

9. Nonsolicitation. For a period commencing on the Effective Date and ending on the second anniversary of the termination of this Agreement, neither Party shall directly solicit for employment or hire any person who is now employed by the other Party (or whose activities are dedicated to the other Party).

10. Termination/Survival. This Agreement may be terminated upon thirty (30) days' written notice by either Party; provided, however, that the obligations imposed by this Agreement to safeguard and to promptly return or destroy the Confidential/Proprietary Information of the other Party shall survive any termination of this Agreement for a period of three (3) years.

11. Entire Agreement. THIS AGREEMENT SHALL CONSTITUTE THE ENTIRE AGREEMENT BETWEEN THE PARTIES CONCERNING THE SUBJECT MATTER HEREOF AND SUPERSEDE ALL PRIOR AGREEMENTS AND UNDERSTANDINGS, WHETHER WRITTEN OR ORAL, REGARDING THE SUBJECT MATTER HEREOF. This Agreement may only be amended or modified by written consent of both Parties. Each provision of this Agreement shall be considered severable and if for any reason any provision hereof is determined to be contrary to any existing or future law, rule or regulation of any jurisdiction, such invalidity shall not impair the operation of said provision in any other jurisdiction or any other provisions hereof. All notices and solicitations of consent or approval, and other communications hereunder, shall be in writing; shall be deemed to have been given when delivered by hand, by telecopy (followed by mailed notices as hereinafter provided), by overnight delivery service, with acknowledged receipt, or by United States mail, if sent by registered or certified mail, postage prepaid, return receipt requested, addressed, to a Party at the address set forth for that Party below or such other address as the Party shall have given in writing for such purpose. Subject: Keone Trask

Everyone,

It is with much sadness that I announce that Keone Trask is leaving Encore.

Keone joined the CSI team in 1999, and he contributed significantly to the growth and development of the Technology division. In the months leading up to the birth of Encore last year, Keone worked alongside Chris Powell and Michael Knight to ensure a bright future for the Technology division and its employees. For all of this and so much more, we are very thankful and appreciative of his efforts and support.

After 15 years in this business, Keone is looking to start another chapter in his professional life. We wish him well in this process and certainly look forward to maintaining both a personal and professional relationship in the coming years.

Any internal or external sales and marketing questions should be referred to David Masters.

Sincerely,

Todd Newnam

2.1. Marketing and Product Support

Reseller shall use reasonable efforts to market and sell Company Products in the Territory and shall comply with the policies, programs, and requirements regarding marketing and product support as may be communicated by Company to Reseller from time to time; provided, however, that in order to avoid conflict among Company's distribution channels, Reseller shall not, without prior written authorization from Company, resell Company Products in a retail environment that includes any type of store, shop, or other similar physical premises into which customers or potential customers are invited for the purpose of purchasing or potentially purchasing any product from Reseller.

4. ORDERING AND DELIVERY OF COMPANY PRODUCTS

b) Reseller shall promptly notify Company of any unauthorized use or copying of any Program, and will take at Reseller's expense (but at Company 's option and under Company 's control and direction) legal action to prevent or stop any unauthorized use or copying of the Programs by anyone that has obtained the Programs due, in substantial part, to Reseller's fault.

c) Termination of this Agreement will automatically and immediately terminate Reseller's rights under this Section.

8.3. Use License

Reseller shall pass on to end users of each Company Product a license to use the Programs in the form of a "break-the-seal" end user license agreement contained in the Programs' packages.

8.4. Compliance with Import Regulations

EXCEPT FOR THE EXPRESS WARRANTIES STATED IN THIS AGREEMENT OR IN ANY PRE-PACKAGED LICENSE AGREEMENT FOR A COMPANY PRODUCT COMPONENT, COMPANY (ON BEHALF OF ITSELF AND ITS LICENSORS) DISCLAIMS ALL OTHER REPRESENTATIONS AND WARRANTIES, EXPRESS OR IMPLIED, REGARDING THE PROGRAMS, INCLUDING ALL IMPLIED CONDITIONS OR WARRANTIES OF NON-INFRINGEMENT, MERCHANTABILITY AND FITNESS FOR A PARTICULAR PURPOSE WITH RESPECT TO DEFECTS IN DISKETTES, COMPACT DISKS OR OTHER PHYSICAL MEDIA AND DOCUMENTATION, OPERATION OF THE PROGRAMS AND ANY APPLICATION OR USE OF THE PROGRAMS. 13.1 Limitation of Liability; Sole Remedy

Any liability of Company under this Agreement is expressly limited to the price paid by Reseller for the Company Products involved. Reseller's sole remedy against Company in any dispute concerning this Agreement shall be to seek recovery of that amount, upon payment of which Company shall be released from all further obligations and liability to Reseller.

Company shall defend Reseller from all claims, suits, damages, costs, expenses or liabilities actually incurred by Reseller as a result of any such claim. If a Product or part thereof is held to constitute an infringement and its intended use is enjoined, Company shall at its option procure for Reseller the right to continue using the Product or part, replace it with a non-infringing Product or part, modify it to become non-infringing, or remove it and refund its purchase price (less depreciation and amortization). 14. WARRANTIES AND REPRESENTATIONS

The Products are covered by the limited warranties in effect at the time the Products are delivered, on standard terms and conditions supplied with each product shipped and which are incorporated herein by this reference. Should Reseller resell Products to any entity other than an end-user, and Products are further resold, the final end-user may not receive any Company warranty or technical support.

17.7. No Waiver

At the request of the Disclosing Party, to the extent commercially practicable, the Receiving Party will promptly return to the Disclosing Party, or, at the Disclosing Party's sole option, destroy all Confidential Information and Confidential Materials (including all copies thereof) of the Disclosing Party in the Receiving Party's possession, and will certify in writing to the Disclosing Party that the Receiving Party has returned or destroyed all such items. After such request, the Receiving Party will make no further use of the Confidential Information and Confidential Materials of the Disclosing Party.

(B) The Receiving Party will use commercially reasonable efforts to protect any Confidential Information and Confidential Materials of the Disclosing Party from any unauthorized use, disclosure, copying, dissemination or distribution. STATE OF SOUTH CAROLINA COUNTY OF GREENVILLE	IN THE COURT OF COMMON PLEAS
ENCORE TECHNOLOGY GROUP, LLC, Plaintiff, vs. KEONE TRASK and CLEAR TOUCH INTERACTIVE, INC., f/k/a CLEAR TOUCH INTERACTIVE, LLC, Defendants.	Case No. 2015-CP-23-05757 AFFIDAVIT OF JIMMY HIGGINBOTHAM

The undersigned, Jimmy Higginbotham, after being duly sworn, deposes and states as follows:

1. I am a former employee of Plaintiff Encore Technology Group, LLC ("Encore") and Defendant Clear Touch Interactive, Inc., f/k/a Clear Touch Interactive, LLC ("Clear Touch"), have personal knowledge of the facts set forth herein, am over eighteen years of age and am otherwise competent to give this Affidavit.

2. I was employed by Encore from approximately April 2013 through July 31, 2014. While at Encore, I spent approximately ninety percent (90%) of my time promoting Clear Touch interactive displays.

3. In July 2014, I spoke to Encore employees and Defendant Keone Trask ("Trask") about becoming employed by Clear Touch. Before I left Encore, Trask ask me to copy Encore's customer list onto a flash drive, explained to me how to do it, and asked me to give it to him. I did so and he gave me back to me after several days.

ELECTRONICALLY FILED - 2017 Sep 05 10:04 AM - GREENVILLE - COMMON PLEAS - CASE#2015CP2305757

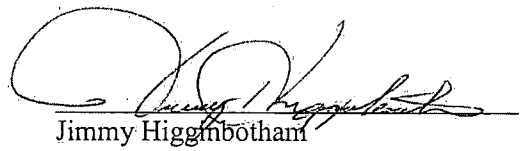

4. While at Encore, I was the primary contact for its customer Leon County Schools ("Leon") and was supported in this effort by Trask and Leo Gallant. While I was employed by Encore, Encore sold interactive displays to Leon. During July 2014, I worked with Encore to transition Leon's purchases of interactive displays to another Encore salesman. I knew that the plan among Encore, Clear Touch, and me was for Encore to maintain my customers and pipeline, including Leon, and for me to support such sales from Encore.

5. Shortly after I left Encore and joined Clear Touch, in approximately August 2014, Mike Fraser with Leon contacted me about purchasing interactive displays directly from Clear Touch instead of from Encore because he was upset with Encore. Because I had a non-compete agreement with Encore and I knew that Trask did also, I told Mr. Fraser that I would have to speak to Trask about that. When I spoke to Trask, he told me he had told Leon that Encore had diverted products purchased by Leon to another Encore customer. Trask further told me that Clear Touch would sell directly to Leon instead of through Encore and that he would be directly involved in such sales.

6. Trask and I knew from our time at Encore that Leon had outdated classroom technology and planned to purchase hundreds of interactive displays of the type sold by Encore and Clear Touch. We used this information -- and Trask's claims to Leon about Encore's diverting its product to another customer -- to enable Clear Touch to sell numerous interactive panels directly to Leon prior to April 24, 2015.

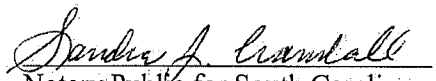

FURTHER AFFIANT SAITH NOT.

Re: Encore Technology Group, LLC v. Trask, et al., Case No. 2015-CP-23-05757

Dear Josh:

In response to your letter dated April 6, 2017, we hereby serve upon you Plaintiff's Privilege Log. Contrary to the assertions in your letter, Encore has produced all responsive, non-privileged documents to you.

Notwithstanding the foregoing, solely to attempt to avoid additional discovery disputes, Encore is producing the following documents via Sharefile:

1. Post-September 10, 2015, documents regarding Mr. Trask and Clear Touch. As you know, Encore terminated its Reseller Agreement with Clear Touch on September 10, 2015, because of Defendants' breaches of their contractual and fiduciary duties to Encore. Those breaches formed the basis of the lawsuit filed on September 18, 2015. Accordingly, we believed that all documents regarding Mr. Trask and Clear Touch dated or created on or after September 11, 2015, were created in anticipation of litigation and trial and therefore are work product. Nevertheless, we have re-reviewed those documents and are producing documents that fall after this date as ENC 00203249–203437, none of which is relevant to the litigation.

2. Expert materials. All responsive written materials have been produced. The other information you reference was shared orally with the expert. Of course, you may inquire about this information when you depose him. Although we do not believe they are responsive, we are producing the cover and scheduling messages with the expert and re-producing the substantive documents that were attached as ENC 00203438-204370.

3. Encore financial documents. You request four additional categories of documents:

a. Revised Excel spreadsheet. Encore produced to you an Excel spreadsheet as it existed in the ordinary course of business in both PDF and native formats. Because you have the document in native format, you could hide any columns that you do not want to use in questioning the witnesses. Although it has no obligation to create a new document for you, Encore has attempted to create a new, abbreviated version of this spreadsheet based upon your prior e-mail on the subject, which is produced as described in Section 3.d below.

b. Encore's Profit and Loss Statement from May 2014-December 2016. The Discovery Order directed Encore to produce financial documents "pertaining only to the interactive video panel components of its business and documents supporting its damage claims concerning such business." Encore has done this. The broader Profit and Loss Statement you request from May 2014-December 2016 goes beyond this requirement and is after your client left Encore's employ, so is neither responsive nor relevant.

c. Encore's Line of Credit documents. Encore has already produced all documents reviewed by its expert regarding its line of credit. Nevertheless, Encore is producing documents ENC 00203219–203248, which provide additional information about its line of credit.

d. Interactive Video Financials for December 2016. This information was not in existence when the Discovery Order was entered and Encore made its production of these financials. Encore is producing documents ENC 00202557–203218 to include December 2016.

In your e-mail dated April 12, 2017, you also requested any documents from July – September 2015 discussing or pertaining to Encore's termination of the Reseller Agreement. The only such documents are privileged attorney-client communications and therefore there is nothing else to produce.

With the foregoing, Encore has exceeded its obligations in satisfying your requests.

Sincerely,

Gregory J. English

Re: Encore Technology Group, LLC v. Trask, et al., Case No. 2015-CP-23-05757

Dear Josh:

We were surprised by Defendants' Second Motion to Compel filed on May 15, 2017, which inaccurately stated that "Defendants have attempted to resolve these issues with the Plaintiff in good faith." To the contrary, following our letter dated April 13, 2017, the only remaining issue you raised with us concerned the Privilege Log, which Rita was actively trying to resolve with you by telephone.

Defendants, however, filed a Second Motion to Compel that raises three issues:

1. Plaintiff's Response to Defendants' Request 14: Defendants expressly made these same arguments in their first motion to compel and they were denied. See Discovery Order filed November 17, 2016, at 4 ("The balance of Defendants' Motion to Compel is denied ...."). In addition to not consulting with us about this, it is improper to seek to re-litigate this issue.

2. Privilege Log: As you know, we offered repeatedly to amend the privilege log to try to satisfy your concerns regarding it. Enclosed is our Amended Privilege Log, which we believe should satisfy you completely.

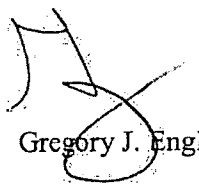

3. Post-September 10, 2015, documents regarding Mr. Trask and Clear Touch. As you know, Encore terminated its Reseller Agreement with Clear Touch on September 10, 2015, because of Defendants' breaches of their contractual and fiduciary duties to Encore. Those breaches formed the basis of the lawsuit filed on September 18, 2015. Accordingly, we believed that all documents regarding Mr. Trask and Clear Touch dated or created on or after September 11, 2015, were created in anticipation of litigation and trial and therefore are work product. Nevertheless, solely to resolve the issue, we have amended the Privilege Log and are producing documents that fall after this date.

You will note that the documents produced on the enclosed flash drive include additional email communications beyond those produced on April 13, 2017 as ENC 00203249–204370. Following your conversations with Rita regarding the privilege log, Encore re-conducted its email search in an effort to ensure that all documents had been produced. Upon manually reviewing this search, Encore discovered the search terms inadvertently excluded certain emails, although none of them are relevant to this case.

Specifically, Encore discovered that, although its IT Department used "ClearTouch" in earlier searches, the spaced version "Clear Touch" was inadvertently left off. In this latest review, Encore also discovered that, when it endeavored to reduce the production of duplicate emails for the April 13, 2017 search (following your earlier protestations of duplications in Encore's prior productions), in some cases the effort to de-duplicate had deleted initial emails that were part of a multi-thread chain but were in an attached rather than string format. Encore has remedied these issues. Again, we do not believe that these additional emails are relevant to this case, but are producing them herewith as ENC 00204371-00214720.

Please confirm that the foregoing satisfies your requests.

Sincerely,

Gregory J. English

Judge McIntosh,

We received the attached Form 4 Order issued on the motions heard yesterday. I am writing because it does not address Clear Touch's motion to dismiss Encore's contract counterclaims based on the Reseller Agreement. That was before the Court and we would greatly appreciate some clarity on the Court's ruling on Encore's contract counterclaims. I appreciate your time and consideration of this request.

Judge McIntosh,

Attached is Defendant's redline to Encore's proposed Order Appointing a Receiver. I've made note in the comments concerning the basis for many of the redlines where needed, or hopefully where I thought helpful. To that end, I have also listed some of the primary issues dealing with portions of the proposed order that violate the law or offer inaccurate statements of it to circumvent the restrictions on what can be done and utilized to satisfy a judgment in SC.

Violation(s) of Law

p. 5 paras. 8, 1 - Attempt to have Receiver possess and control Trask's "income" which includes his "earnings...for his personal services" that are exempt from levy or use to satisfy the judgment against him per S.C. Code 15-39-410.

p. 6 para. 2 – Attempt to have Receiver control and possess except assets and property in violation of S.C. Code 15-41-30(A)(13) [CLICK ON COMMENT TO SEE FULL OBJECTION/COMMENT]

p. 6-7 para. 4 – Attempt to have Receiver possess and control Trask's exempt income (under 15-39-410) by empowering him to possess and control commission and bonus payments, and cap Trask's accumulation of such exempt payments for his personal services all in violation of S.C. Code 15-39-410

Inaccurate Statement(s) of Law

p. 4-5 para. 6 – insertion of entire quote makes case law quotation accurate in context

p. 6-7 para. 4 – Law cited addresses passive income (i.e. investment income) and therefore inapplicable to commission and bonus payments to which it is offered to apply. The latter payments are not passive income but rather payments received by the debtor for his personal services and therefore not subject to levy or attachment in order to satisfy the judgment per 15-39-410.

I appreciate the opportunity to submit our redline objections and will provide anything further the Court needs.

ELECTRONICALLY FILED - 2018 Aug 01 2:37 PM - GREENVILLE - COMMON PLEAS - CASE#2015CP2305757

STATE OF SOUTH CAROLINA COUNTY OF GREENVILLE	IN THE COURT OF COMMON PLEAS
ENCORE TECHNOLOGY GROUP, LLC, Plaintiff, vs. KEONE TRASK and CLEAR TOUCH INTERACTIVE, INC., f/k/a CLEAR TOUCH INTERACTIVE, LLC, Defendants.	Case No. 2015-CP-23-05757 ORDER APPOINTING RECEIVER

This matter came before the Court for a hearing upon Plaintiff Encore Technology Group, LLC ("Plaintiff")'s Motion to Appoint Receiver for Defendant Keone Trask ("Trask"). The motion was heard by the Court on June 12, 2018. Counsel for all parties were present.

Upon reviewing the record, the evidence, and the applicable law and hearing statements and representations of counsel, I find that Plaintiff's Motion to Appoint Receiver should be granted and a receiver should be appointed with authority to pursue discovery from Defendants and third parties, require the production of documents and other evidence, and take possession of Trask's non-exempt assets and secure them while Trask's appeal is pending, upon threat of contempt and sanctions by this Court for willful failure to cooperate with the receiver.

FINDINGS OF FACT

1. On April 2, 2018, the Court entered a Final Order and Judgment in favor of Encore against Defendant Keone Trask ("Trask") in the amount of $7,917,468.40 (the "Judgment").

ELECTRONICALLY FILED - 2018 Aug 01 2:37 PM - GREENVILLE - COMMON PLEAS - CASE#2015CP2305757

2. The Judgment required Trask to pay $7,917,468.40 to Encore. Trask has failed to pay any portion of this amount. Although the Clerk of Court issued an Execution against Property of Trask on April 13, 2018, it has not been satisfied, in whole or in part.

3. Trask filed a motion pursuant to Rule 59, SCRCP, for Reconsideration of the Judgment and intends to appeal the Judgment, necessitating the preservation of Trask's property during the pendency of the appeal.

4. The Judgment includes $2,952,078 in actual damages and $4,524,890 in punitive and exemplary damages. In doubling the actual damages under the Trade Secrets Act to award $849,890 in exemplary damages, the Court noted the case of misappropriation was one of the most egregious this Court has ever seen. Judgment at 4.

5. Defendants moved to stay execution of the Judgment, but the Court denied a stay. In support of its denial, the Court noted that evidence was presented at trial from which one could conclude or infer that the Defendants were engaged in an involved scheme to hide from Encore the truth of Trask's breaches of fiduciary duties, duties of loyalty, and contract and cannot be expected to fulfill their legal duties. Therefore, the Court determined it would not be appropriate to stay execution of the judgment. Judgment at 33-34. Specifically, evidence at trial indicated that Trask:

- Did not disclose his involvement in Clear Touch to Encore while he was an employee of Encore;
- Transferred his ownership in Clear Touch to his mother to hide his affiliation;
- Got Encore to sign a Reseller Agreement and had his mother sign for Clear Touch;
- Had the true suppliers remove their labels from panels and replace them with Clear Touch labels ~~to hide the suppliers' true identities from Encore~~;

ELECTRONICALLY FILED - 2018 Aug 01 2:37 PM - GREENVILLE - COMMON PLEAS - CASE#2015CP2305757

- Marked up the prices of the panels from the suppliers to Encore;
- Had Encore send its checks to a Nevada post office box and forwarded them back to South Carolina;
- Had his wife, Tamara Trask, email Encore as "Amy Andrews";
- While at conferences for Encore, worked to sign resellers for Clear Touch by initially leading them to believe Encore was an owner of Clear Touch;
- Got Encore's employees, Leo Gallant and Jimmy Higginbotham, to sign non-disclosure agreements ~~so that he could induce them to leave Encore by disclosing his ownership of Clear Touch but prevent them from disclosing same to~~ Encore; and
- ~~Permanently deleted incriminating e-~~mails.

Id.

6. During the pendency of this case, on May 12, 2017, Trask transferred real estate from his individual ownership into the "Trask Family Trust" of which he and his wife are the trustees.

7. Trask is the President and sole Director of his corporation, Defendant Clear Touch Interactive, Inc., f/k/a Clear Touch Interactive, LLC ("Clear Touch"), and exercises ownership and control in ways that will only be clear following discovery.

8. ~~Instead of cooperating in discovery,~~ Trask moved to quash subpoenas Encore issued pursuant to Rules 34, 45, and 69, SCRCP, to his CPA and Clear Touch's third-party administrator, CatchFire Funding. ~~Trask has also refused to provide to Encore documents requested in post-Judgment~~ discovery.

9. Trask previously admitted to Encore that he owns several rental properties in several counties. The public records of Greenville County and Anderson County, South Commented [JS1]: Untrue statement. Evidence at trial was that Encore arranged Higginbotham to be hired by Clear Touch and Gallant left on his own accord.

Commented [JS2]: Inaccurate statement.

Commented [JS3]: Untrue statement. Trask requested an extension to reply which Encore refused to give.

Carolina, show that Trask is connected with fifteen (15) properties, which appear to be residential rental properties, either individually or through Carolina Home Partners LLC, a company of which Trask is manager. The records of Oconee County show that Trask transferred ten (10) duplexes in November 2017, shortly after the jury verdicts in this case were rendered, at a sales price of approximately one-half of what the buyer was able to mortgage the properties for. Encore records from when Trask was an employee indicate he had three bank and/or brokerage accounts. Only a receiver can effectively preserve the net rental and investment income from these assets and preserve them so that they are available to apply to the Judgment.

10. Plaintiff seeks for the Court to appoint L. Walt Tollison, III, Esq., as receiver for Trask.

CONCLUSIONS OF LAW

1. The foregoing Findings of Fact are denominated Conclusions of Law to the extent that they constitute the same.

2. The Judgment was granted in favor of Encore and has not been satisfied.

3. A receiver may be appointed after judgment to carry the judgment into effect. See S.C. Code Ann. § 15-65-10(2).

4. A receiver may be appointed after judgment to preserve the judgment debtor's property during the pendency of an appeal. See S.C. Code Ann. § 15-65-10(3).

5. A receiver may be appointed after judgment when an execution has been returned unsatisfied and the judgment debtor refuses to apply his property in satisfaction of the judgment. See S.C. Code Ann. § 15-65-10(3).

6. A receiver may be appointed to receive any distributions due to or to become due to the judgment debtor from a limited liability company in which the judgment debtor has a membership interest upon application for and the Court's issuance of a chagrining order placing a lien on a judgment creditor's distributional interest. See S.C. Code Ann. § 33-44-504(a). Likewise, a receiver may receive other payments due a judgment debtor and "stands in the shoes of the debtor with respect to property of the latter and the appointment of a receiver will not change any existing contractual relation or right of action thereon.;" ~~as well as his "contractual relation[s]."~~ Jeffcoat v. Morris, 300 S.C. 526, 389 S.E.2d 526 (Ct. App. 1989), overruled on other grounds by United Carolina Bank v. Caroprop, Ltd., 316 S.C. 1, 4 (1994).

7. South Carolina law allows for the appointment of a Receiver under the facts of this case.

8. The Court concludes that Encore is entitled to the appointment of a receiver in order to ascertain by investigation and to take possession of and secure non-exempt assets ~~and income~~ of Trask until the appeal is resolved.

NOW, THEREFORE, based upon the foregoing findings of fact and the conclusions of law, IT IS THEREFORE ORDERED that:

1. L. Walt Tollison, III, Esq. ("TOLLISON") is hereby appointed as Receiver to ascertain by investigation and to take possession of and secure non-exempt assets ~~and income~~ of Trask until their appeal of the Judgment is resolved.

2. Within ~~ten~~ fifteen (15~~0~~) business days following the entry of this Order, and on an ongoing basis as long as this Order remains in effect, Trask shall surrender and deliver possession to TOLLISON all of the non-exempt assets, property, and records relating to those assets, property, and non-exempt income that he may possess, own or control, directly or indirectly, legally or equitably, including but not limited to all shares of stock of Clear Touch Interactive, Inc., f/k/a Clear Touch Interactive, LLC ("Clear Touch") owned by Trask, ~~and all~~

Commented [JS4]: Insertion to make clear the Receiver's ability to receive an LLC member's distributions requires application for and issuance of a charging order under the statute and is not a power the Court can simply give a Receiver.

Commented [JS5]: Edit incorporating actual quote rather than snippets.

Commented [JS6]: "Income" encompasses exempt earnings –

S.C. Code § 15-39-410 states "The judge may order any property of the judgment debtor, not exempt from execution, in the hands either of himself or any other person or due to the judgment debtor, to be applied toward the satisfaction of the judgment, except that the earnings of the debtor for his personal services cannot be so applied."

"Income" alone would encompass those exempt earnings such as Trask's wages. The deletion is necessary to keep the Receiver from possessing or controlling exempt assets which cannot be utilized to satisfy the Judgment.

Our courts and legislature include a person's wages as "earnings of the debtor for his personal services." See Jarrott v. S.C. Employment Sec. Comm'n,, 290 S.C. 533, 536 (1986); Garrett v. Mutual Ben. Life Ins. Co. of N.J., 239 S.C. 574, 578 (1962); Toner v. S.C. Employment Sec. Comm'n, 2005 WL 7083464 at * 3-4 (Bankr. D.S.C. 1999); S.C. Code § 41-27-380. All these authorities put wages under the umbrella of earnings for personal services, along with other compensation outside normal wages such as commission payments and bonuses.

Commented [JS7]: Same comment as immediately above. This violates the clear statutory exemption for earnings of the debtor for personal services.

~~assets of Trask in Clear Touch~~, all records of Clear Touch that relate to or may lead to the discovery of assets, property, and income of Trask, and all assets and property that Trask hereafter receives or acquires, directly or indirectly, legally or equitably, while the Order is in effect (all of the foregoing herein referred to as the "Property"), with the exception of property, assets, and income that is exempt from execution or levy for the purpose of satisfying the Judgment against Trask (for example, the homestead exemption; see S.C. Code § 15-41-10 et. seq.) ("Exempt Property") and records related to such Exempt Property. As to such Exempt Property, Trask shall not dispose of or encumber such property beyond the statutory amount of the applicable exemption pertaining to such Exempt Property. ~~If such property is already encumbered such that the owner's equity in the property is less than the amount of the exemption, the owner shall not further encumber or dispose of the property.~~ All documents of Clear Touch shall be produced subject to the Confidentiality Order in this case, which the Receiver shall acknowledge he has read and will follow.

3. Effective as of and from the date of the entry of this Order, all funds or other Pproperty that are received by Trask, except for Exempt Property, shall be delivered to the Receiver and deposited with a bank of Receiver's choice or otherwise secured by Receiver pending resolution of Trask's appeal.

4. ~~The evidence presented at trial indicated that the regular, historical salary Trask has received from Encore and Clear Touch is approximately $200,000.00 per year, see Plaintiff's Exhibits 10.G and 10.I (showing Trask's wages of $190,512 in 2013) and 10.J (showing Trask's wages from Clear Touch of $163,496 in 2015), which shall be the amount of Trask's exempt earnings (the "Exempt Earnings"). The Exempt Earnings shall not include commissions or bonuses based upon Clear Touch's performance as opposed to Trask's personal services to Clear~~

Commented [JS8]: Clear Touch is 100% owned by an IRA of which Trask is a beneficiary. Due to the ownership structure and applicable law, Clear Touch assets cannot be controlled by the Receiver or utilized to satisfy the Judgment against Trask.

S.C. Code § 15-41-30(A)(13) exempts from attachment, levy, and sale under any mesne or final process issued by a court "The debtor's right to receive individual retirement accounts as described in Sections 408(a) and 408A of the Internal Revenue Code, individual retirement annuities as described in Section 408(b) of the Internal Revenue Code, and accounts established as part of a trust described in Section 408(c) of the Internal Revenue Code. A claimed exemption may be reduced or eliminated by the amount of a fraudulent conveyance into the individual retirement account or other plan. For purposes of this item, "Internal Revenue Code" has the meaning provided in Section 12-6-40(A). The interest of an individual under a retirement plan shall be exempt from creditor process and is an exception to Section 15-41-35. The exemption provided by this section shall be available whether such individual has an interest in the retirement plan as a participant, beneficiary, contingent annuitant, alternate payee, or otherwise." This includes any assets in or owned by the IRA that owns Clear Touch and of which Trask is a beneficiary.

Clear Touch has paid the judgment against it in full into the Court and therefore the Receiver has not legal ground or reason to possess or control the company's assets.

Formatted: Font: Italic

Commented [JS9]: Cannot prohibit encumbering Exempt Property below or up to the amount of the applicable statutory exemption.

Commented [JS10]: Attempt to posses and control exempt assets in the form of Trask's earnings in violation of § 15-39-410.

Touch. See In re Davis, 1999 WL 33486078, *3 (Bankr. D.S.C. May 28, 1999) ("earnings for personal services are to be distinguished from the proceeds of a business carried on by the debtor, the legislative intent being to protect the fruit of someone's labor for the benefit of his family, rather than income derived from passive sources, such as investment income or return on capital."); Mathews v. Mathews, 207 S.C. 170, 35 S.E.2d 157 (1945) (indicating that "earnings of the debtor for his personal services" are limited to wages and ordinary salaries necessary for the use of a family supported wholly or partly by his labor). The Exempt Earnings shall be deposited in a separate account controlled by Trask but for which the Receiver shall receive monthly statements from the bank and be a co-signer (the "Exempt Earnings Account"). Any amounts accumulated in the Exempt Earnings Account above the $5,000.00 amount set forth in S.C. Code Ann. § 15-41-30(A)(5), and any other amounts due Trask from Clear Touch, shall be delivered to the Receiver and deposited by him into the bank account referenced in Paragraph 3. Any dispute over such amounts shall be brought promptly to the Court.

5. The Receiver will be and hereby is authorized and directed to take immediate possession of Trask's assets and to exercise full control over Trask's assets, except for Exempt Property, provided that Receiver shall not sell or dispose of such assets until further order of this Court, and the Receiver in so doing will have all powers generally available to Receivers under the laws of the State of South Carolina, and will have, among others, the following specific powers:

(a) The power and authority to take possession of property owned ~~or leased~~ by Trask. All parties in possession of any such property are to surrender it to the Receiver upon demand. This property shall include, but not be limited to the following;

i Real Property

ii Goods

Commented [JS11]: Inapplicable law and misstatement of law.

Commission and bonus payments to debtor are encompassed in the exemption for "the earnings of the debtor for his personal services" which are statutorily prohibited from being used to satisfy a judgment under § 15-39-410. This language violates the law by empowering the Receiver to posses and control exempt assets based upon inapplicable case law cited for a proposition for which it does not stand. The case law cited addresses "passive income" (investment income) that is not connected to earnings a debtor receives for his personal services. Earnings for personal services include bonus and commission payments which are exempt from use to satisfy a judgment under S.C. Code § 15-39-410.

Attempt to have Receiver possess and control Trask's commission and bonus payments in violation of § 15-39-410.

Commented [JS12]: Receiver has no grounds to oversee, posses, or control any exempt assets.

Commented [JS13]: Violates law by empowering Receiver to control exempt assets.

Receiver cannot control exempt assets

Statutory section cited is inapplicable. § 15-41-30(A)(5) affords a debtor a $5,000 exemption for his "interest in cash and other liquid assets." Under that section "The term 'liquid assets' includes deposits, securities, notes, drafts, unpaid earnings not otherwise exempt...." Again, these earnings are exempt and the Receiver controlling them a violation of the law.

Josh,
We made the one change regarding the length of the continuance (although it was four weeks, not three, as we have noted with the dates). We think the references to mandatory counterclaims and the logical relationship to this case were implied by the Judge's rulings, so are leaving those.
Thanks, Greg

Judge McIntosh,

Clear Touch submitted the attached redline to Encore's proposed order to Encore. Encore's response is attached which we received a minute before they forwarded the proposed order to the Court.

We do not agree with the proposal sent as Encore chose to only make the requested changes "they believed were warranted." As you see from the attached email and redline, Encore has submitted an order to the Court with findings it did not make on grounds never mentioned during the hearing or in the Court's Orders. There are two specific revisions that Encore did not adopt both appear on page 2 of the redline. The most troublesome is the statement concerning mandatory counterclaims under Rule 13. The Court did not make this ruling at the hearing or in its Orders. Neither mandatory counterclaims nor Rule 13 were ever mentioned at the hearing or in the Court's rulings so we believe it is not appropriate for Encore to insert that substantive ground into a proposed order and seek to have the Court adopt it.

Therefore, Clear Touch asks the Court adopt an order reflecting its actual ruling on the grounds raised at the hearing and reflected in its orders by at least striking the language concerning mandatory counterclaims under Rule 13.

Thank you for you consideration of this request.

Subject: Clear Touch v Encore - Form 4 Order issued Today

Judge McIntosh,

We received the attached Form 4 Order issued on the motions heard yesterday. I am writing because it does not address Clear Touch's motion to dismiss Encore's contract counterclaims based on the Reseller Agreement. That was before the Court and we would greatly appreciate some clarity on the Court's ruling on Encore's contract counterclaims. I appreciate your time and consideration of this request.

Best Regards,

Joseph O. "Josh" Smith
